Chest Opens Intensive $887,000 Drive Today

All Information Media to Be Used For 8 Days in Push To $4.2 Million

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Washington's Community Chest today opens the most intensive fund-raising campaign ever staged here—an eight-day "emergency drive" for $887,000.

The $887,000 must be obtained for the Chest to realize its 1951 quota of $4,260,000.

The Korean crisis, Chest leaders emphasized yesterday, makes success of the drive imperative. The goal this year was originally set at $4,100,000. But it was increased to $4,260,000 last September to insure a special fund "for the armed forces and other services related to the emergency."

All media of information have mobilized behind the campaign.

Radio and television stations have volunteered to carry 3000 "emergency drive" spot announcements daily. Newspapers will conduct equally intensive coverage.

The key to the campaign is a telephone number—Metropolitan 6262—at which pledges for gifts will be taken.

Three hundred telephone operators, each donating six hours on a day off, will handle the calls. All are members of Washington Traffic Division 50, Communications Workers of America.

The calls, in turn, will be referred to the volunteer Chest solicitors to make the actual collections.

The aim is to reach an estimated 100,000 Washington area residents, who for one reason or another have been missed by the Chest.

The clergy of every faith today will begin making "emergency drive" appeals to their congregations. Even menus will carry the key campaign slogan—"Please Add Another Person to Your Christmas List."

Featured Post Writers To Man Switchboard

Seven featured writers for The Washington Post will answer MEtropolitan 6262 calls during the emergency drive's eight days.

Leadoff man — 9 a.m. to noon today — will be Bill Gold, who writes the "District Line" column. Cooking and "Ask Anne" editor, Lucia Brown, will have the same hours Monday. Details on Page 19.

Maybe It Was Kilroy, Sheriff; Or a Houdini Pupil

SNOW HILL, Md., Dec. 9 (AP).—Sheriff Arthur Duer would like to question Charles Louis Thornton further about some bad check charges.

But most of all, the sheriff wants to find out exactly how the 30-year-old Pennsylvanian broke out of the Worcester County jail last night.

The cell door was firmly locked. All bars and other barriers were intact. The only evidence that Thornton had ever been there was some bed linen and clothing bunched up and made to appear that a man was lying on the cell cot.

Post Ad Brings Overflow Response

"Your paper is the best in town for classified advertising," says Mrs. Eva King. And Mrs. King speaks from experience, because she has sold many miscellaneous items through Post want ads.

Last Monday she ran a three line ad to rent two furnished rooms. The response was so great that she was able to rent both rooms, and send the overflow to a neighbor who had a vacancy.

If you have a room, an apartment or a house to rent, follow Mrs. King's example, and place a classified ad in The Washington Post. All it takes is a call to NAtional 4200.

To Locker Thieves

Texans Trim Georgia But Lose $672

A thief got into the locker room of the Texas A. & M. football team during yesterday's Presidential Cup game at Byrd Staduim, University of Maryland, and rifled the players' wallets of $672.

But Dr. M. Tom Harrington, president of the college, and Rep. Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) reimbursed the boys so the team could see Washington.

A spokesman from Texas said Harrington and Teague hope either the players or the American Legion, game sponsors, will pay back the money.

Texas players may have lost the money, but they took the game from Georgia, 40-20.

Police Chief Daniel B. Wiseman of the University of Maryland police said the thief must have walked into the locker room during the half-time since the locker facilities were either occupied or thoroughly guarded the rest of the time.

Of the 42-man squad, 32 suffered losses ranging from $5 to $45. Two of the 32 lost their wallets as well; the other 30 wallets were simply stripped of money. No jewelry was taken, police reported.

Texas A. & M. players were fuming when they discovered their loss. One said:

"We've traveled all over the country and this is the first time anybody did a lousy thing like this to us."

One team member, Guard Murry Holditch, tucked $100 into a shoe.

GOP Eases Move to Oust Sec. Acheson

Republican Leaders Adopt Dewey Stand Against Disunity Now

By The Associated Press

Some Senate Republicans backed away last night from a proposed demand for the replacement of Secretary of State Acheson.

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.), author of such a resolution, told reporters that, while he still believes Acheson should go, "I certainly don't want to force any action that will occasion disunity."

Ives spoke up after Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, the 1948 GOP presidential nominee, said that with the United States in a state of emergency, "this moment is not the time for further criticism" of Administration handling of foreign affairs.

The New York Senator indicated that a Senate Republican policy subcommittee he heads may draft his resolution next week to eliminate the demand for Acheson's ouster. Ives said the committee might decide, instead, to blend criticism of the Administration's policies with a call for an affirmative program behind which the two major parties could unite.

Senator Thye (R., Minn.) said it is his personal feeling that Acheson has lost the confidence of the country and ought to step out. But he added that the reaction abroad to any formal resolution calling for the secretary's removal is something that must be considered by the Republicans.

Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) said that while he can't go all the way with Dewey's no-criticism statement, he doubts it is wise for the Republicans to go on record formally at this time with a resolution such as Ives had proposed.

Aiken said, however, that if the GOP policy subcommittee were to place the ouster resolution before the caucus of all Republicans, he has no doubt that it would be approved overwhelmingly. He said Senate Republicans seem to be generally agreed that Acheson's usefulness has been impaired because the country no longer has confidence in him.

President Truman has stuck squarely behind his Secretary of State. Democrats in a position to know have denied rumors that Acheson might be replaced in the immediate future.

Early Draft Faces Million College Men

Deferments to June May Be Cut Back To February Because Of Manpower Needs

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

College students, given a blanket "postponement of induction" until next June, will be the first group of draft eligibles to feel the impact of the speedup in mobilization.

An estimated one million male students, between the ages of 19 and 26, have enjoyed a liberal deferment policy which required that they maintain scholastic standing in the upper half of their class.

However, as a result of the President's recent decision to raise a 2,771,000-man military force by spring, the students may lose their temporary deferments as early as February, at the end of the first term.

The Selective Service System decided on granting "postponement of induction" to all college students in accordance with the wishes of Congress that students be treated as liberally as possible in the matter of the draft. Any change in the students' status is very likely to come from Congress which is due to make a number of changes in the draft law so as to adapt selective service to the present day crisis.

Main question for Congress to determine will be the number of students to be deferred—if any.

Several proposals have been made in recent weeks.

One group of educators, led by Harvard's President James B. Conant, would grant no college student deferments. Specifically, Dr. Conant would have all youths serve two years before starting a college career. Along this line, the Association of American Universities would have all teen-age youths undergo military training and service before embarking on college-level studies.

A second approach to the student problem calls for deferment of the brightest and most promising students, selected on the basis of a national test. This approach has been suggested by six advisory committees of Selective Service and has been supported in principle by the American Council on Education.

The six committees, which banded together on the student problem under the chairmanship of Dr. M. H. Trytten of the National Research Council, would use the student deferment screening test on a flexible basis, raising the standards to meet increased demands for military manpower.

The Trytten committee will meet here December 18 to discuss its approach to the student problem before some 200 national leaders in education, industry, business, labor and journalism.

Connally of Texas Remains True to Lone Star State

When Texas' Senator Tom Connally roots for a Texas football team, he sits on its side of the field.

Placed in a box on the Georgia side of Byrd Stadium at yesterday's President's Cup game, the Texas legislator yelled almost loud enough to be heard back in the Lone Star State to get a seat across the gridiron among the Texas A. & M. rooters.

Heeding the senatorial outburst, Daniel B. Wiseman, chief of the University of Maryland campus police, summoned a scout car to drive the Texan across the field—where there are no box seats.

Bill Asks Government Control Of All Rain-Making Activities

NYHT News Service

A bill giving the Federal Government control of all rain-making operations in the United States and providing for development of weather control as a military weapon was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.).

The bill, vesting authority in a weather control commission, is patterned after legislation creating the Atomic Energy Commission—and Anderson said it may be of equal import to the Nation.

"It is probable," he said, "that economic benefits may be released much sooner than in the case of atomic energy. I am not so sure, either, that weather modification and control are not closely related, at least from the standpoint of national security, to the utilization of atomic energy as a military weapon."

Anderson said rain-making without proper scientific controls "may cause catastrophic droughts, storms, floods and other phenomena with consequent loss of life and property, injury to navigable streams and other channels of interstate and foreign commerce, injury to water supplies for municipal, irrigation and industrial purposes, and injury to sources of hydroelectric power."

The bill would authorize the armed forces "to engage in activities for weather modification and control as a military operation."

Third Division Troops Link Up With Encircled Gantlet Runners

TOKYO (Sunday), Dec. 10 (AP).—Twenty thousand United States Marines and soldiers, fighting a bloody retreat from Changjin Reservoir, today joined forces with a relieving Army task force striking inland from Korea's east coast.

The combined force still faced a hazardous 39-mile escape drive along a road lined most of the way with Chinese Communist troops to the port of Hungnam.

Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, commander of the United States Tenth Corps, announced in a purposely delayed communique that the retreating First Division Marines and Seventh Division soldiers linked up yesterday with the task force of the United States Third Division.

Bridge Is Restored

Almond added that the two bodies of troops "joined forces" today. He said the announcement was delayed for security reasons.

AP Correspondent Tom Stone said the linkup, made six miles south of Koto, could not be completed until a blown bridge had been repaired.

The linkup was effected at 4:30 p. m. yesterday (2:30 a. m. EST Saturday) by elements of the First Marine Division's First Regiment and the Third Division's task force.

Repair of the blown bridge opened the way for the Marine Division's Fifth and Seventh Regiments and the Thirty-first and Thirty-second Regiments of the Army's Seventh Division to cross the river—unnamed on detail maps— and join the relieving task force.

Cross River Under Fire

The Marines and soldiers thrust slowly through an ice-glazed winding canyon to the river. They fought Chinese Reds by the thousands all the way. The river crossing was under Red fire.

Almond's communique said "close air support by the Marine Air Wing, Navy and Air Forces played a major role in the successful operation."

Marine and Navy planes flew a record 391 sorties yesterday in support of the retreating force.

Over northwestern Korea, Allied warplanes damaged one Russian-built MIG-15 jet fighter and drove off several others in four dogfights Saturday near Sinuiju on the Yalu River boundary between Manchuria and Korea.

American fighters and bombers continued their heavy attacks on Red troop and supply convoys moving south toward the Red capital of Pyongyang. The United States Fifth Air Force reported its pilots killed or wounded more than 1000 Chinese Reds near Pyongyang Friday.

On the western ground front, Allied patrols tested the cutting edge of an 18-division Red force building up for an expected assault on United States Eighth

A-Bomb Defense Rules Circulated . . .

INDIVIDUAL ACTION AIR BURST OF ATOMIC BOMB

BEFORE BURST

If Air Raid Alert or General Quarters is sounded, TAKE PRESCRIBED ACTION. The best defense against an "A" bomb is the same as against HE bombs.

DURING AND AFTER BURST

	1. Take cover, unless under other attack, and stay for 10 seconds after explosion or until heavy debris has stopped falling.	Underground shelters, ships, basements, and slit trenches give good protection. Lie close to wall out of line from possible flying debris. Keep head covered and avoid exposure of bare skin. Never stand in open. Fall flat if no protection is available.
IF AT DUTY STATION	2. RESUME DUTIES, if able	The war won't be over. Get back to work and be ready for orders and instructions (usually General Quarters or Air Raid Alert instructions).
IF NOT AT DUTY STATION	3. HELP OTHERS	Thousands of lives can be saved by prompt aid. Help save lives by helping others. By the time the debris has stopped falling, there is no radiation hazard.
	4. REPORT TO DUTY STATION	Organization is necessary to reduce the effects of the bomb. Report to receive treatment if necessary, and to work to help overall situation.
	5. DON'T PANIC and DON'T SPREAD RUMORS	Rushing aimlessly about will hinder rescue and damage control. Keep your experience to yourself and don't enlarge on what you hear from others.

REMEMBER - THE LARGE CASUALTIES IN JAPAN RESULTED FROM FAILURE TO PROVIDE AIR RAID WARNING AND FROM LACK OF ORGANIZATION

GPO 1950 O—908890

EFFECTS AIR BURST* OF ATOMIC BOMB

BLAST	SUDDEN SHOCK	Shock pressure from burst not enough to kill. Flying debris causes almost all injuries.
HEAT	1. "FLASH" HEAT (first few seconds)	Burns on exposed skin occur out to two miles. Light-colored clothes or any shielding substance afford protection. Keep your shirt on.
	3. FIRES	Flash heat starts forest and brush fires. Many fires started by stoves, short-circuits, etc. Broken power lines on ships start electrical fires. (Fight these fires in normal manner.)
RADIATION	1. "FLASH" RADIATION	50% of radiation occurs in the first second. 80% in first 10 seconds, all in first 90 seconds. Fall or dive fast to place as much material as possible between you and blast. In most cases if you are not wounded or burned, you need not worry about radiation.
	2. LINGERING RADIATION (from deposited bomb material)	So small it is not a hazard. Disregard it.

*Bombs will probably be exploded high in the air. Surface or sub-surface bursts may reduce blast and heat effects and increase lingering radiation. (This is serious but can be handled by proper care. Most ships or vehicles can avoid by maneuvering)

Pentagon Gets Anti-A-Bomb Instructions

Wallet-Sized Cards List Explosion Effects, Tell What to Do

Distribution of a wallet-sized instruction card on the effects of an atomic bomb air burst and how to protect oneself has been started at the Pentagon.

A civil defense spokesman yesterday said military officials plan to distribute the cards throughout the armed forces. James J. Wadsworth, acting deputy director of the Civil Defense Administration, said a similar card probably would be prepared for Government civilian employes.

The card gives these instructions in case of a bombing: (1) Take cover, in underground shelter if available. If you're in the open, fall flat. (2) Stay put for 10 seconds after the blast. Then, if you're on duty, resume your work—"The war won't be over." (3) If you're not at your duty station, go there after you have helped others as much as you can. (4) Don't panic or start rumors.

On the other side of the card are listed the effects of an A-bomb burst: (1) Shock—not enough to kill; most injuries come from flying debris; (2) Flash heat of the first few seconds causes burns on exposed skin up to two miles away—keep your skin covered. (3) All flash radiation occurs in the first 90 seconds, and lingering radiation, from deposited

Truman 'Seriously Considers' State of Emergency Declaration

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman is "seriously considering" a declaration of national emergency, Defense Secretary George C. Marshall said yesterday.

Members of the military subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee, before whom Marshall reviewed the need for an 18-billion-dollar supplemental arms fund, echoed his statement and called for immediate "all-out" mobilization.

Subcommittee Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) said he "expects" an early declaration of emergency. He criticized "a lack of public realization that today we don't have a 50-50 chance of winning this contest" with world communism.

At the White House reporters were told there had been no change in the situation regarding a declaration of emergency since last Thursday. At that time Acting Press Secretary Sephen T. Early said the matter had been thoroughly discussed but that no action was imminent.

Just how sweeping such a declaration might be, General Marshall did not indicate. But Senators demanded action all the way from "selective controls" to full-scale mobilization.

Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) told reporters "the time is already past for all-out mobilization."

"The Defense Department doesn't seem to have made up its mind," he declared. "But we can't continue the present peacetime production program and economy and meet the imperative challenge of the military situation."

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) said "we ought to have selective controls and a declaration of emergency. We should work toward total mobilization." He did not enlarge on the meaning of "selective" controls except to mention prices and priorities.

A national emergency "is already here," said Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.). A declaration of emergency, he added, would be "really a recognition of fact."

Several members of the subcommittee told reporters Marshall had expressed doubt that

Mao Reported Ready to Open Talks on Korea

Equality With West At Parley, Formosa on Agenda Among Terms

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP).—The New York Times tonight quoted reliable diplomatic sources at Lake Success as saying Chinese Communist leader Mao Tze-tung has informed India that China is ready to negotiate with the West on Korea on the basis of full equality at the conference table.

Mao also was reported to have insisted that any discussions with the West take up all the major Far Eastern questions, which would include Formosa.

The informants told the Times that Mao's terms were given to the Indian Ambassador in Peiping, Sardar K. M. Panikkar. The envoy reportedly was told by Mao that Red China maintains its position that the case of Korea cannot be isolated, but must be considered along with Formosa and other Far Eastern controversies.

Mao was said to have included the Soviet Union as one of the powers he expects to be represented at any talks Red China might have with the United States and Britain.

Mao was said to have stressed to Panikkar that he expects the Chinese Red regime, in any discussions with the West, not only to have a full and equal voice with the other powers but also to be treated as the government of China.

Diplomats at Lake Success were said not to be optimistic over the conditions that Mao reportedly laid down.

Congress Held Culpable

Wool Scarcity for U. S. Troops Is Blamed on Munitions Board

Because of the Munitions Board's "folly," the United States faces a dangerous wool shortage, a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee charged yesterday.

In a report on "Agricultural Products and the Mobilization Program," the preparedness subcommittee said rapid mobilization at this time might result in "inadequately clad troops." The report charged:

"Today, in the United States—faced with the prospect of a long winter campaign in Korea and the maintenance of a three-million-man armed force—has no wool in a stockpile, no wool in inventory, and less than enough wool in prospect through our domestic production . . .

"While the Munitions Board was obviously doing plenty of 'wool gathering,' none of it was for a stockpile."

The Munitions Board had explained to the subcommittee that it had no funds to buy wool and Congress failed to give it authority to acquire wool from earlier surpluses.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.), made it clear that the omissions it criticized all took place before J. D. Small became chairman of the Board last November 16. He succeeded Hubert E. Howard, who resigned September 18.

Contained in the report was the Munitions Board's formal reply to the subcommittee's charges. The Board explained that in 1947 it asked Congress to authorize the Commodity Credit Corporation to transfer to its stockpile some of the billion pounds of wool then in its inventory. This, it said, Congress failed to do.

Its decision not to buy any of the surplus wool, the Board said, was based on three principal factors:

1. Advice that no foreseeable shortage existed and that, in fact, a 13-year surplus was then on hand.

2. Wool held by the CCC was valued at 2½ times the Munitions Board's entire stockpile funds for two years.

3. Limitations on funds made it necessary to concentrate on more essential materials.

To this the subcommittee replied:

"There is no real excuse for the wool shortage we are now facing. The Munitions Board was established to protect us against just such situations. If they did not have the funds to secure the wool we should have, the Munitions Board should have fought for those funds and made an aggressive effort to fulfill the board's responsibility."

The need, declared the report, is for "more courage and more initiative in some high places."

Pledges 'No Appeasement'

U. S. Couldn't Legally Veto On Red China, Acheson Says

Secretary of State Acheson reportedly told Congress yesterday that the United States can't legally use the veto to keep Red China out of the United Nations.

The Secretary of State reviewed the Truman-Attlee conferences, with special emphasis on the Far Eastern crisis, in a closed-door session with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee sat in on the meeting, which produced a statement saying Acheson pledged an "unwavering stand against aggression and imperialism in the East as in the West."

Lawmakers who attended the meeting said Acheson told them this Government will make every effort to prevent U. N. recognition of the Chinese Communists but is not in a position to back its stand with a veto.

The Secretary explained, these members said, that while a veto can be used to block the original admission of a country to membership, there is no provision for using the veto to decide which representatives of that country shall be seated.

China already is a member of the U. N. Security Council and is represented by Chinese Nationalists. The Chinese Reds, with all-out Russian backing, are demanding that their delegates replace the Nationalist delegates of Gen-

Rejected Terms Revived, Says Vishinsky; Lie Sees China Envoy

LAKE SUCCESS, Dec. 9 (AP).—India's Sir Benegal Rau today said the Chinese Communist government has indicated a desire to end the fighting in Korea "as early as possible."

But Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky told the U. N.'s 60-nation political committee that the terms for ending the war are the same as those previously rejected by the U. N.—withdrawal of all foreign forces from Korea. By foreign forces Vishinsky means the U. N. troops and not the Red Chinese "volunteers."

Last night Chinese Red Delegate Gen. Wu Hsiu-chuan telephoned Secretary General Trygve Lie and asked him to come to his Waldorf-Astoria apartment. Lie arrived at p. m. today and the two were closeted for an hour. No statement was issued immediately.

Observers attached unusual importance to the meeting because it was made on Wu's initiative. This is the first time he has done this and there was speculation that he wanted to hand Lie an official communication from the Peiping regime.

Reached by telephone at his Forest Hills home later, Lie refused to answer when asked if Wu had received his government's answer to U. N. peace overtures.

"I cannot tell you anything," he said.

The United Nations later issued a statement saying Lie and Wu discussed "general matters and practical questions." Officials said no further comment would be forthcoming and "the lid was on."

Rau, India's top U. N. delegate, told reporters Gen. Wu assured him at a conference today the Peiping government "is giving careful consideration" to the appeal by 13 Asiatic and Middle East nations to halt the Chinese forces at the 38th parallel.

Rau went into a huddle with the 13-nation representatives immediately after he arrived at Lake Success from his hour-long Manhattan conference with Gen. Wu. He then issued a brief statement:

"The 13 sponsoring delegations met again this afternoon. They reviewed the situation in the light of further information available

'Sabotage' of U. S. Transport Held Act of 'Crackpot'

SEATTLE, Dec. 9 (AP).—Military officials said today that damage to a naval transport in Seattle harbor, first reported by the Navy to be full-scale sabotage, was evidently the work of a "malicious crackpot."

Damage to the vessel—the 12,000-ton Marine Phoenix—totaled only $200.

Authorities said five electric motors aboard the ship had been damaged with a spike or ice pick thrust into armature wires.

They said it was apparently a "grudge" job by someone who "wanted to make sure the damage would have to be repaired."

The Marine Phoenix was docked in Seattle after running troops and supplies to Korea. The destruction was believed to have been done while the vessel was undergoing repairs here.

No arrests have been made.

"Most of our Civil Service employes have long and satisfactory careers with the Government," an official said, "and are a patriotic group of citizens."

He pointed out that the ship was activated hurriedly after the outbreak of the Korean fighting and was sent to sea with a quickly assembled crew.

In announcing the destruction last night, Navy authorities said they believed the work to be that of a saboteur. It was believed to be the first case of sabotage in the United States since the Korean outbreak. At that time the damage was described by the Navy as "extensive."

Dead Left Behind In Hagaru Trap

By Marguerite Higgins

WITH UNITED STATES FIRST MARINES, Dec. 9 (NYHT).—The Chinese Communists who surround the American Marines cracked slightly today as the Marines fought their way down perilously narrow and steep canyon roads to within some hundreds of yards of a task force struggling toward them.

Safety for the hard-pressed Marines who have been encircled since November 28 still depends on a frantic race for time against the Reds. The enemy is currently reported flocking down mountain trails in a wide flanking movement apparently aimed at cutting the escape road to the sea only a few miles inland from the Hamhung-Hungnam port area. This would cut off not only the Marines but also United States Third Infantry Division units now linking up with them.

Trucks Wind Down Mountain

A Chinese roadblock set up at Sudong a point about a third of the way between the Marines and the sea was a warning of things to come. Army troops guarding the main road were still blasting the roadblock late this afternoon.

The main convoy began rolling out of the snow-drenched village of Koto soon after midday. Trucks winding down the mountain toward the valley below bulged over the narrow cliff-edged road.

There was elation in the voice of a Marine major as he came into the command post at Koto to report to Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Smith, First Marine Division commander. "The bridge will be repaired in an hour, sir, and the vehicles can start to roll." His eagerness to get going echoed the hope of most of the Marines that this would be the last lap in the breakout attempt which has been going on for two weeks.

Planes Comb Ridges

The bridge in question was built entirely of spans air-dropped by huge Flying Boxcar planes. The Marines put it together in six hours, working much of the time under small arms fire. The bridge connected a critical part of the mountain road. The Marines yesterday stormed and seized the high ridges dominating the first few miles of the precipitous road.

The vehicle convoy ran into trouble early. It had to batter its way past machineguns entrenched in bunkers and other roadblocks.

A crystal cold day with sharp blue skies made it possible for Marine fighter planes to comb the ridges. The planes strafed the enemy columns moving over the mountain roads at close range.

C-47s streaming into the bulldozed airstrip at Koto managed by 4 p. m. to evacuate all the American wounded including ambulatory and frostbite cases. A Chinese Communist machinegun attack at the north end of the strip made it look for a while as if the last plane would not get off. Marine tank and air power however silenced the enemy guns in short order.

Dead Stay Behind

The dead had to stay behind. The bodies of Marines, infantrymen of the Army Thirty-first Regiment and British Marine commandos were placed in three mass graves hacked out of the icy ground. There was time in the first few days to affix crosses to the graves, and besides there were only a few. But a new influx of dead was brought in when the Fifth and Seventh Marine Regiments arrived after their ordeal at the Changjin reservoir. A large Marine bulldozer swept the frozen earth over the bodies and a small red pole stuck in the ground was the only mark on the spot.

Frostbite from which the Americans have suffered appears to have done even more to the Chinese. Since they wear only thin tennis shoes it was not surprising to find hundreds of Chinese Reds in the prisoner stockade whose feet were black with frostbite.

Yesterday thousands of farmers from the surrounding mountains came into Koto and begged the Marines to take them along. They said they feared the Chinese. The Marines refused but the farmers bringing their families with them came stubbornly to the plateau town and sat in the snow all night and day. The Marines finally said the refugees could trail along if they kept a good distance behind the column.

An exception was made for one Korean family—that of the mayor of Hagaru, the town at the southern end of the Changjin reservoir where the Marines made their first breakout. The mayor who had told the Marines in detail of the Communists' positions begged to be taken along and the grateful Marines cheerfully granted him their escort.

Breakout Column Links Up With Third Infantry Division Rescuers

When this onslaught might come was not known on the Allied side of the line, but tension increased in the south.

Many Korean civilians fled from Seoul, 25 miles south of the Eighth Army front, for points farther south. Three American commercial planes were diverted from regular schedules to evacuate important American and other foreign civilians from Seoul.

The gravest threat to the Allied position in Korea at the moment was in the northeast.

Rumors of plans for a mass evacuation through Hungnam spread along the hard-pressed Allied line. Allied authorities neither confirmed nor denied this.

General Almond, however, confirmed abandonment of the port of Wonsan, to the south, saying two ports were no longer needed and Hungnam was the better. He said concentration in Hungnam would put his troops in better position "to kill off these birds."

Ships of the United Nations fleet stood off Hungnam.

Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy, commander of the fleet, told a new conference the fleet was "ready for any eventuality" but that it was there primarily to support and supply land forces in Hungnam and the industrial city of Hamhung, a short distance inland.

Joy and other top commanders conferred in Hungnam.

The weather cleared Saturday and Allied warplanes roared to the aid of the column trapped between Koto and Hungnam. The improved weather also gave the column a better chance to use its own artillary against Reds in all positions along the escape route.

The trapped men began to hear the welcome booming of artillery from the United States Third Division, striking up from the south to meet them.

Yet a dangerous new threat to the breakout column was in the making.

AP Correspondent Stan Swinton reported from Tenth Corps headquarters that four or more Chinese divisions, some 32,000 to 40,000 men, were striking swiftly to set up a great new roadblock across the Allied path to the sea.

These fresh Red forces were reported earlier paralleling the escape road. They apparently were trying to close a second trap on the already snared Americans.

There was no word from other thousands of Allied troops cut off by Reds far to the north.

These included the Seventeenth Regimental Combat Team of the United States Seventh Division, which once was on the Manchurian-Korean border at Hyesanjin, and elements of the South Korean Third and Capital Divisions, once within 40 miles of the Siberian-Korean border.

It appeared that news coverage of the war would become more closely confined to official reports, at least temporarily.

General MacArthur's headquarters suspended briefings for war correspondents, one of the basic sources of war news.

There was no change, however, in the no-censorship regulations under which correspondents have operated from the start of the war.

The Chinese Reds broadcast a claim from Peiping that they had killed or captured 23,700 Allied troops since they turned back General MacArthur's end-the-war offensive late last month.

Officers at MacArthur's headquarters declined comment on the broadcast Tass casualty account, saying that often the Reds are only "fishing" for information when they make such statements, trying to trick Allied sources into refuting their figures with correct figures.

Gold Gets 30-Year Prison Term, Against Fuchs' 14, 'To Deter Others' From Treason in U. S.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9 (AP).—Harry Gold, Philadelphia research chemist, today was sentenced to 30 years in prison for admittedly serving as courier for a Russian atomic spy ring during World War II.

Gold previously had pleaded guilty to charges of espionage in wartime and conspiracy to commit espionage in wartime. He was sentenced to a 30-year term on each count, with the terms to run concurrently.

Specifically, he admitted serving as courier between Dr. Klaus Fuchs and a Soviet espionage ring. Fuchs now is serving a 14-year term in a British prison.

Gold's sentence—the maximum allowed by law, short of the death sentence — exceeded the recommendation of the Federal Government for a 25-year term.

Gold, nearly 40, showed little emotion as he was sentenced by United States Federal District Judge James P. McGranery. The chemist's haggard face—he has lost 35 pounds since his arrest May 25—was the sole evidence of the strain under which he has been laboring.

In a solemn statement, Gold told the court he had made a "terrible mistake." But he said he had received the "most scrupulously fair trial and treatment."

"Most certainly," he added, "that never could have happened in the Soviet Union or any of the countries dominated by it."

Judge McGranery said he chose to ignore the sentence recommended, because there is need "to deter others" who might be considering following in Gold's footsteps.

[The Judge also considered the fact, according to the United Press, that the Soviet Union during part of World War II was an ally of the United States, but he noted that "the gravity of the offense is indicated by Congressional authorization to impose the death penalty . . ."]

Federal authorities have said Gold aided by disclosing the names of other members of the Soviet spy ring. He recently testified at the New York trial of two others accused of espionage activity.

Gold's court-named attorneys, John D. M. Hamilton and Augustus Ballard, announced later they would make no attempt to file an appeal. Gold was returned to Holmesburg prison, where he has been held most of the time since his arrest last May 23.

Gold was accused of having been a "go-between" in 1933 carrying relatively unimportant industrial secrets to Russian agents, identified only as "Sam," or "Fred" or "Dick."

Later, in the World War II years from 1941 to 1944, he admitted turning over to Soviet agents vital defense secrets, and, in 1944 and 1945, data on atomic research obtained by Fuchs.

China Eager to End War, Wu Says

and decided to continue their efforts. I saw Gen. Wu this morning. He has indicated his government is giving careful consideration to the appeal which we made and is desirous of bring the fighting to an end as early as possible."

Earlier today the Peiping radio quoted the North Korean Ambassador in the Chinese Communist capital as declaring that Chinese "volunteers," together with the North Koreans, intended to occupy all of Korea.

"Not only Pyongang but the whole of Korea will be liberated," the Ambassador was represented as telling a crowd in front of his Embassy.

Some observers here interpreted the broadcast as a more realistic measure of Chinese intentions than the statements attributed to Wu.

A United States spokesman said the United States delegation will continue to press for early passage by the General Assembly of the six-power resolution calling on the Chinese to withdraw from Korea.

He declined to comment on the moves of the 13 Asiatic countries, but expressed concern lest the Assembly become bogged down with a multitude of moves instead of quickly calling on the Chinese to quit Korea.

Assembly action will not be taken until Monday at the earliest. The political committee adjourned for the weekend shortly after 1 p. m. today after hearing a tirade by Vishinsky against the United States and an appeal by the South Korean representative for a "firm U. N. stand."

The Soviet Foreign Minister ended a speech of one hour and 20 minutes by introducing a resolution embodying the Russian terms for ending the war. Besides the point calling for the withdrawal of the "foreign troops," it calls for the Korean people to be allowed to decide their future alone.

Russia introduced a similar resolution last summer as the terms for ending the war, but the Security Council batted it down. Another Russian move in the Assembly likewise was rejected. That was before the Chinese Communists intervened.

Vishinsky did not mention withdrawal of United States forces from Formosa in today's resolution. This has constantly been a Soviet condition for "restoring peace to the pacific." Observers attached no significance to today's omission, however, pointing out that Formosa is not under discussion now by the committee.

Throughout his speech Vishinsky insisted that the Red Chinese fighters are "volunteers," but he acknowledged they have been integrated into the North Korean Army as military units. The Soviet bloc has been stressing the volunteer angle on the ground that such volunteer fighting is permissible under the Hague convention on neutrality.

Vishinsky dwelt at length on the origins of the Korean war, repeated the Soviet contention that the South Koreans started the war under United States pressure, and accused the United States and Britain of asking other nations to respect the United Nations charter while violating it themselves.

He declared that the United States considered the entire Pacific area to be "their defense moat," while at the same time withholding the right to the Chinese of defending their own borders.

Col. Ben C. Limb, South Korean Foreign Minister, appealed to the U. N. for action, asserting "we have walked for long enough half-blinded in a murky fog."

"Our efforts to pretend that this is a limited war have not prevented the enemy from waging a war of full extermination," he said.

He warned that "the Communist empire cannot be bought off by a weak U. N. surrender in Korea."

Acheson also was quoted as saying a survey indicates 44 U. N. delegations now oppose seating the Chinese Reds, while 16 favor letting them in. Among those in favor is Great Britain.

The Secretary was reported to have told the lawmakers flatly that President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee made no agreements which were not reported in Friday's joint communique.

The statement, issued after yesterday's meeting said Acheson "explained in detail the present status of the defense of the North Atlantic community and indicated the work of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization can now go forward at an increased rate."

The statement, signed by Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) and Senator Wiley (R., Wis.), ranking Republican member, continued:

"One thing that was clear is that the British and American positions are substantially closer together than would have appeared a week ago.

"We are convinced that the cause of the free world has been considerably advanced by the conversations between the President and the Prime Minister.

"The Secretary made clear that the United States is definitely and firmly opposed to any appeasement in the Far East.

"He stressed the need for maintaining the same unwavering stand against aggression and imperialism in the East as in the West."

House Unit to Get A-Bomb Data on Dispersal

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The House Public Works Committee, before acting on the Government dispersal program, will receive expert testimony on the possible effects of an A-bomb attack on the Washington area.

The testimony will be given in secret session, probably this week, it was learned yesterday.

The request for the atomic data was decided upon after several committee members expressed concern at a Friday hearing that scattering Federal agencies over a 20-mile radius from the District, might not be sufficient to avoid a catastrophe.

Chairman William M. Whittington (D., Miss.) said he is not "at liberty to say what officials would present the A-bomb details."

The chairman also indicated he would not push his committee into acting on the 190-million-dollar disperal bill until after the new Congress convenes in January.

"There is no disposition to rush it. I would say we probably will wait until the first of the year," Whittington told The Washington Post.

Four days ago President Truman forwarded the dispersal bill to Congress with a request for action "without delay."

A poll of several committee members yesterday indicated that some kind of a dispersal plan, either this session or early next session, would be favorably reported by the House group.

The plan calls for selection of eight sites in nearby Maryland and Virginia and construction of buildings to house the essential elements of the Federal government.

Representative Paul Cunningham (R., Iowa), summed his view of the committee's reaction to the Friday hearing this way:

"The only difference of opinion is whether we are going out into the country far enough. Maybe the Government agencies should be scattered on a 40-mile radius, or perhaps even farther. That is why we want some data on just how widespread an A-bomb blast might be."

Jess Larson, General Service Administrator, told the committee that a dispersal on a 20-mile radius would give "very considerable protection."

To move Government agencies farther from Washington he explained, would present communications and transportation problem, as well as require construction of housing.

Another committee member, Rep. Clifford Davis (D., Tenn.) said: "I went into this dispersal issue cold and came out after the all-day presentation, feeling pretty definitely that we must approve the program."

Rep. James W. Trimble (D., Ark.) commented: "I guess dispersal is a wide move in view of the possibilities facing us. I shudder at the expense of those buildings, but we shudder at the expense of battleships, too."

West Europe Hails Parley

LONDON, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Clement Attlee will come home early next week to the acclaim of western Europe for helping avert what looked 10 days ago like the curtain-raise to World War III.

Great Britain—and westrn Europe—except for the Communists welcome the results of the Truman-Attlee conference as victory for their "no war with China" policy.

The Attlee-Truman pronouncement had the approval of a near-unanimous section of the statesmen and the press, but there was general realization that only a "brather" had been achieved.

That was underlined by the speed with which Big Three diplomats in Paris agreed to invite the Soviet Union into a Big Four peace conference and the chiefs of staff meeting here Tuesday to polish plans for an Atlantic army under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Attlee will report on his historic trip to Washington when he appears before the House of Commons, probably Thursday.

There was some apprehension here, particularly manifest in the newspapers, that Americans on second thought might believe they have been talked into appeasement in Korea by another Prime Minister seeking "peace in our time."

There is appreciation here that a military catastrophe in Korea, such as failure to get out the Tenth Army Corps on the east coast, still might goad the United States into full-scale war with China.

Diplomatic quarters said British thinking went this way:

There IS a suggestion of appeasement. When the Berlin blockade was underway, the West wouldn't negotiate until it had been lifted. But the Washington communique speaks of being ready to seek an end to hostilities by negotiation even though the Chinese are surging southward.

Negotiation Emphasis

Western diplomats were prompt to stress that the major emphasis in the communique was on negotiation with Red China and the belief that Europe must take precedence over Asia.

Prime Minister Clement Attlee, with French support, went to Washington determined to convert President Truman to the belief that the western world must avoid getting bogged in an Asiatic "sinkhole."

Initial reaction to the communique was that Attlee's views had prevailed. But there was a great deal of reservation about China accepting the olive branch.

The Times of London said flatly the chances of negotiation would be better if the United States would agree to admit Communist China to the United Nations.

The leftist, but non-Communist, Franc-Tireur of Paris, said:

"The moderate British thesis (and that of Europe) has won out . . . From now on it is up to Moscow and Peking to choose between the negotiation which is offered them and the risk which intransigeance or refusal implies."

British, French and Swedish Communist organs denounced the Truman-Attlee proposals as "a worse crime than Munich" and a plot to continue "aggressive war."

Factors for Uplift

Most welcome to Europe were: 1. The promise to build up European defenses quickly; 2. Truman's hope the atom bomb will never again have to be used and his pledge to inform Attlee of any change; 3. Assurances that the United States will not proceed unilaterally against Red China, as had been feared here.

In Rome the Italian government welcomed the decisions taken and said they "will serve the cause of peace."

In Bonn, Germany, West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer said: "I am surprised. The communique says so little. What can I say to that?"

In Moscow, the Literary Gazette in the first Russian reaction dismissed the announced results as a "lacquered communique" which failed to conceal the discord in the western world.

Rhee Sees Korea Abandoned by Parley

SEOUL, Dec. 9 (AP).—President Syngman Rhee said today he was "tremendously disappointed" that the Truman-Attlee conference ended "without a call for complete mobilization of the democratic world to fight against communism."

Rhee criticized what he said was an apparent intent of Truman and Attlee to put Europe in the war against communism. He said:

"It would have been better if the United Nations had not helped us at all if we are to be abandoned now."

Pope's Message Dec. 23

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 9 (AP).—Pope Pius XII will broadcast his usual Christmas message on December 23 instead of on Christmas Eve, it was announced today. On Christmas Eve the Pontiff will be busy with the closing ceremonies of the 1950 Holy Year.

Attlee Opens Ottawa Talks On Defense

OTTAWA, Dec. 9 (AP).—British Prime Minister Attlee flew to Ottawa today for defense talks with Canadian officials in the light of his Washington talks with President Truman on the world crisis. Attlee will address the people of Canada in a nation-wide radio broadcast Sunday.

The British Prime Minister and Canadian Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent held a half-hour private conversation this afternoon, then went into conference with the Canadian Cabinet. They were accompanied to the conference by Field Marshal Sir William Slim, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, and Sir Alexander Clutterbuck, British High Commissioner to Canada.

Attlee talked with Canada's Defense Minister D. L. Claxton during the flight. He had dinner with External Affairs Minister L. B. Pearson and other Commonwealth representatives in New York last night. He will leave Ottawa Monday for Montreal and London.

4 Die, 15 Injured As Blast Levels Cincinnati Plant

CINCINNATI, Dec. 9 (AP).—An explosion today killed four workmen, injured 15 others and scattered the two-story plant of the American Waterproofing Co. into blazing rubble.

The fourth body was found tonight in the smoldering ruins of the plant in Cincinnati's industrial Millcreek Valley area.

The dead were identified tentatively as George Eikens, 31; George Jesse, 36; William McCord, 23; all of Cincinnati, and Porter Gragg, 45, of Sharonville.

Fire Marshal Harry Geselbranzt said the explosion reportedly was caused when naphtha fumes became ignited, but he was unable to say how. The fire department had no damage estimate, but Chairman George R. Reid of the firm's board said the loss may be about $500,000.

Canada Orders Embargo on All Goods Destined for Red China

OTTAWA, Dec. 9 (AP).—Trade Minister C. D. Howe today ordered an embargo on all Canadian goods destined for Red China.

The order applies also to Korea, Hongkong, Manchuria and Macao—all in or near the eastern war area.

The main point of the order is to ban all goods from shipment to the Chinese Communists. Hongkong, a British possession, is a transshipment point for goods going to the Chinese mainland.

Howe said all export permits granted will be recalled "for revalidation."

The embargo is, in a way, a reversal of Government policy. Though Canada has had restrictions on the export of strategic goods to Communist countries, previous policy was to allow normal civilian trade to function.

Canada earlier this year sold China several thousand bushels of flour and even some aluminum—considered strategic—but destined for manufacture into foil for tea packaging.

The new order follows similar action by the United States. For the moment, at least, it ends an export trade that has been declining. In the first six months of 1950, Canada sold China only $1,500,000 worth of goods, as compared with $8,000,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Arlingtonians Ask Planning Bill Revision

An increase in Virginia and Maryland representation on a proposed new National Capital Planning Commission has been asked by the Arlington County Planning Commission.

It seeks an amendment to a bill in Congress by which both political subdivisions and regional planning commissions in the National Capital area of both States would have representatives on the new commission. In the present bill each State would have only a single representative.

Specifically, the Arlington proposal calls for a single representative from each town, city or county, as well as two delegates from each regional commission. This would give Virginia six delegates and Maryland four.

The Arlington group also has asked that the National Capital commission be authorized to spend on Virginia parks an amount "equal to the financial aid already authorized for parks in Maryland."

The proposal for representation asks one more delegate than has been requested by governing bodies in Alexandria, Arlington, Falls Church and Fairfax in previous resolutions.

Spokesman for the Arlington Planning Commission said yesterday a copy of the resolution would be sent to each Senator and Representative from Virginia.

Present Plan for German Troops Seen Doomed

BONN, Dec. 9 (AP).—Authoritative informants here today said western Allied officials in Germany have informed their governments there is no hope for German cooperation in western defense on the basis of present ideas.

These informants said diplomatic dispatches from here to Washington, London and Paris report that all West German political parties are hostile to the so-called Spofford plan for German combat units spread through the divisions of other nations.

The plan takes its name from Charles Spofford, American deputy on the North Atlantic Defense Council.

Diplomats are said to feel that the Bonn government is unlikely to accept the plan even as a basis for negotiation. It is considered by many Germans to fall far short of the equality that the Germans demand and which they appear to have been voting for in giving the Socialists victories in three recent state elections.

What the Germans want, diplomatic informants say, is a real share in common defense, instead of just acting as a provider of foot troops.

There has been no official comment from the West German government, since the details of the plan have not yet been presented to it on an official basis. But from unofficial commentaries and behind-the-hand talk, the government position is pretty well known. It is this:

It is annoyed because it has not been consulted on any of the details and has not been advised in final form of the plan.

From the beginning, the government feels West Germany should have a ministry to organize the contingents and should have representation on the common defense force's general staff.

Absolute equality is regarded as essential to counter expected Communist propoganda that Germans would be fighting as mercenaries.

Atlantic Military Chiefs Meet Tuesday

By the United Press

The military committee of the 12 North Atlantic pact nations will meet in London Tuesday to complete plans for a unified Western European defense force with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as supreme commander.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the pact committee and of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff, called the meeting yesterday. He named Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, to represent him because the Korean situation will not permit him to leave the country.

The military committee will meet just four days after completion of talks between President Truman and British Prime Minister Clement Attlee. Secretary of State Dean Acheson predicted to the Senate and House Foreign Relations Committees that the job of building up Western Europe's military strength now can go forward with "considerably advanced" tempo.

Informed sources said the way appears clear for the pact military committee to approve a compromise solution of German rearmament and then put final approval on plans for a unitern European defense

Mr. Truman was to be ready to answer.

N. Y. Senators Back Mrs. Rosenberg

Anna M. Rosenberg, under fire on Communist front charges, was defended yesterday by New York's two Senators.

Senators Irving M. Ives (R.) and Herbert H. Lehman (D.), issued separate statements praising Mrs. Rosenberg as a woman of competence. Each said past associations with her disclosed no reason to doubt her loyalty.

President Truman, at the request of Defense Secretary Marshal, has nominated Mrs. Rosenberg to be Assistant Secretary of Defense. But an admitted ex-Red insists that he saw her at Communist-front meetings in the mid-1930s.

The Senate Armed Services Committee, which has approved her nomination already, has opened hearings on the charges. Mrs. Rosenberg says the whole matter is a question of mistaken identity.

Lehman described Mrs. Rosenberg as "one of the most capable women I have ever met." He said that in associations wit', her on the New York State War Council during World War II he found her "undefatigable, resourceful and devoted in strengthening the State and the Nation."

"I have always found her completely loyal and deeply devoted to the interests of our country," he said.

Ives, who also served with Mrs. Rosenberg on the New York State War Council, said his connections with Mrs. Rosenberg covered a period of about 10 years. In that time, he said, "I saw nothing whatever which would cause me to doubt her loyalty."

The Rev. William J. Kelly of Catholic University, former chairman of the New York State Labor Relations Board, filed with the committee a statement saying that on 10 years' friendship he knew Mrs. Rosenberg as a "most loyal American citizen."

Atom-Doped Houseflies Map Travels

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Government scientists are doping flies with atomic energy and discovering a lot of things about them they never knew before.

They have determined that four miles a day is apparently a short distance for the average fly to travel. In a week most flies are at least 20 miles from where they were seven days before.

The answer, Department of Agriculture entomologists say, is:

1. An open sewer or other insanitary spot is almost as dangerous to families living four or five miles away as to persons nearby.

2. That fly control, to be successful, must be a community affair, with participation by everybody.

Experiments in Oregon

Experiments with three types or flies were conducted recently by Federal and Oregon State entomologists at the Oregon experimental station near Corvallis, in the Willamette Valley.

The flies were made radioactive by feeding them radioactive phosphorous in molasses and water. A total of 35,000 houseflies, 15,000 green bottle flies and 1000 black blow flies were tagged and released.

Traps were set in a series of circles, a quarter of a mile, half a mile, 1 mile, 2 miles, and 4 miles distant. Tagged specimens of all three tyes were captured in each of the traps within 24 hours.

The next day traps were set out at greater distances, 8, 10, 16 and 20 miles away. Although two days were lost in putting the traps out farther, flies were caught 12 miles away almost at once.

Wasps Got Into Act

At one time the Geiger counters used to identify the radioactive flies started chattering when no flies were near. It was discovered that wasps had eaten enough of the tagged flies to become radioactive themselves.

Five percent of the houseflies and 14 percent of the blow flies were recaptured. One in 11 of all the flies was trapped.

The experiment indicated there were about 1000 houseflies in every square mile of the area—a district considered more free of flies than the average.

Experiments with mosquitoes and other insects, and continued experiments with flies are planned for next year.

Apparently the wind had little effct upon the direction or distance of flight, as almost equal numbers were found in all the traps. The tests also indicate scientists will have trouble in halting the general distribution of flies resistant to DDT and other fly poison now used in fly control. Scientists have discovered that flies develop immunity to DDT in areas where large amounts of that poison are used constantly.

Service's Post in India May Be Filled

The State Department was reported yesterday to be considering canceling the assignment of John Stewart Service to India because of the protracted official investigation of his loyalty.

Service was en route to New Delhi to serve as embassy counselor for political affairs when he was hurriedly recalled last March for renewed questioning by the department's Loyalty and Security Board.

This board's report, understood to have cleared him of any evidence of disloyalty, was sent recently to the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board for a final post-audit.

In view of the eight-month delay which already has occurred and the prospect of a further wait for final action, informants said the department is considering canceling the New Delhi assignment and giving Service another post later. The delay was said to be a handicap to Ambassador Loy Henderson at a time when India is playing an important role in international diplomacy.

Service, veteran foreign service officer, was recalled for the new inquiry after he was named in charges by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.). Investigators previously had declared him cleared.

Basic Price Schedules on Defense Items Predicted Soon; Early 'Freeze' Rumored

By The Associated Press

Some officials predicted last night the Government will issue individual price schedules on basic defense materials within the next month or two, possibly on a voluntary basis.

This type of control, it was indicated, might be tried as a stopgap to help keep inflation from getting out of hand until the Economic Stabilization Agency is prepared to attempt a general price-wage ceiling.

Opinion was divided on whether ESA could act before the beginning of the year. Some officials in the agency, it was known, believed there would not be sufficient staff or administrative machinery to enforce even "selective" controls before February.

But in the meantime influential members of Congress clamored for quick and drastic action, and a completely unconfirmed report persisted in industry circles that the President would announce a price-wage "freeze" today.

The latter report seemed unlikely. The White House press office closed up shop last night with the word there would be no important announcements over the weekend. ESA Administrator Alan Valentine was in New York. His price stabilization director, Michael V. DiSalle, left for Toledo.

Valentine and DiSalle told reporters Friday they are making plans for price control but see no reason for imposing it now. Di Salle said it would take 60 to 90 days to assemble a big enough staff.

Before they left the Capital, Valentine and DiSalle conferred on their scheduled meeting Wednesday with representatives of the automobile industry. ESA asked Ford and General Motors to suspend price increases announced on their 1951 models and urged the rest of the industry to withhold price boosts until the problem can be explored here. Ford and GM refused, but the meeting will be held as planned.

Pontiac Raises Prices $20-$80 on '51 Cars

PONTIAC, Mich., Dec. 9 (AP).—Pontiac Motors' 1951 model autos, to be introduced Monday, will carry price tags $20 to $80 higher than the 1950 models.

Announcing this today the company said the $20 increase will go on the station wagon; a $60 advance on the Catalina or so-called "hardtop" model and $80 increase on other de luxe units. No change is being made in the price of the Hydra-Matic transmission, optional equipment on all models.

Pontiac is the second General Motors division to announce price increases. The increases were decided upon despite the request of the Economic Stabilization Agency (ESA) that GM and Ford cancel the increases until the agency could study the price situation.

Ford already has advanced its car prices from $87.50 on its Ford models, to $165 on its Lincoln Cosmopolitans.

'Emergency' Seen Likely

the public could be brought to realize the "deadly seriousness" of the present situation until the President proclaimed a state of emergency. Asked if he had told the subcommittee such a declaration was imminent, Marshall replied:

"I didn't say that. I said the President was seriously considering a declaration of national emergency."

Top Aides Heard

As for the testimony of Marshall and his aides, subcommittee members generally were noncommittal. They said, and Marshall agreed, that "a great deal of ground" was covered. Senators said the Defense representatives indicated that the 18 billion dollars requested would give them all the money they could efficiently use in view of current objectives.

In addition to General Marshall, the subcommittee heard Deputy Defense Secretary Robert A. Lovett, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations; Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, and Gen. Wade H. Hairslip, Army Vice Chief of Staff.

Actually, the President already has the power, without proclaiming a national emergency, to place most of the national economy under control. This authority rests chiefly in the Selective Service Act and in the Defense Production Act passed last September. Under these two laws he can draft manpower for all national purposes and place controls over prices, wages and production.

An emergency proclamation, including the threat of war, would be necessary, however, to control communications facilities and railroad shipments and to set aside the eight-hour law.

The general feeling in legislative and official circles appeared yesterday to be that the effect of an emergency proclamation would be chiefly psychological. That is, it would tend to impress on the public the gravity of the military situation and the necessity for the sacrifices which are regarded as inevitable even to the limited military expansion now proposed.

High U. S. Secrecy Veils Prisoners Taken in Korea

U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Eighth Army, apparently on orders from higher authority, has wrapped a thick veil of secrecy around war prisoners it has captured.

Eighth Army officers said the number of prisoners, the places they are held, their activities and United Nations plans for them now are "classified"—meaning not available to the public.

One high ranking officer said about the only answer he could give to such questions at the present time was:

"They are being treated according to the Geneva Convention. They (U. N. authorities) are leaning over backwards to see they are well-treated."

Labor Election Costs Half As Much as Either Major Party

Organized labor spent more than half as much as either major political party during the recent elections, according to reports filed with the Clerk of the House.

These reports, compiled by the Congressional Quarterly, show 15 labor organizations reported $1,198,469 of $1,220,101 collected. The same compilation shows 13 Democratic committees reported spending $2,406,104 and 19 Republican organizations reported $2,371,586 spent.

The total of $6,307,970 reported by all types of organizations for the 1950 campaign was less than half the $13,563,878 reported by 144 national organizations during the 1948 presidential election year. The Congressional Quarterly pointed out, however, that in 1949 political organizations reported spending $3,261,525, "most of which was in connection with the 1950 campaign, of course."

Meanwhile, charges of excessive spending for the 1950 campaign are under way in two congressional committees. These are a Senate Elections Subcommittee headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) and a special House Campaign Expenditures Committee of which Representative Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.) is chairman.

Gillette has announced his committee also will look into use of "scurrilous" literature in the campaign.

Mansfield has said his committee would report in January on charges of irregularities in 1950 elections in Ohio, Indiana, New York and Tennessee. His committee will ignore precedent, Mansfield added, to investigate spending in primaries as well as in general elections.

Census Reports District Retail Sales Trebled, Reaching Total of $1,111,643,000 For 1948

The District almost trebled its dollar volume of retail sales between 1939 and 1948, when the total was $1,111,643,000, the Census Bureau announced yesterday.

This was the highlight of the United States Census of Business for the District of Columbia for 1949, a statistical breakdown published every 10 years.

Gross sales of 7094 retail stores in 1948 accounted for the sales volume that exceeded a billion dollars, at an average of $156,700 per store.

Ten years earlier there were 6893 retail stores, doing a business volume of $402,768,000 in the District. Then the average was $58,431 per store.

Auto Business Important

An even more staggering figure is presented by the Census Bureau in its breakdown of retail volume in the 10,188 stores in the Washington metropolitan area, including Alexandria and Falls Church and Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

Each store in this area did $145,843 worth of business, for a total of $1,485,845,000 during 1948.

An analysis of the business census points out that "the trade volume of new and used car dealers and gas service stations in the District exceeded by 11 million dollars the gross sales of the 11 large department stores."

The automobile trade also amounted to more than 75 percent of all expenditures in food stores, the biggest single group in the breakdown with a volume of $220,095,000.

Big Stores Average $14,250,000

The 11 District retail outlets classified as department stores had gross sales of $156,758,000, or an approximate average of $14,250,000.

These were among the 18 department stores in the metropolitan area which grossed $171,355,000 and had a payroll of $30,256,000.

The District used-car dealers led numerically in the automotive group with 99 units and a volume of $23,692,000 but the 78 District motor vehicle dealers (new and used cars) had a volume more than four times as great with $107,892,000.

The metropolitan area had 135 used car dealers and 194 motor vehicle dealers (used and new) with a combined gross trade of $205,912,000.

In the 1956 "food group" units, excluding eating and drinking places, more than 25 percent of the District's retail outlets are listed, accounting for 20 percent of total sales of all trades.

Food stores in the metropolitan area numbered 2777 with a gross of $333,212,000 and a payroll of $22,686,000.

Delinquent Real Estate Tax Sale Set

The annual real estate sale for unpaid taxes will be held January 16 at the District Building, Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson said yesterday.

A property owner can keep his property out of the auction if he pay by January 12, Pearson said. And even if the property is "sold", all is not lost. The owner has two years from the date of the sale in which he can redeem the property by paying taxes due plus interest of one percent a month.

Property may be "bought" at the sale for the amount of the 1950 taxes due, Pearson said. If the owner redeems it within two years, the bidder keeps only the interest. If the property is not redeemed, the bidder may obtain title to it by paying any taxes and interest due from previous years, Pearson said.

Pearson estimated that the number of properties offered for sale next month will be less than the 2490 sold last January. A list of 10,261 properties was prepared for advertisement last week, but taxes have already been paid on 2368 of these, he said.

Fire Hazards Gone, Carnival Is Reopened

SAVAGE, Md., Dec. 9 (AP).—The Christmas carnival at Santa Heim, Merrieland, was back in full operation today after a one-day shutdown because of fire hazards.

Joseph McSweeney, chief investigator for the State Fire Marshal, said the carnival is in as good shape now as it can possibly be.

He said a detail of men and a fire truck are standing by in case of an emergency, and that canvas walls have been covered on the inside with a fireproof lining. In addition, the tent roofs have been sprayed with a fire repellent that keeps a smouldering fire from breaking out into flame.

McSweeney said that electrical wiring, which was worn bare, has been removed from the floor of the tents. Four exits have been installed in a tent where there was only one before.

The carnival opened two days ago, but was closed by owner Harry Heim yesterday following inspection by McSweeney. Heim has been using the 200-year-old village for his business of manufacturing Christmas tree ornaments.

How New Junior High School Will Appear . . .

PLANS MADE—Artist's conception of the proposed new Terrell Junior High School, to be built on First st. nw., between L and Pierce sts. Bids for the $1,900,000 structure will be opened December 21. Associate Superintendent of Schools John M. Riecks said it was hoped to complete the school for the first semester of the 1952-1953 school year. Arlington School Board Asks Fiscal Study

Arlington County's school board yesterday called for an "impartial" study of school expenditures and educational needs.

The board seeks to clarify the "confusion" it blames for the defeat of the $7,450,000 school bond issue November 7.

In a resolution directed to the Arlington County Board, the school board asked that the county's fiscal affairs committee include the study in its scheduled survey of county fiscal conditions.

It suggested that the study include:

1. An analysis of school funds available since January 1, 1948, the date the present school board took office.
2. A study of the costs of Arlington school construction since 1945 in comparison with costs elsewhere, including the District.
3. A study of the cost of the educational value of features such as fluorescent lighting.
4. An analysis of the county's ability to finance future recommended improvements.

School Superintendent William A. Early said he hoped the study would show voters the need for funds to meet growing school requirements.

To qualify Arlington for its share of emergency State funds, the board laid down a four-year improvement program. By approving formally the plan, the county became eligible for $635,000 from the "Battle Fund" for emergency school needs.

Program objectives in 1951-52 include construction of a junior-senior high school, three elementary schools, two annexes to existing primary schools, two elementary schools to replace buildings in "unsuitable" locations, and additions to three Negro elementary schools.

In 1953-54 the board proposes to expand two elementary schools and two junior high schools.

At yesterday's meeting the board elected Colin C. McPherson as chairman effective January 1, to succeed Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, who resigned.

Yule Spirit Rules Citizen Meetings

This week there won't be talks on civilian defense, nor District affairs, nor special talks on special problems at many citizens meetings.

Comes Christmas and Mr. S. Claus is the principal speaker and special guest. This week Sir Santa will be present at the Christmas party of the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association.

And, being a ubiquitous fellow, he'll also be at the Christmas party of the Argyle Citizens.

Moreover, at least two other groups—Fort Davis and Glover Park—will celebrate the season this week by jingling the bells and dashing trough the snow—in song, of course.

Time and place will be found in this week's schedule:

GI Course Costs To Be Investigated

House investigators said yesterday they have turned up "an almost infinite number of abuses" in Government payments for GI education.

Chairman Teague (D., Tex.) of a special investigation committee said hearings will start Monday on purchases of equipment for GI classes in watch and clock making schools.

His statement said the committee has evidence arrangements between certain schools and supply houses "were not proper and possibly may involve violations of law." He said this has cost the Government "huge sums."

Teague told reporters his committee will also delve into Government-financed equipment purchases by other types of schools and colleges.

"In the course of investigating the broad field embraced by the vocational rehabilitation and education program we have established to our own satisfaction that there are an almost infinite number of abuses that have existed and still do exist," Teague said.

After hearings here Monday and Tuesday, Teague's committee will hold sessions in Dallas on Wednesday and Thursday.

Research Adviser Feted

Dr. Max M. Munk, adviser to the Naval Ordnance Laboratory's aeroballistic research department, was honored Friday on his sixieth birthday anniversary at a luncheon given by his co-workers. Dr. Munk was presented a plaque citing his "35 years devoted to research in aeronautics."

At Day Centers

Funds Sought To Continue Child Care

Two House members plan to seek funds to prevent the District's child day-care centers from closing on December 22, it was learned yesterday.

The Representatives — Foster (D., Mass.) and Sidney R. Yates (D., Ill.)—said yesterday they plan to discuss with Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee the possibility of obtaining a small day-care appropriation during the next two weeks.

Last fall Congress granted $50,000 to terminate the centers on December 31. The termination order came from the House Appropriations Committee despite a law authorizing operation of the war-born centers for at least three more years. The law also authorized up to $100,000 in congressional appropriations each year.

Both Yates and Furcolo said they wanted to help keep the centers open because the facilities may be needed again to help increase the manpower supply.

That was why the centers were first established in 1943 and operated during the last war by Lanham Act funds. At one point in the war years 22 centers were open for 800 children of working mothers.

Today six centers are running for an average of 250 children. Welfare officials are expecting an increased demand for the centers if defense and civilian mobilization agencies continue to swell.

The Board of Public Welfare announced Friday that it decided to close the centers on December 22, instead of December 31, to enable it to pay its 49 staff members in full.

Son of Revolution To Hear Gen. Pollock

Brig. Gen. Edwin A. Pollock, U. S. Marine Corps, will be guest speaker at the sixty-first annual meeting of the Sons of the Revolution, at the Chevy Chase Club, Tuesday at 7 p. m.

General Pollock, who has just returned from Korea, will speak on "The Marines in Korea." Officers will be elected.

Off-Campus Courses Established by GWU

George Washington University has added an off-campus extension service and will hold classes in Government and business offices, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, announced yesterday.

The new department will be known as the College of General Studies. In addition to the extension service it will include an "on campus division" that will admit persons formerly not eligible to attend university classes.

Community services, sponsored by the university, which now take in the Washington Counseling Center, the George Washington University Reading Clinic and the Governmental Internship Scholarship program, will be part of the new college.

Dr. Dreese Named Dean

Dr. Mitchell Dreese, dean of the summer sessions since 1939 and for four years director of veteran education, has been named dean of the new college.

Dr. Marvin said the college will "round out" a program already offered at the university of giving adults an opportunity to further their education. George Washington now offers classes in the late afternoons, evenings and on Saturday mornings to make it possible for employed students to obtain degrees while working full-time.

The new college has been operating on a limited basis since October 1, Dr. Marvin said. Classes organized at the Pentagon and the Patuxent Naval Air Station and other governmental agencies have a total enrollment of more than 500.

Courses Depend on Demand

Credit and non-credit courses in any field in which there is sufficient demand, and for which instructors are available, will be set up at the request of Government agencies, business firms, civic groups, trade associations, parent-teacher organizations and similar groups. Classes will meet at the time and location most convenient for students.

Credit courses will be accepted by any school or college at the university providing the student is eligible for a degree and the courses are in the scope of the curriculum, Dr. Marvin said.

Clara Barton's Letter Recalls Terror Before Civil War Battle

The American Red Cross yesterday released the text of a previously unpublished letter written by its founder and first president, Clara Barton, on the eve of a great Civil War battle.

Addressed to a Massachusetts relative of the famed nurse and humanitarian, the letter poignantly describes Miss Barton's impressions and fears. It reads:

Head Quarters, Second Division
Army of the Potomac
Camp near Falmouth, Va.
Dec. 11, 1862 2 o'clock A. M.
My dear Cousin Vira:

Five minutes time with you!—and God only knows what the five minutes might be worth to the - may - be - doomed thousands sleeping around me.

It is the night before a battle. The enemy, Fredericksburg, and its mighty entrenchments lie before us . . . the river, between. At tomorrow's dawn, our troops will assay to cross, and the guns of the enemy will sweep these frail bridges at every breath.

The moon is shining through the soft haze with a brightness almost prophetic. For the last half hour I have stood alone in the awful stillness of its glimmering light, gazing upon the strange sad scene around me, striving to say, "Thy will, oh God, be done."

The campfires blaze with unwonted brightness. The sentry's tread is still, but quick. The acres of little shelter tents are dark and still as death. No wonder, for as I gazed sorrowfully upon them I thought I could almost hear the slow flap of the grim messenger's wings as one by one he sought and selected his victims for the morning sacrifice. Sleep weary ones. I sleep and rest for tomorrow's toil! Oh, sleep and visit—in dreams once more—the loved ones nestling at home. They may yet live to dream of you, cold, lifeless and bloody, but this dream, soldier, is thy last. Paint it brightly, dream it well. Oh, northern mothers, wives and sisters, all unconscious of the peril of the hour, would to Heaven that I could bear for you the concentrated woe which is so soon to follow. Would that Christ would teach my soul a prayer that would plead to the Father for grace sufficient for you all. God pity and strengthen you every one——

Mine are not the only waking hours. The light yet burns brightly in our kind-heated general's tent where he pens what may be a last farewell to his wife and children and thinks sadly of his fated men.

Already the roll of the moving artillery is sounding in my ears, the battle draws near, and I must catch one hour's sleep for today's labor.

Good night, dear Cousin, and Heaven grant you strength for your more peaceful and less terrible, but not less weary days than mine. Yours in love,
Clara—

The cousin Miss Barton wrote to was Elvira Stone, of Oxford, Mass. The "kind-hearted General" was probably Maj. Gen. E. V. Sumner, who commanded the Second and Ninth Corps of the Union's Army of the Potomac.

In the battle at Fredericksburg, December 13, the "victims for the morning sacrifice"—the killed and wounded among the Union and Confederacy—totaled 17,900.

Gridiron Club Picks Berryman As President; Father Held Post

By the United Press

The Gridiron Club yesterday elected James T. Berryman, political cartoonist of the Washington Star, to be its president in 1951, a position in which his father served 25 years ago.

Berryman

The Gridiron Club is an organization of Washington newspapermen. Berryman's father, the late Clifford K. Berryman, also was the Star't political cartoonist. His election as club president took place 25 years ago almost to the day.

It was the first time that a son of a former president has been chosen to head the organization. Other officers chosen are: vice president, Paul R. Leach, Chicago Daily News; secretary, Lyle C. Wilson, United Press; treasurer, Walker S. Buel (reelected), Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Members chosen to serve with the officers on the executive committee are: James L. Wright, Buffalo Evening News; Richard L. Wilson, Cowles Publications, and Benjamin M. McKelway, Washington Star.

The club canceled its annual winter dinner, a Washington institution, because of the world crisis. Some 500 guests usually attend.

Quake Causes Panic

ARICA, Chile, Dec. 9 (AP).—A strong earthquake lasting more than a minute caused panic today among the population of this northernmost Chilean port, but no one was reported injured. The walls of some buildings were cracked.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 9 (U.P.). Princeton University's 18 million-volt cyclotron, which was partially destroyed in a $300,000 fire last February, is being rebuilt and will be back in full operation sometime this winter, it was announced today.

Alexandria Firemen Assume Annual Role Of Refurbishing Toys To Aid Santa Claus

Alexandria's firemen have taken over their annual role of Santa Claus' helpers.

In all five of the city's firehouses, volunteers are busy repairing and repainting discarded toys to meet the needs of an estimated 1500 children.

The project is sponsored by the Northern Virginia Chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, whose members already have collected hundreds of toys. The sorority has appealed to the public for more contributions.

Cabs Collecting Toys

Each of the city's firehouses has been designated as a collection station for used toys for the convenience of donors, the City Cab Company has offered a "pickup" service. Call Alexandria 1100 or 5400 and a cab will come to take the toys to a fire station.

According to Mrs. J. C. Scheleen, chairman of the project, all toys regardless of condition will be accepted.

The firemen's ability to restore decrepit and apparently useless toys is "amazing," she said. In some instances, as many as three bicycle have been used to rebuild a single bike which, when repaired and painted, "can take its place with the sleekest of 1951 models."

The chapter also seeks gifts for teen-agers and adults, Mrs. Scheleen said.

Apply to Welfare Department

Families seeking gifts for their children can apply to the city welfare department. The requests will be turned over to the Christmas Bureau, operated by the Community Chest. A complete file of applicants is kept at the bureau to avoid duplication of gifts.

The alumnae chapter aims to provide each underprivileged child with at least one "large" toy—such as a bicycle—and six smaller gifts, Mrs. Scheleen said.

The finished toys will be displayed at the Alexandria Recreation Center, Cameron and Harvard sts., December 19, 20 and 21 from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. On those days, persons who have received "gift certificates" from the Christmas Bureau can select the presents they wish.

Fire Department spokesmen yesterday estimated that at least 500 of the city's 800 volunteer firemen are contributing in some way to the restoration of toys collected by the chapter.

Aircraft Carrier To Be 'De-Mothballed'

SEATTLE, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—The 27,000-ton aircraft carrier Bon Homme Richard will be taken out of "mothballs" and overhauled for possible action in Korean waters, Navy officials said today.

The carrier, commissioned in 1944, was placed in "mothballs" in July, 1946.

Embassy Children To Give Christmas Radio Greetings

Children from the foreign embassies and legations will broadcast Christmas greetings in their native tongues on a Nation-wide radio network the afternoon of December 22.

The Washington Board of Trade's Greater National Capital Committee, sponsor of the sixteenth annual broadcast, has announced it expects children of 50 nations to be present.

Originating from the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel, the program will be broadcast over radio station WMAL and the American Broadcasting Co. network from 5 to 5:30 p. m.

ARTIST'S SKETCH OF GOVERNMENT OFFICE BUILDINGS PROPOSED FOR DISPERSAL AREAS AROUND WASHINGTON. THEY WILL HAVE PARKING SPACE

What will the Government buildings proposed under the dispersal program look like?

In the first place, they will look alike. Friday the General Services Administration released a large brochure giving the present thinking on construction planned at the eight sites in suburban Maryland and Virginia.

The buildings would be of reinforced concrete on sites of 200-300 acres apiece about 20 miles from Washington and at least five miles apart.

They would be three-story and basement, functional-type structures, designed as all-purpose office buildings. Each building would accommodate about 5000 workers.

In event of total mobilization, Federal planners contemplate constructing temporary quarters at each of the eight sites suitable for housing a total of about 40,000 employes.

All buildings, GSA states, will be air-conditioned and will have such supporting facilities as cafeterias, parking for 40 percent of its workers, water supply system and a sewage disposal plant.

As other protective measures, electric power and communications lines will be fed into the buildings from underground. A "non-climbable" fence would enclose each Federal site.

W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of public buildings, said $142,800,000 of the total $180,000,000 dispersal fund would go into the buildings and accessories. Each building, it is estimated, will cost $17,850,000.

FTC Lawyer Charges Chiefs With Inability To Rate His Work

An efficiency rating appeal with Government-employe implications is being heard by a Civil Service appeals board.

Many thousands of Federal workers who believe they are the victims of similar circumstances will be cheering on the employe involved in the case, Karl Stecher, a Federal Trade Commission attorney. Stecher made some grave charges in his appeal, among them being:

1. That the rating system is used as a device to "ruin" employes in the FTC.

2. That the rating system used by the FTC is a "fraud," and that Civil Service's objectives are perverted.

3. That his superiors are incompetent to rate him.

"In the final analysis," Stecher concludes, "the question before the Civil Service Commission is whether this FTC must be administered as an agency of Government according to law, or whether it may be administered as a private club for the benefit of the men who now control it and their friends. The decision of this question will affect the entire Government service."

It's one thing to make charges; still another to prove them. The board must decide the case but any impartial observer would be impressed by Stecher's array of evidence. Furthermore, the attorney is appealing from a "very good" rating, and he's attacking an FTC rule which limits promotions to employes in his grade unless they are rated "excellent."

First, let's take a quick look at the charge that he's better qualified as an attorney than his superiors and that his supervisors are incompetent to rate him. Stecher holds two law degrees from Yale and an AB from George Washington. He's the author of various legal books and articles, and he was a professor of law in three universities.

On paper, none of his superiors can touch his rich background.

Stecher then proceeded to take up the "incompetence" charge against his superiors. He cited one case after another, cases that were obviously mishandled.

One example: A complaint was filed against a business concern on September 28, 1942; it was dismissed without prejudice on November 15, 1949, but the discriminatory practices complained of were dropped by the company in March, 1939, more than three years before the complaint was filed. Nevertheless, a dozen costly hearings were held on the case.

The cases appear to be ample proof that someone wasn't always on the ball at FTC.

But Stecher, a most painstaking person, didn't let the matter drop there. He then cited cases he had helped to prepare and showed how his material had been "adopted" by his superiors and how they had received credit and promotions for his work.

The attorney told the appeals board that there was little relation between an efficiency rating and actual work performed. At formal hearings, he said, it was the practice of some FTC officials to use attorneys supposedly in charge as doorkeepers, ushers and general flunkies. "Another duty of such attorneys was that of being water boys at conferences and hearings," he charged.

There were two distinctive methods of serving water at formal conferences and hearings," he explained. "One of these was exemplified by an attorney who had served individual speakers with water by marching ceremoniously down the center isle and placing the glass of water on the rostrum in front of successive speakers. This we call the 'aristocratic' method.

"The other method was that of having about 15 pitchers of water and about 100 glasses on two tables in the rear of the room so everybody could help himself. This we call the 'plebean method.'"

That all ties in with Stecher's most serious charge about ruining employe lives. This is his explanation:

"One of the orthodox methods used to ruin a man or to drive him away from the FTC is to assign him inferior work, below his grade, and give him little or no work in that grade. He is given an inferior efficiency rating. It is then stated that he has done nothing of importance in his official grade during the period in question to warrant a batter rating. The record supports this statement.

"Everyone is, of course, familiar with the common practice of men in key positions favoring their friends. I am not atacking that practice. But this FTC is the only governmental agency I ever saw in which administrators are permitted deliberately to ruin the lives of their fellow men and get away with it with impunity."

This is Stetcher's first appeal and he told the board it was "exceedingly distasteful" for him to bring it. In fact, the attorney amazed his colleagues; they thought he'd sit back and take it.

Several other FTC employes have confirmed, in part at least, some of Stetcher's charges. The appeal will be most difficult to win on paper since the board rarely raises a "Very Good" to an "Excellent" rating.

But perhaps the case will inspire the FTC Commissioners to take a look into the charges. Also, the favored few in other Federal agencies will give a second thought to any arbitrary policies they may have for fear a little fellow wil rise up and challenge them, too.

'Hello' Girls Boost Red Feather Drive . . .

The Washington Post

Dollars That Count

Cases of Joe, Jack and Ruth Prove Chest a Friend Indeed

The Community Chest throughout the week will conduct an "emergency drive" for $887,000—enough to put the 1951 ioal of $4,260,000 over the top. The Chest has helped just such people as described in these case histories. If the campaign fails, others like them may suffer.

The names are changed—the stories are true:

Joe is a house painter who had taken care of himself and his family all his life. No dead beat, in other words. But at 66 he had to spend a month in the hospital undergoing extensive diagnostic work, and he didn't know where the money was coming from.

Someone helped him out, though. They told him about the Hospitalization Fund. Because of Community Chest money given through the Hospitalization Fund, Joe was able to spend 34 days in Georgetown Hospital, and a month later be readmitted for 10 days, knowing that his bills would be paid.

That was several months ago. Joe is working now. He has paid back part of the money given him, and will repay the balance in 1951.

Jack, a 26-year-old war veteran with a wife and three children, had been in school two months under the GI Bill, when he turned up at the American Legion Welfare Department, a Red Feather agency, at 1404 New York ave. nw.

Jack's trouble was that his Government checks had not come through, he had been evicted, and was, of course, broke. The Legion Welfare Department is not equipped to help persons over a long period of time, and as it was not known when Jack's checks would come through, he was referred to the Veterans Employment Service, 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw., and they helped him find an afternoon job.

Since Jack would not get a pay check for two weeks, the Legion welfare department agreed to back him financially for the two-week period. Before the fortnight was ended, National Capital Housing Authority offered Jack an apartment. Jack and his family, living in a housekeeping room, needed the apartment, but it meant a month's rent in advance and having some furniture.

The Legion welfare department lent Jack the money for the first month's rent and a few essential pieces of second-hand furniture. As a result, a war veteran and his family have taken a new lease on life.

Ruth was a good mother and a good manager, despite her rundown condition. When she went to the hospital for her third child, it was found she had tuberculosis and needed hospitalization for at least a year.

This was a crisis for which the family, of modest income, was not prepared. In desperation, Ruth's husband consulted his rabbi and was referred to the Jewish Social Service Agency, a Red Feather Agency, at 1131 Spring rd. nw.

All the distraught father could think of was that the children would have to be placed in a foster home. His relief was almost pathetic when the agency proposed that it pay for a housekeeper so that the family could be kept together.

Unfortunately, Ruth's husband was unable to continue caring for the new baby nights and work days too. As a result, the baby was placed in a foster home until a larger apartment could be found, an apartment large enough to permit the housekeeper to live with the family and the baby be reunited with the family.

7 Post Writers To Take Calls For Chest Gifts

Seven Washington Post writers will join in manning the Community Chest Federation's special switchboard—MEtropolitan 6262—to make giving easy.

BILL GOLD

Serving stints on the switchboard, open 6 a. m. to midnight, today through next Sunday, are Bill Gold, the "District Line" man; Lucia Brown, cookery; Evelyn Hayes, fashions; Paul Hume, music; Walter Haight, bangtails; Shirley Povich, sports "This Morning," and Dick Coe, theater.

To give without effort, just call MEtropolitan 6262. Volunteer workers will take down name, address, amount of donation, and where it can be picked up.

The information will be relayed to the nearest volunteer worker, who will be only too happy to stop by.

The special switchboard, with adequate trunklines, is located in the former Washington Post building, 1337 E st. nw. Members of Washington Traffic Division, Communication Workers of America, CIO, are cooperating in the effort to get the Red Feather campaign past the goal line.

Bill Gold will be working at MEtropolitan 6262 from 9 a. m. to noon today. Lucia Brown will be there the same hours Monday, and Evelyn Hayes, the same hours Tuesday.

Paul Hume will serve from 9 a. m. to noon Wednesday. Walter Haight and Shirley Povich will work the same hours Thursday and Friday, respectively.

Dick Coe will be there Saturday from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Other Red Feather campaign volunteers will be on hand at all hours to answers and give additional information.

Chest Opens Intensive 8-Day Drive to Raise $887,000 will range from five minutes to an hour. Some will feature top radio personalities—others the beneficiaries of Red Feather services.

Fifteen telephone lines have been set up in the old building of The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw.

These lines will be manned from 6 a. m. to midnight on six-hour shifts. Helping the telephone operators handle the calls will be Chest volunteers.

A "night owl" telephone service—Telephone Answering Service, Inc.—has volunteered to handle Metropolitan 6262 calls from midnight to 6 a. m. This puts the campaign on a 24-hour basis.

The mechanism behind the Metropolitan 6262 campaign is this: As soon as a call comes in, the telephone operator or Chest volunteer will note the name and address of the subscriber and amount of his pledge.

A cross-reference will give the location of the nearest Chest solicitor, who wil be sent out as soon as possible to collect the contribution.

That the Korean crisis is behind this mobilization of publicity and communication was emphasized by General Campaign Chairman Hugh K. Duffield in a letter to all campaign workers:

"Everyone is very much worried and disturbed at the moment in view of what is happening in Korea to United Nation armed forces," he wrote. "It only means that instead of a letup in our preparedness activities, they will have to be expanded.

"This means more men in uniform, larger Army, Navy and Air Force. The agencies of the Community Chest Federation will be called on for expanded services to these men and their families.

79.18 Percent Reached

Present Chest collections of $3,372,965 represent 79.18 percent of the $4,260,000 goal.

The $4,260,000 goal would provide aid for an estimated 284,000 people in the Washington Chest area—the District, the Free City of Alexandria, and Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties. Including among the 284,000 people would be 34,000 members of the armed forces and their families.

But a collection of only 79.18 percent, the Chest estimates, would prevent its agencies from helping 59,136 persons in 1951.

Under an arrangement where the budgets of agencies and funds would be cut on a pro rata basis if the campaign fails, the armed services special fund would suffer a proportionate cut. And this would come at a time when the Army, Navy and Air Forces are here.

Another part of the Chest picture for 1951 is that the $4,260,000 goal includes $450,000 carried over from 1950 needs because of Washington's failure to make its 1950 goal.

A third factor, the Chest pointed out, is that "the National Capital community needs the tonic of a successful Community Chest campaign—having obtained its goal only twice in the last decade."

Unable to Meet Goals

Washington, in fact, has been chronically unable to meet its Chest goals. The city lags far behind other cities of comparable size.

Chest officials give three reasons:

1. The city has few major private corporations as a source of large contributions. In most cities "corporate gifts" total about 45 percent of the goal. In Washington they account for only 22 percent.

2. Many residents do not consider Washington "home" as far as subscribing to the Washington Chest. Some residents contribute to hometown Chests.

3. For various reasons the Chest has difficulty in getting its workers to carry out their assignments on schedule. This means extension of the campaign deadline, with chances of success diminishing as the time is extended.

Archbishop O'Boyle's Statement on Drive

Now Hear This—

"What we now give in the cause of this Community Chest Federation Campaign has a significance far beyond the immediate end and purpose of a fund drive. It is part of what we do as Americans—either to strengthen the bedrock of liberty and bounty of an American life, or by default of our duty, to prepare for a progressive weakening.

"One of the purposes of our gift should be to meet the pressing needs of our Capitol City and the metropolitan area in this mid-century year. What we give makes the difference—between cold apathy and warm sympathy concerning the welfare of all neighbors.

"What we give may make the difference between life and death, between health and sickness, between responsible citizenship and crime, or between opportunity and a closed door."

—The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washton.

2 Die in Crash Of Helicopter At Patuxent Base

Two men were killed when a new-type Navy helicopter plunged into a field and burst into flames at its Patuxent River, Md., Naval Air Station base yesterday morning before a number of eyewitnesses.

Navy authorities identified the dead as Navy Lieut. James R. Bagshaw, pilot, of Lexington Park, Md., and Walter R. Wall of Hollywood, Md., a civilian aeronautical engineer attached to the station.

Officials said the craft had been on a routine flight and was above the station at 9:23 a. m. when it went into a tight turn and plummeted nose-first to the ground near the station firehouse.

Both men were dead when removed from the craft, officers said. His associates said Bagshaw, a native of Chester, Pa., was the father of four children.

Spencerville Man Fatally Injured In Skid Accident In Silver Spring

Two persons were killed and four others injured in a spectacular two-car collision on U. S. 1, near Muirkirk, Md., last night.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, was George Patterson Fairall 33, of Elkridge, Md., driver of one of the cars. A woman, tentatively identified as his wife, was killed instantly.

Police said the Fairall car was headed south, apparently at a "high rate of speed," when it crashed into a north-bound car, driven by Warren R. Kibler, 31, of Baltimore, Md.

The Fairall car was turned over on its top, its wheels spinning. The woman in the car was crushed under the dashboard. Fairall was crushed behind the wheel.

Kibler, who suffered lacerations, and two passengers in his car were admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital. They were his mother, Mrs. Claude Kibler, 72, of Elkton, Md., who suffered severe cuts, and E. J. Bowers, 66, of Baltimore, who suffered a possible back injury. Kibler's wife was treated for minor cuts and bruises.

In an earlier accident Fred Fletcher, sr., 65, of Leesburg, Va., was killed instantly when struck by a car while walking along Route 7 near Leesburg. Police said the car was driven by Russell Hardin, 20, of Leesburg.

Contractor Killed

A landscape contractor was fatally injured yesterday when his automobile skidded and rolled off the highway on Piney Branch rd., near the entrance to Sligo Creek Park in Silver Spring, Md.

He was Plummer W. Allnut, 31, of Spencerville, Md., who died at 9:30 a. m. at the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park, Md., where he had been admitted with head injuries and a fractured left leg.

The accident happened shortly before 2 a. m. The car left the road, hit a bank and crashed into a tree, turning over on its side, police said.

Two passengers in the car received minor injuries. Randolph Bowyer, 19, of Route 3, Silver Spring, was treated for a bruised right leg, and Herbert Dubin, 18, also of Route 3, Silver Spring, was treated for a bruised forehead.

Allnut was the son of Smith W. Allnut, Silver Spring real estate man.

Two persons were injured, neither seriously, when a car scraped a truck and crashed into a horse and wagon at Landover rd. near 56th ave. in Villa Heights, Md., yesterday morning.

Police said the car was driven by Mrs. Phyllis A. Stockman, of 2725 73d ave., Kent Village, Md. Her 10-year-old daughter, Shelley Stockman, was treated by a private doctor for face bruises.

The driver of the horse and wagon, Garfield Bailey, 63, of 6307 Auburn rd., East Riverdale, Md., was treated for injuries to his leg. The horse was not seriously injured but the wagon was demolished, police said.

Miss Shirley L. English, 17, of 102 E. Custis dr., Alexandria, Va., suffered face lacerations and shock when her car collided with a fire department hose wagon at Commerce and Prince sts. in Alexandria. She was treated at the Alexandria Hospital and released.

Police said the fire truck, driven by Walter Jeffries, 36, of 1210 Cameron st., Alexandria, was enroute to a minor fire in the Cameron Valley Housing Development when the accident occurred.

In Washington, Clarence Washington, 4, of 1538 5th st. nw., was injured when he ran out from between parked cars into the path of a Thompson's Dairy milk truck near his home, police said.

Both Soldiers

Arrest of 2 May Solve 35 Robberies

The arrest of two soldiers attached to the Andrews Air Force Base may lead to the solution of some 35 recent housebreakings and robberies in Washington and nearby Maryland, police said yesterday.

The soldiers, Pvt. Theodore Elder, 19, of Peabory Mass., and James Lynch, 18, of Springfield, Mass., were taken into custody Friday night.

Both were arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, who ordered them held for grand jury action.

Bond for Elder, charged with two counts of housebreaking and one count of robbery, was set at $19,000. Bond for Lynch, charged with one count of housebreaking, was set at $1000.

Police said Elder had admitted about 35 housebreaking and robberies, which netted him $3000 in cash and an undetermined quantity of other items. They said both his foot locker and his barracks bag at Andrews Air Force Base were stuffed with the loot, which included a stamp collection, valued at about $5000, and a $40,000 mortgage note, among other things.

Lynch has admitted participation in several of the cases, police said. They also reported a third man had been taken into custody at the base for questioning in several of the cases.

The robbery charge and one housebreaking charge against Elder involved the theft of a wrist watch from Edward L. Tucker, 25, of 2333 Branch ave. se., on November 20, according to police.

Tucker, a Riggs National Bank teller, found an armed intruder in his home. The gunman demanded his wallet, but Tucker's wife removed $50 from it before tossing it to her husband through the bedroom door. The gunman, disgusted at the remaining $2 in the wallet, left, taking only Tucker's watch with him.

It was this watch which led to the eventual arrests, police said. It turned up in a pawn shop at 7th st. and Florida ave. nw. Police learned the man who pawned it had won it in a card game, they said. Through him they learned the name of Elder's girl friend and he was arrested at her home in the 600 block of Q st. nw.

The second housebreaking charge against Elder and the one against Lynch involved the theft of $80 in cash, a cigarette lighter and cigarettes from the home of Olga L. Ricker at 3709 Suitland rd. se. on November 17, police reported.

They said both Elder and Lynch also have admitted the holdup of five men at a poker party in the home of George M. Beltz, 48, at 4825 Meadow View rd., Suitland, Md., on November 25.

Elder told them he got $509 in the robbery and gave Lynch $16 of it for serving as a "look out," police said.

Four Juveniles Charged With 10 Yoke Robberies

Four juveniles were charged yesterday with the yoke robberies of 10 newspaper carrier boys since last June.

The four, three of whom are newsboys, were arrested Friday night shortly after they attempted to rob John Williams, 14, of 1523 Constitution ave. ne., at 9th st. and Constitution ave. ne., police said.

The boy managed to get away and ran to his route manager, who called police. Detective Sergts. James M. Powell and Thomas Harty then cruised the neighborhood with young Williams until he spotted the four about six blocks from the scene of the attempted robbery.

Under questioning they admitted the yoke robberies of at least nine other newsboys. They told police they got anywhere from $1.50 up to $27 from each of their victims.

Police said the gang consisted of four boys from 12 to 15. They were released in the custody of their parents.

Legion Hits Rejection Of Belasco Proposal

The District of Columbia American Legion yesterday made a blistering attack against the General Services Administration for what it termed GSA's "obstructionist attitude . . . in refusing to permit the Legion to reopen the Belasco Theater as a servicemen's canteen."

Despite the statement by the Legion and District Commander Walter L. Morgan, jr., it appeared likely that the famed Lafayette Park landmark might be reopened soon as a hospitality center by interested veterans' groups.

The theater is now filled with Treasury Department files. GSA has taken the position that it would be "unwise" to allow only one veterans' organization—no matter which—to reopen it.

This stand was reported to Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, military aide to the President, who has been interested in the Belasco project.

Jess Larson, General Services administrator, last night said:

"We notified General Vaughan that we would take steps, with the cooperation of the Treasury Department, to have the theater reopened on the same basis as in World War II, and suggested that the District government determine what organizations should sponsor the use of the Government-owned property since we have had requests from several veterans' groups."

The District Commissioner's Armed Services Hospitality Committee last Thursday agreed unanimously that the Belasco should be reopened.

The Thursday meeting passed a motion which said the committee favored the reopening either under the sponsorship of the Legion alone or the Legion and other veterans' organizations.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, chairman, said her administrative committee would meet this week to find a "coordinating formula" to reopen the Belasco.

Commander Morgan's statement said the GSA had placed the Legion in an "embarrassing position." Since the Legion proposed Belasco's reopening, "Legion officials here have been besieged with questions on when the hospitality canteen would be made available . . .

"We have had excellent cooperation from nearly every organization, but the GSA effectively blocked our every efforts until this time."

Morgan charged that "the lethargy of the responsible officials" in the matter was "undermining the moral of the men vested with the responsibility of defending our country."

South of Legation

School Asks Right to Build At Woodley

The District Board of Zoning Adjustment will be asked next week to permit construction of a school on the edge of the Woodley estate, which has figured in two other zoning cases this year.

Land involved in the case docketed for the board's December 20 meeting is 1½ acres on the west side of 29th st. nw. at Woodley rd. The lot lies south of the Swiss Legation and just north of the Woodley tract for which apartment rezoning was sought last month.

St. Thomas Apostle School, now located at 27th st. and Woodley rd. nw., has contracted to buy the land if the school use is permitted, according to the Rev. Joseph M. Moran, head of the school. Father Moran said plans are to move the entire school to the new site in order to provide playground space for its 171 students.

The 1½ acres was not part of the Woodley estate, but it figured in the breakup last spring of the property that was once known as the "Summer White House." Three Washington businessmen—Thornton W. Owen, Edward C. Baltz and Ned Bord—bought Woodley last February. They then gave the house to the Maret School in exchange for the property fronting on 29th st. and a lot elsewhere.

The Maret School was denied permission to put its school in the Woodley house. The Zoning Commission has not yet ruled on the request of Owen and associates to build apartments on the rest.

Senate Crime Probe Set for Chicago Gangs

No Bond

Hearing to Be Thursday on Rape Charge

Juvenile Court yesterday surrendered jurisdiction over a 16-year-old confessed rapist.

Lee Verne Boseman, 1924 11th st. nw., was immediately arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence and held without bond for a hearing Thursday.

Boseman

Boseman has confessed raping a 17-year-old girl on November 20 in the 1300 block of Sheridan st. nw., police said. He also has confessed an assault attempt on a 20-year-old housewife on December 4 in the 6000 block of 13th pl. nw. and robbing her of $45, and attempting to rape a 10-year-old girl at Visitation Convent on November 12, police said.

Wearing a green turtleneck sweater and a leather jacket, the short and stocky boy told Lawrence yesterday he wished to proceed with a hearing without a lawyer.

But Lawrence said he thought the boy should be represented by counsel because of his "extreme youth" and the "vicious nature" of the attacks.

Lawrence set a total of $40,000 bond in the two charges of attempted rape and the robbery count, although he was held without bond in the rape case.

Because Juvenile Court surrendered its jurisdiction over the case, Boseman will be tried in District Court. If convicted, he faces a death penalty.

Boseman was arrested last April for purse-snatching, and placed on probation by Juvenile Court authorities, police said.

Senate crime investigators will put Chicago gangland on the spot in public hearings starting December 18, Chairman Estes Kefauver announced yesterday.

The Tennessee Democrat scheduled open sessions in the Nation's one-time crime capital despite failure of his special crime committee to locate several key witnesses.

The crime committee has asked the Senate to order special arrest warrants for eight "wanted witnesses." Anthony (Tony) Accardo, Murray (The Camel) Humphreys, Rocco Fischetti, his brother, Charles, and John Patton, one-time "boy mayor" of a Chicago suburb, are on the warrant list.

Big-time gambler Joe Adonis—on bond from gambling charges in New York and New Jersey—has been subpenaed and is scheduled to face the crime committee in Washington Tuesday.

The Nation-wide race wire service was expected to figure prominently in the Chicago hearings. Accardo, reported heir to the notorious Capone gang throne, was trying to meet with race wire proprietor James A. Ragen just before Ragen was murdered in 1946.

Committee sources said race wire operations and the widespread influence of the Mafia, Sicilian Black Hand society, are the major targets of the committee's drive to complete its investigation by February 28, when its authority expires.

Although Senate leaders expect that an attempt will be made to prolong the committee's life, Kefauver has insisted repeatedly that the inquiry into interstate crime and its corrupting influences will be completed by the February 28 deadline.

The committee said some of the 44 witnesses questioned in closed hearings in Chicago in October will be recalled to testify in public and promised that some others also will testify.

Gambling operations in northern New Jersey—and elsewhere—will figure in the Washington hearings. Adonis was listed with other big-timers as a partner in a plush Florida gambling house in records seized last summer at the New York headquarters of gambler Frank Erickson.

Denies Knowing Of Drury Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

FOR CHICAGO—The FBI announced that Anthony Rotondo, 34, (above), had been arrested in Baltimore as a parole violator. The FBI said Rotondo was wanted by Chicago police for questioning in the ambush-slaying of former Police Lieut. William Drury there last September 25. Drury was slain after he had offered to testify about underworld activities, before the Kefauver Committee. Rotondo denied any knowledge of the killing

Bank Bandit Search Leads To Albany

The search for three bandits sought in the $35,825 holdup at the National Metropolitan Bank's branch in Spring Valley Thursday led yesterday to Albany, N. Y.

Police said that Francis Hildebrand, vice president and manager of the branch, went with detectives to Albany to look at rogue's gallery photos there.

Hildebrand, who was in the bank along with four other employes at the time of the holdup, told police he had a glimpse of the partly masked face of one of the bandits.

Police refused to say what led the search to Albany but added that a routine check is being made in all of the larger eastern cities.

25 From D. C. Bilked in Divorce Racket

About 25 District residents were reportedly among hundreds taken in by a quick divorce racket which New York authorities said was broken up there Thursday.

Assistant New York District Attorney Julius Impellizzeri said last night that John L. McDermott, also known as "Baron Von Blucher," had admitted issuing 70 fake "Mexican" divorces at $200 and $300 apiece during the last year.

No Washingtonians had obtained any of McDermott's "divorces," Impellizzeri said. But applications and funds from about 25 District residents were taken from McDermott's hotel room along with a Spanish typewriter and a copy of the Mexican national seal, Impellizzeri said. The list also contained names of persons in Maryland, Virginia and "about the rest of the 48 States," he said. He would not release their names.

McDermott was arraigned yesterday on charges of grand larceny, forgery and practicing law without a license, Impellizzeri said. He waived hearing, the attorney said, and was held for action of the grand jury under $25,000 bond.

Impellizzeri said McDermott advertised his services in newspapers of various States, including Virginia, under the name "Von Blucher & Meier, Mexican Information Service on Mexican Divorces."

McDermott told police he was a funeral director and former instructor at a New York school of embalming, Impellizzeri said, and that he had ended his own marriage with one of his "divorces."

ABC Plans Two Hearings

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will hold two hearings this week on charges of illegal sale of alcoholic beverages—

Thursday, 10 a. m., Demosthenes Malatras, trading as Greyhound Restaurant, 1101 Eye st. nw., charged with sale to an intoxicated person and use of the premises for disorderly and unlawful purposes.

In addition, the board on Monday, Wednesday and Friday will hear protests to applications for renewal of ABC licenses.

It's Not Easy to Tow a House By Car From Vt. to Va.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Dec. 9 (AP).—Byron White and his wife built their Vermont home themselves, lovingly adding each new gadget and labor-saving device. When the time came for them to move to Virginia, the house had to come along too.

Through half a dozen States, up hills, across ferries, down slippery wet pavement they drove, pulling their house behind them.

Sorely tried by fire, breakdowns, blowouts and policemen, they never gave up. After all, how could they abandon 14,200 pounds of house?

Now, six weeks after the hazardous journey started, the house is set among a grove of evergreens. Its picture windows look out on rolling grass and gardens. Its winding driveway leads to the garage they have built at the rear of the much-travelled, modernistic home.

White, an electronics engineer, was just finishing up his house on University of Vermont property at Burlington when he got word of a job here.

The Whites decided to make the move—house and all.

The structure was built in the form of a T, with the living room the T's crossbar. They built the living room so that by using hinges, it could be folded up no wider than the T's perpendicular.

They also had used hardwood plywood—not yet on the home builders market—and aluminum screws instead of nails. This made for lightness.

The home, set on a specifically-made trailer, was 35 feet long, eight feet wide and 11½ feet high.

But if the house was a dream, the trip was a nightmare.

First, they had to get permits from the states they planned to drive through. Even then some policemen were inquisitive.

They had to avoid underpasses and some bridges. They had to wire ahead to arrange for tows in some places.

Tires were a problem. They spent $250 on them because when one blew out it ripped itself to pieces under the weight of the house.

Bear Mountain in New York never will be forgotten by the Whites. Almost to the crest of the long high hill, their overheated motor burst into flame. When they got the fire out, the crankcase oil was a chocolate brown from the heat.

In Baltimore, on a Sunday morning, the Whites started up a steeply-graded street. In front of a church, the Whites dropped their house.

The parishioners filled the air with complaints, called the police and gave the distracted travelers everything but sympathy. But finally the welders came and repaired the hitch. The Whites drove on.

At their destination, it took a block and tackle to get the house on its concrete base among the trees they hadn's wauted to cut down.

Do the Whites like it here?

They'd better, says Mrs. White, a former assistant professor at the University of Vermont. "It's going to be a long time before we move again."

District Paper Mill To Cease Operations

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

One of Washington's few large industries has decided to discontinue operations.

The District of Columbia Paper Mills, Inc., has leased its buildings on Water and Potomac sts. nw. to the Government and plans to sell machinery and equipment.

Notice was given last week to 150 employes that manufacturing operations will cease upon completion of present orders and liquidation of inventories. Stockholders have been called to a special meeting on December 18 to authorize sale of equipment and to approve action of the board of directors in leasing the property to the General Service Administration.

The GSA, it is understood, plans to take over the Georgetown property near the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal about March 15 and, after extensive remodeling, will move in about 1200 Defense Department employes.

Cites Difficulties

Commenting on the suspension decision, President L. D. Nicolson said: "In recent years it has become increasingly difficult to compete in the paper manufacturing business. Over a prolonged period our limited production facilities have reflected unsatisfactory operating results. This has resulted in a weakened financial condition. Furthermore, there appears to be little possibility of substantially improving our position in the papermaking industry."

Nicolson added that "the best interests of stockholders, bondholders and creditors require our withdrawal from . . . business, the liquidation of inventories and the disposition of all remaining machinery and equipment so as to enable us to develop the earning power of our real estate holdings, which have been leased to the United States Government."

The income from rentals under the lease, Nicolson commented, should be sufficient to cover interest and sinking fund requirements on the company's mortgage bonds and leave "a substantial amount to strengthen the firm's financial position."

All operations, it was expected, will terminate by early January.

Operations Near Capacity

Ironically, operations in recent months have been at near-capacity. October revenues were said to have been the highest for a month in the company's long history.

However, the earnings record has been erratic over a long period and not sufficient to justify a dividend for stockholders since 1914. Last year, operations resulted in a loss of about $36,000.

The present corporation dates back to 1900, when it was incorporated as the D. C. Paper Manufacturing Co. At that time it was headed by George L. Nicolson, who also was general manager of the C. & O. Canal. Under a reorganization in 1936, the name was changed. The present president, L. D. Nicholson, is a son.

Actually, papermaking on the site has been carried on since Civil War days when the old Hill mill was in operation.

D. C. Paper Mills has long enjoyed a reputation as a maker of high-grade cover papers, blotting papers, box covers and specialties. One of the main difficulties has been the lack of modern high-speed machinery. In the present era of high costs, the management deemed it inadvisable to make the large capital investment necessary to bring machinery up to date.

Allies Seen Accepting Red Plan for Parley

PARIS, Dec. 9 (NYHT.).—Delegates of the three Western Powers approved today the text of a draft note which accepts in principle the Soviet Union's proposal for the first four-power conference since the council of Foreign Ministers last met in June, 1949.

The text agreed upon in three days of negotiations was kept secret, but it is believed to make clear that the American, British and French governments desire a general settlement on world problems, including the Far East.

In its note of November 3, the Soviet Union ignored East-West conflict in the Orient and asked simply for a conference on withdrawing occupation troops from Germany and establishing a central government there.

It is understood that the Western reply rejects the Soviet suggestion that the Prague resolutions of last October be accepted as the basis for German talks. These resolutions of the Cominform countries have been called undemocratic in official statements in Washington, London and Paris.

PLYMOUTH OWNERS ARE IN A CLASS BY THEMSELVES

They get the benefit of outstanding features found in no other lowest-priced car

SAFETY-RIM WHEELS

SAFETY-RIM WHEEL Protective ridges hold tire on Safety-Rim.

CONVENTIONAL WHEEL No protective ridges to hold tire on ordinary rim.

When a tire on the conventional rim gives way, you get this. The deflated tire twists and whips, sets up a drag on the steering wheel—may throw your car completely out of control.

When a tire on the Plymouth Safety-Rim Wheel gives way, you get this. The deflated tire is locked firmly to the rim, enabling you to bring your car to a sure, safe, straight-line stop.

No other lowest-priced car—only Plymouth—gives you this vitally important protection

SAFE-GUARD HYDRAULIC BRAKES

When a Plymouth owner steps on the brake pedal with a certain pressure, he knows exactly what to expect. That's because Plymouth braking is consistent and precisely predictable.

Plymouth brakes have a total of six hydraulic brake cylinders (four in the front brakes and two in the rear brakes). This places most of the braking action on the front wheels where the most braking is needed. Each of the other two leading lowest-priced cars has only four brake cylinders.

No other lowest-priced car—only Plymouth—gives you the sure, smooth stops of Safe-Guard Hydraulic Brakes

CHAIR-HEIGHT SEATS

When Plymouth owners go motoring, they sit in a natural position with a clearer, closer view of the road. That's because Plymouth is the only lowest-priced car with chair-height seats. You don't slump down on your spine.

KEY STARTING—AUTOMATIC CHOKE

Just turn the key—that's all. The ignition is on—the engine is running—the automatic choke is operating—all at once! No starter button or choke to fumble with—no flooding or stalling of the engine.

ALSO, ONLY PLYMOUTH—In the lowest-priced field—GIVES YOU:

The performance of 97-horsepower engine with 7.0 to 1 compression ratio (highest among the three leading lowest-priced cars) . . . the smoothness of Floating Power, gently cradling the engine in live rubber . . . and many other features.

When service is required, Plymouth owners are in a class by themselves here, too. For Plymouth dealers offer the expert skill of some of the most highly-trained specialists in the industry. Across the country, thousands of these men are enrolled in Plymouth's Master Technicians Service Conference. Whether you are looking for a new car, a used car, or for superior service, your nearby Plymouth dealer is a good man to know.

Plymouths are famous for delivering dependable, day-in-and-day-out transportation. That's why—of all standard-built cars used as taxicabs today—there are more Plymouths than all other makes combined!

Vatican Reveals Plan For Revising Orders

ROME, Dec. 9 (NYHT). — The Vatican today announced through its daily newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, the details of the first phase of a program designed to bring "up to date" the orders of the Catholic Church in order to enable them to meet the changed conditions of the world.

It was the last of a series of communiques on an assembly of representatives of the Catholic orders, who have been meeting here in closed session for the past two weeks.

The statement included a 5000-word comment from Pope Pius XII, in which he insisted that the characteristics of "vastness of thought and deed, unity and quick action," which he said have been mentioned as the main marks of modern times, are also "the gifts of those who profess the Catholic faith."

The Pope made only brief mention of the way in which he felt the three characteristics should influence the modernization of the Catholic orders, but stressed in his statement that all Catholics are morally subject to him and that priests are required to assist their bishops.

Earlier, priests active in drafting the modernization program had emphasized that change which would place the members of the orders more completely at the disposal of the Pope for urgent assignments and closer to their local bishops and parish priests in facing regional problems, was badly needed.

Until now, many of the Catholic orders, and even individual monasteries, have had far-reaching autonomy. They will still have a great measure of self-rule under the proposals of the assembly, but the heads of the orders will, in the future, have more frequent contact with the Vatican's Sacred Congregation of Religious, and a center will be established at Rome to coordinate the members of religious orders with clergymen who belong to known orders but serve local bishops directly.

Today's announcement followed seven years of work by a group of Jesuits, Dominicans, Benedictines, Franciscans and members of other orders, who laid the groundwork for the convention of the past fortnight. The proposals made by the assembly will now be weighed by the Sacred Congregation of Religious, which supervised the convention in close cooperation with the Pope. The authority to make the changes rests with the Sacred Congregation of Religious.

Speakers at the conference discussed a score of ways in which the orders could adapt themselves to the changed world situation. Agreement was general that basic principles, such as prayer and charity, could not change, but that many other monastic customs of long standing might well undergo alteration.

Television and radio should be introduced only cautiously in the monasteries for fear of bringing in the very worldliness the monks are attempting to flee, but many other modern phenomena, such as fast transportation, should be regarded as strong new aids, the speakers said.

Arlington Board to See Police Probers Again

The Arlington County Board will resume its sessions with special police investigation committee on Monday to get more "evidence" for criticism of the county police department.

Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan said other closed sessions will be held until the board has received all information possessed by the three investigators. The committee report, in addition to discussing police operations, also criticized County Manager A. T. Lundberg's administration of the department.

The orchestra's financial goal represents the difference between estimated receipts and expenditures for the 1951-52 season.

Vice chairmen who will assist West are Mrs. Clinton S. Raynor, a noted concert singer, and Mrs. Sidney Sherwood, who was vice chairman of the ticket sales committee for 1949-50.

Dewey to Offer Hanley Choice Of State Jobs

ALBANY, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey will offer retiring Lieut. Gov. Joe R. Hanley his choice of "two or three" important appointive State jobs, it was disclosed today.

The Governor and Hanley will meet some time next week to discuss the Lieutenant Governor's future connection with the Dewey administration. It was understood several jobs have been discussed, including counsel to the New York Thruway Authority and the State Public Service Commission. Hanley's future employment and financial welfare became a major topic of the past gubernatorial election campaigns after a letter he wrote to an anti-Dewey Republican congressman, W. Kingsland Macy, was made public. In the letter Hanley said his personal debts would be satisfied

Red Cross Seeks More Blood Donors at Walter Reed Center

Walter Reed Hospital's Red Cross Blood Center is preparing to accommodate many more donors because the center wants to contribute to the blood shipments going overseas to the armed forces without curbing the flow to the hospital.

An increase of donations will lighten the load of the Red Cross Blood Center at 1730 E st. nw., now undergoing expansion. To relieve the pressure of the downtown center, residents of the Walter Reed area have been asked to give blood at the hospital.

The Walter Reed Center is open Monday through Friday and nights on Tuesdays. Appointments may be made by calling REpublic 8300, ext. 511, or 592.

Last week, besides filling its Defense Department quota for overseas shipments, the downtown center distributed 837 pints of blood to hospitals in the District and to communities in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia via the Bloodmobile.

The Bloodmobile will make the folowing visits this week: Monday, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., St. George's Episcopal Parish House, Arlington; Tuesday, from 3 p. m. to 9 p. m., Maury Elementary School, Alexandria; Wednesday, 12 noon to 6 p. m., Episcopal Church Parish House, Manassas; Thursday, 11 a. m. to 5 p. m., Presbyterian Church, Winchester, and Friday, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., the Pentagon Building.

Carbon Monoxide Fumes Eliminator Reported Set

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—A noted petroleum scientist disclosed today he has perfected a new type of automotive exhaust that eliminates deadly carbon monoxide fumes.

Eugene Houdry said the new device would be available for mass production soon and can be fitted on motor cars using both leaded and unleaded gasolines.

The new exhaust contains a catalyst, an agent which produces a continuous reaction in another substance. This catalyst, composed mainly of platinum, mixes with exhaust gasses and sucked-in fresh air and transforms them into harmless, odorless vapors.

"In other words, we have found a way to change deadly carbon monoxide into carbon dioxide," Houdry said.

Houdry, who is 1938 invented a process that revolutionized the refining of gasoline, said the new exhaust weighs little more than the muffler on an automobile. It replaces the muffler and can be installed in half an hour.

Merry-Go-Round Test of Road Wear Shows How Heavier Truck Loads Batter Pavement

By The Associated Press

For nearly six months, trucks of varying weights have been shuttling 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, in allotted lanes over a stretch of guinea pig highway in Southern Maryland.

Eleven States are financing the project, designed to find out just what effect differently weighted trucks have on that 1.1-mile stretch of reinforced concrete.

The Highway Research Board, a Federal agency, which has been supervising the test, issued its first "report of progress" today.

"It is apparent that many significant engineering facts are being derived from this test under one typical set of conditions," the report said.

Near La Plata

The test is being conducted on a blocked-off section of U. S. 301 south of La Plata.

Four different weight trucks are used. There is a lane for each. Two have tandem (two rear) axles and the others have one rear axle.

The double-axle trucks are loaded to 32,000 and 44,800 pounds respectively, while the other two weigh, with their loads, 18,000 and 22,400 pounds.

The heavier weights for each type are the maximums allowed on Maryland highways. The lower weights are the maximums recommended by the American Association of State Highway Officials.

Results Given

1. "The 44,800-pound tandem axle loads caused approximately 11 times as much cracking (in lineal feet) as the 32,000 tandem axle loads."

2. "The 22,500-lb. axle loads caused approximately six times as much cracking as the 18,000 lb. single axle loads."

3. "After 84,000 truck passes, 80 percent of the joints in the section carrying 44,800 lb. axle loads were depressed, whereas, with the same number of truck passes, only 10 percent of the joints in the section carrying 32,000-lb. tandem loads were depressed."

4. "After 137,000 truck passes, 22 percent of the joints in the section carrying 22,400-lb. single-axle loads were settled and cracked, whereas, with the same number of truck passes, only 2 percent of the joints in the section carrying 18,000-lb. axle loads were depressed."

"After 175,000 truck passes, 8 percent of the slabs in the section under 18,000-pound single-axle loads and 40 percent of the slabs under 22,400-pound single axle loads contained cracks which have been analyzed as constituting structural failures due to the application of test axle loads."

6. After 92,000 truck passes, 27 percent of the slabs in the section under 32,000-pound tandem axle loads and 96 percent of the slabs under 44,800-pound tandem axle loads contained cracks which have been analyzed as constituting structural failures due to the application of test axle loads."

Sponsoring the test are Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Wisconsin, along with the District of Columbia.

Only Negro Pilot In Navy Killed In Korea Action

HATTIESBURG, Miss., Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Ensign Jesse L. Brown, 24, only Negro pilot to see action with Navy aviation, has been killed in action in Korea, according to a telegram received by relatives here.

Official Stages City Hall Sitdown in Ouster

JERSEY CITY, Dec. 9 (NYHT). Commissioner James F. Murray, sr., and a group of his aides, who lodged themselves in City Hall this afternoon, refused to leave tonight despite the lifting of a temporary "blockade" of the building by city police.

Commissioner Murray moved into the hall at 1:30 p. m. after he found two workmen changing the locks on the doors of the park department offices, which would have barred the normal entrance to his own office. The lock-changes were ordered by Donald Spence, director of Revenue and Finance, who said he had done so to prevent Mr. Murray from having access to the general park department offices.

Mr. Murray responded to the action by setting up a cot in his office and announcing he intended to remain there around the clock. Late in the afternoon he sent a telegram to Governor Alfred E. Driscoll asking him to send State police to "maintain public order and protect public property."

State police appeared at the hall around 6 p.m. but city police barred the entrance to them and prevented reporters in the building from leaving. The blockade ended at 7:30 p.m., when Police Capt. Edward Noonan of the First Precinct arrived and said anyone with business at City Hall could enter or leave freely. Meanwhile, the State police detail had left the vicinity of the hall.

Commissioner Murray shared his third-floor office with Deputy Commissioner John Rhode; his aide and brother, James Rhode; and two employees. Mrs. Murray also was permitted to enter late in the afternoon when she told blockading police she would throw a rock through a front door if they did not let her in.

After receiving a telephone tip at his home, Mr. Murray rushed to his office and ordered the workmen changing the locks to leave. He then decided to remain for the night.

"This is Soviet, Stalinist terrorism," Mr. Murray said of the city commission majority, headed by Mayor John V. Kenny.

A Communication

President, Critic Called Victims of Jobs

By A. Powell Davies, D.D.
Minister, All Souls' Church (Unitarian)

THE LETTER written by President Truman to Mr. Paul Hume, your music critic, was not very amiable and will be widely deplored. Mr. Hume, himself, I am sure will not mind it, since he knows that for a music critic excoriation is an occupational hazard. Nothing arouses more ire, exasperation, choler and spleen than the opinion of a music critic with which we happen to disagree.

Moreover, animosity toward music critics is a greater leveller. It brings out the worst in all of us, high and low, saint and sinner, box holder and standee. Mr. Truman's letter is thus a very democratic document, exemplifying dramatically though rather wryly the great Jeffersonian principle that all men are created equal. After all, Jefferson himself, among other things, was an assiduous violinist, and doubtless was not as proficient as he liked to believe. If Mr. Hume had expressed his honest opinion of Jefferson as a violin virtuoso, which I am sure he would have done—why, who knows?—he might have been challenged to a duel.

WHAT WE MUST understand, however, is that the President's letter was only accidentally addressed to Mr. Hume. In other words, your esteemed music critic, appearing to the President at that particular moment as just one more person who was irritatingly confident in his judgment, was the adventitious spark that ignited Mr. Truman's highly compressed charge of inflammable frustration. How fortunate it was that Mr. Clement Attlee, who may also have been irritatingly confident in his judgment, did not happen to do it. As a Welshman born, and in a family of singers, too, I can testify that the characteristic of tranquil self-assurance, so necessary to music critics, is also a common characteristic of Englishmen. It is possible to bear with either separately and even to appreciate their virtue; but to cope with both in one week requires a quality of Christian charity which would probably be a handicap in a President.

THEN, TOO, there are a lot of other people to whom the President must have wished to write splenetic letters: General Mao, for instance, or Mr. Stalin himself; and perhaps Mr. Stalin's unwitting collaborators in the Senate, as, for example, Senator McCarthy. I am not in the President's confidence and should not speculate, but I am sure there is a long list.

There is no real meanness in Mr. Truman. He is not the sort of man who, when beset, takes it out on his dog. He lets go at columnists, lobbyists and music critics, all of whom are fitted both by temperament and harsh experience to defend themselves effectually, and need no protection from the N. S. P. C. C. We wish, of course, that Mr. Truman would not write these letters, or if it cannot be helped, we wish he would prepare just a rough draft of what he would like to express and turn it over, say, to Dr. Harris, the Chaplain of the Senate, or to Dr. Pruden, his minister, either of whom could forget for the moment to be his own gentle self and adapt the language to the classical vocabulary of ecclestical controversy. The President would then discover, as did the Emperor Constantine, that invective can be satisfying and still be Christian.

PERHAPS I SHOULD ADD that in making these suggestions I imply no estimate whatever of Miss Truman's musical talent. I like people who want to sing, whether they are good at it or not. I wish my congregation wanted to sing. May I therefore affirm my high regard both for Mr. Hume, who did his honest best in a difficult position, and for the President, from whom we ask the superhuman but whose honest best is given us day by day in a far more difficult position. Let us smile away this incident. We must build up in all possible ways the confidence of our leaders. Great and terrible tasks lie before us.

Chiang's Help Held Sought By MacArthur

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9 (AP).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur wanted to use Chinese troops in the fight against Korean Communists as early as last September, Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr., (R., Pa.) disclosed last night.

The Congressman, who directed Thomas E. Dewey's presidential campaign as chairman of the Republican National Committee, said MacArthur told him he was hoping for authority to put into action not only the Nationalists on Formosa but also their guerillas on the Chinese mainland.

Scott said 600,000 Nationalist troops on Formosa and a million undercover fighters in China stood ready to "divert the Chinese Communists from their attacks on us in Korea."

President Truman, he said, prevented the Nationalists from going into action when he ordered the United States Seventh Fleet to neutralize Formosa and bar any resumption of the Chinese civil war with the Reds at the time of the North Korean invasion.

Scott proposed that Chinese troops be transferred to the mainland from Formosa in American ships now and asked that MacArthur be given authority to attack and bomb the Chinese Reds in Manchuria.

He reiterated a demand that Secretary of State Dean Acheson and "his proteges" be replaced by statesmen to whom the Nation could look for a "truly national" foreign policy.

As Acheson's "proteges" he named Ambassador at Large Philip C. Jessup, Assistant Secretary of State Dean Rusk and John J. Muccio, Ambassador to the Republic of Korea.

Turks, 2d Division, Get Defense Credit

TOKYO, Dec. 9 (AP).—A hard-fighting Turkish brigade and the United States Second Division were officially credited today with saving the United States Eighth Army from encirclement and defeat when Chinese Reds unleashed a powerful counteroffensive on November 27.

A message of praise issued by Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker said the "Turkish brigade with the Second Division provided the initial delay of enemy forces needed to prevent encirclement" of his Eighth Army.

How To MAKE MONEY out of "COLLECTOR'S ITEMS"

THE "collector's items" we refer to are the things that you've collected . . . and that are now collecting dust in your attic, basement or closets.

In spite of the fact that they are articles you no longer need, they can be useful again as a source of extra cash for Christmas shopping. To get this money, all you have to do is sell these items through Post classified ads.

You'd be surprised at the number of people who can use and will buy things that have outlived their usefulness for you. Furniture, toys, refrigerators, fur coats and musical instruments are only a few of the items sold every day through the classified columns of The Washington Post.

Readers selling their "collector's items" through Post want ads not only get the extra cash we mentioned above. They get back lots of valuable space which can be used right now for storing Christmas presents.

You'll be glad to know that Post want ads are economical, effective and easy to place. Simply call NAtional 4200 and ask for Classified. A trained ad writer will help you word your ad for maximum results. And if you're a phone subscriber, just say "Charge it."

For extra Christmas cash, sell those "collector's items" by calling NAtional 4200 today.

Peiping Warns Britain About Malaya Chinese

LONDON, Dec. 9 (AP).—Communist China accused Britain tonight of persecuting Chinese living in Malaya and warned that Britain "will have to bear responsibility for all consequences."

In a New China News Agency dispatch broadcast by Peiping Radio, the Red Chinese declared:

"The British Government has on numerous occasions expressed its desire to establish friendly and diplomatic relations with China. Yet it deprives Chinese in Malaya of their rights to express their patriotic feelings and their rights of domicile and their very existence."

The broadcast was another in a series of increasingly bitter attacks on the British by the Chinese Communists.

2 Conventions This Week Due To Draw 7000

Two conventions with a total attendance that may exceed 7000 are scheduled here this week.

The Southeastern Regional Restaurant Convention will open a four-day session on Tuesday at the Statler Hotel. Under the sponsorship of the Washington Restaurant Association, the convention is expected to draw between 5000 or 6000 to its exposition and meetings.

One of the more interesting features will be the Culinary Art Show, exhibiting fancy and decorative foods. The show will be open to convention delegates on Wednesday and to the public on Thursday at 1:30 p. m.

Exhibits on food processing and preparation, and demonstrations of the most modern kitchen equipment will be opened on Wednesday morning at 10 and continue until Thursday at 5:30 p. m.

"The Perfect Dinner" (at $12.50 a clip) will be served to the delegates on Friday at 8 p. m. in the Presidential and Congressional rooms. Jack Morton and his orchestra will play for the evening's entertainment.

Also here this week is the golden anniversary meeting of the Society of American Foresters. The four-day meeting, with an expected attendance of 1000, will start at the Mayflower Hotel December 13.

Foresters Expect 1000

Foresters from all parts of the country will gather at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday to present their views on "American Forestry in the Twentieth Century."

The golden anniversary meeting of the Society of American Foresters is expected to draw 1000 members and guests, Charles F. Evans, president of the society, said.

At the first general session the group will look back on the progress of forestry since 1900. The society will try to anticipate developments in the next half-century at its final meeting, Saturday morning.

In addition to the two general sessions, the convention will hold separate meetings on items such as forest recreation, forest economics, forestry education and watershed management.

At the convention's banquet on Friday night the Sir William Schlich memorial medal will be awarded to the person contributing most to forestry during the past 50 years.

A Tough Job of Selling Faces Truman and Attlee

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

NOW that the Truman-Attlee talks are over, the two men will have to show their mettle as leaders.

They must persuade their people to make unparalleled peacetime sacrifices to meet an "unparalleled danger." They must speed production, put more of their young men into uniform, and telescope into one year or two the rearmament that might otherwise have required three or four.

The President and Prime Minister will have to do all this in the name of peace, and with the plea that they are preserving peace, although their military and civilian advisers see less and less prospect of averting war in the end.

What faces the two elected leaders is nothing less than mobilizing the will power and the spirit of their peoples. It is a tall order for men who lack the commanding stature of their great predecessors of the grim war years. It will be at least as hard as winning an election campaign against odds, as both Truman and Attlee showed they knew how to do within the last two years. It will certainly be harder than sitting at the Cabinet table in the White House and talking, as friends and partners, about the sudden crisis in the Far East.

The conversations in Washington last week made it clear that the United Nations forces would fight on in Korea as long as they could. But the talks left much else uncertain, for the simple reason that it was not known, up to the time Attlee left town, whether the Chinese would stop at the thirty-eighth parallel.

If the Chinese armies did not stop, the record of the United Nations would be kept clean even if all Korea were lost. There would be no full-scale war against China which would leave Europe undefended; there would be no "limited war" of air bombing, although there might have to be a naval blockade to enforce economic sanctions.

If, by some sudden and unforeseen shift of tactics, the Chinese Communists decided to stop at the old South Korean boundary, the western powers would have to face up to the prospect of negotiating, probably over Formosa as well as Korea. But this had not been settled by the weekend. The one thing that was certain, in the aftermath of the defeat in Korea, was that rearmament would have to be speeded up, here and abroad, so that within a year or eighteen months there would be a better prospect than now of defending western Europe. This was the challenge to the leadership of the President and the Prime Minister, and this was the overriding task that faced the two men as they said goodbye.

At first sight it would look as if Attlee had the easier job. His government has a paper-thin majority of only five votes in a House of Commons of 625 members, but he is sure of bipartisan support for his policies in the House.

The night before he flew to Washington, Attlee telephoned to Winston Churchill, with whom he had served as Deputy Prime Minister through wartime crises much worse than this one. He asked whether Churchill didn't want to see him to talk over the subject matter of the Washington meetings. Churchill thanked him, but said, "There's no need to." The leader of the Opposition was confident that Attlee would speak for the whole House and the whole country.

It will be the least of Attlee's troubles to report to the House when he returns, and to win the support or acquiescence of a minority in his own Labor Party who are pacifist by nature and training, who yearn for friendship with Russia and are stubbornly suspicious of American policy in the Far East and elsewhere. Yet Attlee's immediate task is more serious than this parliamentary unity would suggest.

The real challenge to the Prime Minister's leadership will come from the weariness of the British people regardless of party. The British have just begun to emerge from years of self-imposed restraint, of drab austerity, first in the war years and then in the even more depressing years that followed. They have been groping through a long, dark tunnel, and have just come out into the light of easier living, of fewer inconveniences, of hope for a happier future. Will they be willing to go into the tunnel again? Will they sweat to make guns and planes, to restore civil defense, to pay still bigger taxes and perhaps work longer hours, to see their social services retarded once more by military needs?

No one who knows the British people doubts what their answer will be if the alternatives are told them clearly. But no one who has seen them since the war, year after year, can doubt that they are physically tired, psychologically unprepared for a vast new effort, and spiritually cast down at the thought of another war.

It may be that Attlee, with his quiet and undramatic ways, is better attuned to their

Our Bipartisan Front Cracks Noisily

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

AN almost party-line search for a national scapegoat was in progress at the Capitol last week.

More than anything else, that explains those strange tones you heard on the congressional calliope.

In the face of a grave national emergency, the "Loyal Opposition" of World War II days gave way to an ominous cleavage on conduct of foreign affairs, with slightly more than political overtones.

Bipartisan foreign policy, born in just such another emergency, plunged to its lowest estate since its bitter trial in the political campaign leading up to November 7.

Was it on the way out at the moment the Nation needed biparty solidarity most? Or was this the inevitable blowing off of steam that is part and parcel of the democratic process?

These questions were seriously asked as Republicans (1) clamored for the scalp of Secretary of State Dean Acheson; (2) called a conference to make it a party issue; (3) demanded a report forthwith on the Truman-Attlee conference, and (4) practically made "consultation" the price of their cooperation.

Did it mean Congress would face this gravest crisis since Pearl Harbor politically divided? Or would ranks promptly close, as they always have in this country, when the Government has decided on a course of action against aggression and unveils it to the world?

The fact that the questions were even raised betokened plenty of reason for concern.

Explanations for the blowoff, if that was all it was, were a dime a dozen.

This country isn't used to losing wars, or even battles. Legislators were bombarded with letters and telegrams trying to pin the blame, or asking Congress to pin it.

Pending submission of a full blueprint for meeting the crisis, Congress itself was operating in a vacuum. Almost leaderless, it did what a confused Congress almost always does in such a situation—made a lot of noise.

As for Republicans themselves, they had already set up Acheson as the Administration whipping boy in their November campaign. Now they hoped to close in for the political kill.

Over and above all of these factors was one emergent political fact. The Republican Party, out of power nationally for nearly 18 years, is hot on the 1952 scent and loath to drop the trail even in an emergency.

Senator George D. Aiken (Vt.), one of the handful of Republicans who is a little uncertain about the timing of the attack, summed up the situation this way:

"It is extremely unfortunate that a presidential campaign and what may be the opening stages of World War III had to get under way at the same time!"

Scapegoat for a Scapegoat

IF DEMOCRATS were almost stoically silent during the Republican attack, it wasn't merely because they are reluctant to take up an organized defense of Acheson.

Some of them have their own private candidates for scapegoat, suspect the more enthusiastic Republicans of pushing Acheson in the line of fire to save Gen. Douglas MacArthur from possible sniping.

One influential Democrat, who was never an Acheson rooter, is advising Republican friends they had better think twice before taking a formal party stand on the Secretary of State.

"A lot of Democrats have been very reluctant to bring up the name of General MacArthur," he said. "We don't think this is the time to blame anyone for what's happened.

"But just as surely as Republicans try to fix all the blame on Acheson, Democrats will break their silence on MacArthur. Some of us are prepared to document a case that the general exceeded his instructions.

"In the process, two men instead of one might be hurt or destroyed. Neither party would make any political hay out of that and such a debate would surely weaken us nationally."

'China Bloc' a Factor

NO MINOR factor in the Republican foreign policy attack is the so-called "China bloc," which long before the Korean conflict demanded aid and support of Chiang Kai-shek, even if it meant engaging in all-out war on the Chinese mainland.

Some of the more extreme members of this group, before such a move became unfeasible, favored mounting a drive to Peiping if possible to restore Chiang to power.

This bloc always represented a minority in the Republican Party, nor has it gained party ascendancy in the present crisis. Recent variations of its original proposals, such as blockade of the China coast, defense of Formosa, use of Chiang's troops if needed and a strict no-appeasement policy, have picked up more strength in both parties.

In this category, there is more congressional support for a defensive stand against the Chinese Communists and even retaliatory air attacks directed at the Chinese "war potential." But if a Capitol poll were conducted today, it is doubtful that a corporal's guard could be mustered for all-out war on the Chinese mainland.

The China bloc tail still isn't wagging the Republican dog, but some of its leaders have been most vocal in the recent foreign policy attacks.

SENATOR H. ALEXANDER SMITH
. . . "I guess I'm an optimist"

SENATOR GEORGE D. AIKEN
. . . "It is extremely unfortunate"

SENATOR STYLES BRIDGES
. . . "The absolute minimum"

Republican moderates, on the other hand, are saying that they are not demanding that the Administration embrace Chiang or seek to restore him to power.

Senator Styles Bridges (N. H.), one of the most influential members of his party, for example lays down only two conditions to "unity" on any policy formulated: (1) That we refuse to recognize the Chinese Communist government, and (2) keep it out of the United Nations.

"That's the absolute minimum for compromise," Bridges told reporters. "You'll never get bipartisan unity on any policy short of that."

Actually, the major Republican foreign policy beef is the familiar plaint that has echoed down the years since the Roosevelt Administration—non-consultation.

Republicans say they want to be called in "before" the policy is announced, and participate in the formulation of it. The mechanics of such an operation has always baffled the Administration, which has usually substituted consultation "after" the fact.

Bridges says the whole issue could be removed if the President would simply call in the ranking members of the Foreign Relations, Armed Services and Appropriations Committees, along with the Republican leaders, "and ask what we think should be done."

Some party leaders, however, are advocating a more complicated procedure that would require a report back to a full conference of Republican legislators before any leader could presume to speak with authority for his party.

It's on points such as this that the perennial demands for "consultation" bog down, and probably will continue to. Democrats retort angrily that Republicans aren't running the Government—yet; that they haven't any constitutional right "to tell us what to do."

FDR Welcomes New Running Mate

THIS is the twenty-eighth of 31 installments of letters selected from "F.D.R.: His Personal Letters," edited by Elliott Roosevelt and just published by Duell, Sloan & Pearce.

Today's letters begin with a discussion of White House-Capitol Hill relations in March, 1944, and conclude with the Quebec Conference in September of that year. In between, they touch on the Allied "unconditional surrender" policy; the rise of Tito in Yugoslavia; the rift and reconciliation with Alben Barkley; Harry S. Truman's nomination for the Vice Presidency, and the Hurley-Nelson mission to China.

F.D.R. to Patrick H. Drewry in Washington.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
March 7, 1944

Dear Pat:

That is a mighty nice letter of yours to which I say "Amen." I can assure you that I am doing everything in my power to re-establish a harmony of action, as well as of purpose, between the Congress and the Executive—especially among us Democrats.

As you say, there is no unyielding conflict on this matter except among a very small number of people who would rather nail my hide on to the barn door than win the war.

I pay no attention to some of the things that are said about me or my family on the floor of both Houses—especially by those who insist that I would like to stay in the White House for many unworthy reasons.

You who view things calmly will understand when I say that I would give a great deal personally to return to Hyde Park and Georgia just as soon as the Lord will let me.

And, in the same way, having leaned over backward to be constitutional all my life, I find myself confronted with the provision that when formal legislation is sent to me for approval or disapproval, I have to use my own conscience and, if I veto it, I am required to send it back to the House of origin with my reasons for the disapproval.

I think you know that I have sent more bills back to the Congress without my approval than any other President. That is true not merely for 11 years but it is true year by year. And the percentage of vetoes overridden is extremely low.

Neither you nor I nor the overwhelming majority of Democratic Members of the House are voting because of partisan or political reasons—even in this year. That, however, is not true in the Republican Minority or among a small number of the Democrats.

I know you will realize some of the real troubles which are passed on to me. For instance, the Soldiers' Vote Legislation, as it stands today, denies the vote to the overwhelming majority of the ten million men in our armed forces. Frankly, I do not think that that is good in a democracy. It will come to me soon and if I veto it I am not going to be rough or impolite toward anybody. I will not say that the Democratic Party has missed a great chance to pin the blame on the Republican Party. My "advice and counsel" was never asked by the Senate or the House! I think I had a way out—but I fear it is too late now!

We must never forget that the Republicans are in the midst of a campaign to sow discord among us.

I do hope you will run down and see me some day. I am most anxious to talk with you about the Congressional campaign. I will do all I can to help.

As ever yours,

Representative Drewry of Virginia had expressed his happiness at F.D.R.'s telegram to Senate Majority Leader Barkley urging the latter to reconsider his resignation. In the Congressman's opinion, a similar conciliatory approach to the House membership would go a long way toward unifying Democratic ranks. On March 31, the President allowed the soldier vote bill to become law without his signature, because in his judgment it was wholly inadequate to assure servicemen "as far as is practically feasible the same opportunity which they would have to vote if they were at home."

F.D.R. to Benjamin V. Cohen in Washington.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
March 13, 1944

Dear Ben:

That is a tremendously interesting analysis—and I think a very just one.

You have only left out one matter—and that is the matter of my own feelings! I am feeling plaintive.

As ever yours,

Ben Cohen, at this time general counsel of the Office of War Mobilization, sent the President a memo in which he had set forth, from the point of view of someone sympathetic with the President's program, some of the difficulties which would confront the Administration during a fourth term. He suggested, if bipartisan agreement could be obtained on foreign policy, that F.D.R., instead of running for a fourth term, become the chief executive officer of the postwar United Nations organization.

F.D.R. to Cordell Hull.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
April 1, 1944.

Memorandum for the Secretary of State:

I think this should be handled differently. It would be a mistake, in my judgment, to abandon or make an exception in the case of the words "unconditional surrender." As a matter of fact, whom do we mean those words to apply to? Evidently our enemies.

In August, 1941, at the time of the Atlantic Charter, and in January, 1943, at the time of Casablanca, Hungary, Bulgaria, Rumania and Finland were the Axis satellites. But they were not our enemies in the same sense that Germany and Italy were. These four little satellite states were enemies under the duress of Germany and Italy.

I think it a mistake to make exception. Italy surrendered unconditionally but was at the same time given many privileges. This should be so in the event of the surrender of Bulgaria or Rumania or Hungary or Finland. Lee surrendered unconditionally to Grant but immediately Grant told him that his officers should take their horses home for the Spring plowing. That is the spirit I want to see abroad—but it does not apply to Germany. Germany understands only one kind of language.

F.D.R.

In their peace discussions with the Finns, the Russians had abandoned the principle of unconditional surrender. Anthony Eden used this to raise the issue with us once more, and to inquire whether it would not be wise to modify the principle insofar as the Axis satellites were concerned. Eden was supported in this by the Russians.

A second memo on this subject follows:

F.D.R. to Cordell Hull.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
April 5, 1944.

Memorandum for the Secretary of State:

I have your memorandum of April fourth in regard to exceptions to be made to the satellite Axis states in Europe. I understand the problem thoroughly but I want at all

F. D. R. accepted the fourth term nomination in a radio speech from his railroad car at a Pacific Coast naval station, July 20, 1944. Next day he wired congratulations to Harry S. WORLD AFFAIRS

France's Young Premier a Business-Like Patriot

By Margaret Biddle

Mrs. Biddle, European editor for the Cowles publications and now living in Paris, was formerly the wife of Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., American Ambassador to the seven Allied governments in England during the war

WHO IS this Rene Pleven, France's Prime Minister?

He is young — 49 — a mere youngster in the French political area. He is a brilliant businessman; for 13 years he worked for an American company, learning American methods and efficiency. Starting at the bottom, he worked his way up to an important executive position. He is a courageous, fighting patriot; in 1940, a few days after the fall of France, he joined the Free French resistance forces.

Pleven was born in Rennes, Brittany, on the north coast of France. His father was chief of the faculty of the St. Cyr School — the West Point of France. His mother has written lyrics for many well-known songs.

Pleven was graduated as a doctor of law when he was 20, later received a diploma in political science. At an early age he married Anne Bompard, the daughter of a brilliant lawyer. They have two daughters, both of whom graduated with highest honors from Bryn Mawr College in America. Both daughters are now married and Pleven has six grandchildren.

Pleven has a keen sense of humor and likes to make terrible puns, which are the worse when he makes them in his perfect English (he is well read in American literature). He is fond of walking, croquet and reading. In the most tempestuous times he does not lose his appetite (he has a weakness for good food), and he can always sleep.

He is 6 feet 2, broad of shoulder and not overweight despite his excellent appetite. He wears glasses. He is always neatly dressed in conservative clothes, and he has a warm smile and piercing eyes.

Pleven is extremely understanding and tolerant of human weaknesses, but is adamant on principles. He has great respect for the intelligence and ability of women, and has made a woman, Mlle. Jeanne Sicard, his "Chef de Cabinet." He is very sensitive and therefore unfailingly polite to others.

FROM 1926 until the outbreak of war in September, 1939, Plevin was European director of the Gary interests of Chicago, which included the Automatic Electric Co. of Antwerp, the Autelco Mediterreania A. D. Milan and the International Automatic Electric Co. While with Gary he spent much time in America and also lived from time to time in Canada, England, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Berlin, Italy and Belgium. He is a great admirer of American methods and American efficiency.

When war broke out he gave up his business position and became a member of the French mission to the United States, of which Jean Monnet was also a member. In this capacity he worked on a plan for the organization of the American Air Force.

On June 22, 1940, three days after the fall of France, he joined the French resistance movement under General De Gaulle. Shortly thereafter he and General LeClerc flew to French East Africa. Pleven and LeClerc were close personal friends and in some ways had similar characters.

This flight of LeClerc's was history-making, as out of it was born LeClerc's famous African army, and also out of it, through Pleven's personal persuasion, was created the Free French districts in Africa. He alone talked the district leaders into throwing in their lot with the resistance movement. Many important airfields used by the Allies were in this territory.

PLEVEN became secretary general of Free French Africa. He ordered the construction of the strategic 600-mile route from Fort Lamay to Bangui, which was the point of departure for LeClerc's army. He also ordered the construction of the Fort Lamay airfield, which was a turntable for Allied planes.

IN JANUARY, 1941, Pleven was called to London, where he served in various capacities under De Gaulle. He was one of the few men who did not "yes" the general and who held out for his own opinions when he felt the general was wrong. They had many a battle, but it gave De Gaulle great respect for Pleven. And many a Sunday Pleven took out his stored-up temper on the croquet balls.

Pleven also had battles with the British for things he needed for Free French Africa. At one time he asked for bright-colored calico and beads for the native workers. The British apparently did not quite see why, in the days of great war production, mere baubles should be given much consideration. Eventually Pleven persuaded them that people work for something they want, and that calico and beads were what they wanted in Africa.

In August, 1942, Pleven became vice president of the French National Committee and Commissioner for Economy, Finance, French Overseas Territories, Merchant Marine and Foreign Affairs.

When the French Committee of National Liberation was formed in Algiers in June, 1943, Pleven was appointed Minister of French Overseas Territories. After the liberation he was appointed Minister of Finance and later Minister of National Economy.

After De Gaulle's retirement from the political picure, Pleven decided to continue his political career rather than return to business; he felt it his patriotic duty. He is a member of the UDSR party, and as such was elected deputy from his native district, Rennes, in Brittany.

He owns a local four-page weekly, Le Petit Bleu, and before he became Prime Minister he used to write its editorials. They were very outspoken comments on current questions and were quoted in many Paris newspapers and on the radio. There have been many cartoons of him wearing the native Breton hat with streaming ribbons and carrying under his arm Le Petit Bleu.

IN 1949, Pleven became Minister of Defense, and as such has fought steadily for measures for the defense of France. At his insistence the Assembly has voted big military credits and has decreed 18 months of military service with no exemptions except for illness. He has taken pains to see that all materials from America were unloaded without a hitch.

Last July 12, Pleven became Prime Minister. He has extremely simple tastes and still lives in his modest apartment rather than in the beautiful but pompous Hotel Matignon, the Prime Minister's residence. His personal life is unchanged.

He has been one of the most active fighters against the Communists, yet they respect him. He recently dismissed a group of 28 Communist mayors and he has been instrumental in closing several Communist newspapers.

He is a strong adherent of the Atlantic Pact and a strong backer of the Schuman Plan for the economic union of Europe. His business experience in Europe qualifies him to carry out this program.

He backs strongly the electoral reform which would give the French people proper representation, diminishing Communist strength and thus enabling France to have a stable government. This electoral reform will be presented to the Assembly this month.

Many are asking what we can expect of France in the present Russian-made world crisis. The answer is that as long as France has a leader of Rene Pleven's caliber, we can count on France doing her share.

cost to prevent it from being said that the unconditional surrender principle has been abandoned. There is real danger if we start making exceptions to the general principle before a specific case arises.

We all know that this would happen if we were to make any exceptions to the principle which would thereafter apply in all cases.

I understand perfectly well that from time to time there will have to be exceptions not to the surrender principle but to the application of it in specific cases. That is a very different thing from changing the principle.

If the Soviet and British governments will advise us of any case of this kind, I am quite sure that we will agree with them. This should be made clear to both of these governments. Then they cannot accuse us of having rendered more difficult the Soviet military task.

F.D.R.

Hull had replied to F.D.R.'s memo of April 1 that he feared the Soviets would not understand our refusal to go along with the viewpoint of the British and Russian governments.

F.D.R. to Winston Churchill (cablegram)

THE WHITE HOUSE,
May 18, 1944.

To the Former Naval Person:

I am delighted with your telegram to Marshal Tito and I wish you would tell King Peter that I am heartily in accord. I sent him yesterday a letter in reply to a very nice letter I had from him.

Incidentally, do you remember my telling you over a year ago of my talk with Peter in which I discussed the possibility of three nations in place of the one, he to be the head of a reconstituted Serbia. This created no excitement on his part or that of Pouritch.

The King, with real fire in his eyes, remarked that he was a Serb. I think that you and I should bear some such possibility in mind in case the new government does not work out. Personally I would rather have a Yugoslavia, but three separate states with separate governments in a Balkan confederation might solve many problems.

ROOSEVELT.

It had become clear to the British observers who had been parachuted into Yugoslavia that the Partisans, under Marshal Tito, would come into control of the country as the Nazi armies were rolled back. Recognition had been withdrawn from the Chetniks, headed by Gen. Draga Mikhailovitch, which in many areas were collaborating with the Germans; and considerable supplies were now being dropped to the Partisans. Britain and the United States were trying to effect a compromise between King Peter and Tito. The Royal Yugoslav government in London, headed by Dr. Pouritch, had backed Mikhailovitch, and Tito would not deal with it. On May 19, Pouritch was ousted and Peter asked Dr. I. Subasitch to try to form a new government which could negotiate with Tito. Subasitch agreed on condition that Mikhailovitch be dropped as Minister of War.

F.D.R. to Donald M. Nelson.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
May 22, 1944.

Memorandum for Hon. Donald M. Nelson:

From several parts of the country I get reports that very few people on the farms have been able to get radio batteries. It is said that 50% of the farmers have no radio because they cannot get radio batteries.

What would you think of putting on a campaign to provide more radio batteries by this summer so that people can listen in to the political debates?

If you can do this, I suggest that you personally take credit for it—on the air!

F.D.R.

Nelson replied in June that he had pushed civilian claims as far as he had any right to in light of military shortages, and that the real answer lay in higher production of all types of batteries.

F.D.R. to Alben Barkley in Washington.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
May 31, 1944.

Dear Alben:

I do hope your Missus is feeling better and that her stay at home will be of real benefit. Washington, of course, is no place for anyone during the summer and I am glad she was able to get away. Do, please, give her my very warm regards.

As ever yours,

Senate Majority Leader Barkley had taken his wife home to Paducah for the summer. F.D.R.'s relations with Barkley had just come through a rough period. The President had vetoed a tax bill on February 27, describing it as one which provided "relief not for the needy but for the greedy." Barkley regarded this as a reflection on his own integrity as well as on that of other members of Congress, and resigned his leadership. F.D.R., who had only the highest regard for Barkley, while not retreating in his views had urged the Kentucky Senator not to resign, and had asked Barkley's colleagues to reelect him, which they did by unanimous vote.

F.D.R. to Maury Maverick in Washington.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
June 5, 1944.

Dear Maury:

I think you are right about your subject, "Capitol Hill is a deadly place on Sunday." Why did you put "on Sunday?"

I am asking McReynolds and Harold Smith to look into it and see if we cannot do something about it. Capitol Hill certainly needs some good advertising and its own music is often so out of tune that it would be marvelous to have a real band play there!

Please burn this! I want no one to see it because some of the people on Capitol Hill are touchy and they might not appreciate your sense of humor.

Always sincerely,

Maury Maverick, colorful former Congressman from San Antonio and at this time chairman of the Smaller War Plants Corporation, wrote F.D.R. that the Capitol was a deadly place on Sunday. He said this was a serious matter because Sunday was the only time that hundreds of thousands of civilian Government employes and thousands of GIs could visit such places.

F.D.R. to Winston Churchill.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
July 14, 1944.

[F.D.R. memoed Hull: "I suggest the following be sent in my name to the Prime Minister but please correct or change it to suit your taste and send it through the Map Room. F.D.R."]:

From the President

To Former Naval Person:

I would not do anything in the world to cut down the supply of meat in England. Heavens knows that it is all ready quite short enough. We would do nothing to prevent your getting a new contract.

I hope, however, that you will, in very firm, clear, disgruntled tones of voice let Argentina know beyond a doubt that we are all fed up with her pro-Axis sentiments and practices. She is the only nation of North, Central or South America acting thus. I think it would help if you could instill this into their stubborn heads and, at the same time, get the meat contract.

ROOSEVELT.

We were exerting great pressure on Argentina to break her ties with the Axis, and were trying to prevail upon the British, who had large economic interests in Argentina, to back up this policy. Recall of their ambassador, however, was as far as the British were willing to go. They argued that they could not afford to jeopardize the source of one third of their meat imports.

The first meeting of F. D. R. and Harry S. Truman after their nomination in July, 1944, was at lunch under a magnolia tree on the White House lawn August 18

F.D.R. to George W. Norris in McCook, Nebr.

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL,
July 17, 1944.

Dear George:

Your telegram reached me on the train while I was only one State away from McCook on my way to the Coast. I don't think there is any possible danger of Willkie, though feelers were put out about a week ago.

I am honestly trying to keep out of the Vice Presidential contest which includes a score of active candidates and another score who have their lightning rods up and would like to be struck. The only thing I have done is to write a letter to Senator Jackson, the Permanent Chairman, expressing my close friendship for Wallace and telling the Convention that if I was a delegate I would vote for him. This dictatorship cry is silly, as you know, and there is more prejudice going around than ever before.

I do hope all is going well with you and that you are taking care of yourself.

As ever yours,

The Democratic convention was scheduled to open July 19. Norris had heard that Wendell Willkie might be the Democratic candidate for Vice President, and wrote F.D.R. expressing vigorous opposition to this. He still viewed Willkie chiefly as the foe of TVA.

The biggest issue in the Democratic convention was the Vice Presidential nomination, because everyone realized that the nominee had more than the normal chance of becoming President. Early in 1944, leaders of the regular organization, as well as liberals like Ickes and Rosenman, had told F.D.R. that Wallace's renomination would mean defeat of the ticket. In the intervening months there were many conferences on a possible substitute, with such names mentioned as Byrnes, Truman and Douglas. In the end, F.D.R. seemed to incline toward Truman.

F.D.R. to Harry S. Truman in Chicago (telegram).

SAN DIEGO,
July 21, 1944.

I send you my heartiest congratulations on your victory. I am, of course, very happy to have you run with me. Let me know your plans. I shall see you soon.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

F.D.R. to Joseph Stalin in Moscow.

SAN DIEGO,
July 21, 1944.

My dear Marshal:

Just as I was leaving on this trip to the Pacific, I received the very delightful framed photograph of you which I consider excellent. I am particularly happy to have it and very grateful to you.

The speed of the advance of your armies is amazing and I wish much that I could visit you to see how you are able to maintain your communications and supplies to the advancing troops.

We have taken the key island of Saipan after rather heavy losses and are at this moment engaged in the occupation of Guam. At the same time, we have just received news of the difficulties in Germany and especially at Hitler's headquarters. It is all to the good.

With my very warm regards, I am

Very sincerely yours,

The Russians, in June, had commenced major operations along the entire Soviet front in concert with our Normandy invasion, and Stalin's troops were now generally well into Europe.

F.D.R. to Chiang Kai-shek.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Aug. 19, 1944.

My dear Generalissimo:

This will introduce to you my two very good personal friends, General Hurley, former Secretary of War, and now a Major General; and Mr. Donald M. Nelson, the head of the War Production Board.

General Hurley is to be my personal representative on military matters and you can talk to him with the utmost freedom. His principal mission is to coordinate the whole military picture under you as Military Commander-in-Chief—you being of course, the Commander-in-Chief of the whole area—to help to iron out any problems of his own regarding the Burma campaign and is necessarily in close touch with Admiral Mountbatten.

Mr. Nelson was, as I have written you, the head of Sears Roebuck Company, the largest distributing company for all manner of goods—farm goods, industrial goods and household goods—the greatest business of that kind in the United States. As soon as we got into the war he came to the Government in charge of the War Production Board and has made a splendid record in multiplying American production many-fold, so that it has arrived at the point where we are talking not only of keeping the present production up, but of making plans for the restoration of this production to terms of peace. I think that you will find him extremely understanding and sympathetic.

He does not, of course, supercede the Secretary of the Treasury in matters of finance, but he has many original ideas and will quickly understand your economic policy.

In the case of both of them, I want you to feel free to talk to them frankly, as they are both literally my personal representatives.

Good luck—and keep up the good work.

Always sincerely,

Hurley was being sent to Chungking not only to promote better relations between the Generalissimo and Stilwell, but to obtain for Stilwell complete command of all armed forces, Chinese as well as American. The Chinese front was disintegrating in the face of a Japanese offensive, and F.D.R. hoped the attack could be halted if Stilwell were made supreme military commander.

F.D.R. to Harold L. Ickes in Bar Harbor, Me.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Aug. 24, 1944.

Dear Harold:

That article the other day in the Times was a real boner. The fact is that a month and a half ago I telegraphed to see whether Marshal Stalin would meet with me and Churchill in the near future. Stalin replied in a very nice tone that he could not possibly leave his army, which is now on the offensive, at this time but that he did want to meet with Churchill and me as soon as he could.

In view of this, I gave up all thought of a trip overseas to meet Mr. Churchill alone. There are several things which I do have to talk over with him because they relate to Anglo-American operations in the near future that do not concern Russia.

Therefore, very confidentially, I expect that Churchill will come to this hemisphere somewhere within the next two or three weeks—not Washington, D. C.

I have no thought of going to London, Paris, or to any point in that direction.

I expect to be here the day after Labor Day and will see you then.

Give my love to Jane and I hope that you are getting a real holiday.

Always sincerely,

The article in the New York Times was a United Press story from London that a conference between Churchill and Roosevelt on French soil would take place in a matter of weeks. F.D.R. was reported as "already packing his bags for the trip." The story added that the two leaders planned to be present at the triumphal march into Paris, if that was practicable. Hopkins had cautioned F.D.R. that a meeting with Churchill alone in Europe or England would be regarded widely as a political meeting with Russia deliberately left out. Instead of Europe, F.D.R. was suggesting that they meet in Bermuda. The conference was finally held in Quebec in September.

'Voiceless' India Speaks Up

This is the ninth background article in the 26-week "Information on World Affairs" program being carried out by The Washington Post and many junior and senior high schools in the area. Questions based on these articles and on current events are published each Thursday and presented in classrooms the same day. Answers are printed the following Saturday. The program is under the direction of J. Edward Gerald and Edgar B. Wesley of the University of Minnesota.

INDIA, for many years a voiceless nation, now is speaking up in world affairs.

Progress toward a place in the world has been slow, but at least the nation has begun to assert itself.

On the one hand, India has been a champion of Communist China's admission to the United Nations. On the other, she has accused Communists of promoting a "drift toward general war" in connection with the attack on Tibet.

India, through Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, has become a champion of independence for all—a sworn enemy of empires and colonies. In line with this policy, the recently established republic in the British Commonwealth (a different status from that of other nations in the British "family") put forward an offer to intervene for peace in the Korean conflict.

India has also supported the emergence of an Indonesian government and Nehru has conducted personal tours of Asian nations and called conferences of his Pacific neighbors in efforts to raise their status.

THESE ARE remarkable developments in the light of India's problems of the present and recent past, problems that may keep India from a dominant world position. For instance:

Differences with Pakistan, the geographically split nation within India, still have not been patched up. Notably, the dispute over Kashmir continues.

Religious factions are numerous, and the caste system (untouchables) still flourishes.

Millions are unemployed and live in unbelievable poverty; at least 80 million people are always hungry, and life expectancy is 23 years. Actually, it is reported that the relation of population and food supply is worse than it was 50 years ago.

The balance of trade needs improvement.

Agricultural methods are primitive.

Resources are for the most part undeveloped.

BUT INDIA still can point to accomplishments. Here are some items that are facts today:

Independence has been achieved after nearly 200 years of British domination.

Education is making inroads on many ancient, hampering beliefs, at least in some urban areas.

Agriculture is expanding. (There are great quantities of wheat and rice; the nation is second only to the United States in cotton; India is a leader in sugar and tobacco production.)

Industrial development is going ahead, but production still is relatively small. (Iron ore reserves are estimated at 3 to 20 billion tons, coal reserves at 36 to 60 billion tons; there are huge supplies of manganese and India has 49 percent of the world's bauxite; potential hydroelectric power is estimated at 27 million horsepower, exceeded only by the United States.)

As a military nation, India is showing progress. More than two million Indian troops, most of the Sikhs and Punjabis, were in uniform during World War II; there is a small but growing air force, and a navy is developing, with 40,000 Indian sailors on Allied merchant ships during World War II.

THERE IS MORE to the industrial picture. India is supplying from 50 to 70 percent of the Indian demand for steel, but still its output is less than that of Poland and one-sixth that of Japan. The production of finished steel rose from 124,000 tons in 1929 to 690,000 tons in 1938.

During World War II, India produced steel armor plate for the first time, and also heavy caliber guns, bombs, machine guns and barrels for anti-aircraft guns. Also on the production line were explosives, high-grade steels, some machine tools and machinery.

India's heavy chemical industry also developed during the past decade, with the production of sulphuric acid, synthetic ammonia, caustic soda, etc.

THREE PERSONALITIES dominate the recent history of India. Best known was the assassinated Mohandas K. Gandhi, author of the doctrine of non-violent resistance. Gandhi promoted civil disobedience—what amounted to a peaceful, nation-wide strike. He had a wide following among both educated and peasant classes and was the first great leader of the Congress Party, which today controls the Indian government.

To Gandhi must go most of the credit for cementing the forces for freedom and for building a feeling of nationalism among the Indians.

The second great leader is Nehru, who is recognized as being far more modern and progressive than his predecessor. He was the first to recognize that India's problem is a part of a world problem. His outlook always has been international. He, like Gandhi, spent many months in prison for inciting a break with Britain.

The third modern leader had a great deal to do with the establishment of Pakistan. He is Mohammed Ali Jinnah, who became president of the powerful Moslem League in 1934. He built up a mass following in opposition to the Congress Party, championed the rights of Moslems as opposed to Hindus, and demanded that areas where Moslems are in majority be detached as Pakistan.

PAKISTAN'S problems perhaps are greater than those of India. Pakistan is almost exclusively agricultural (having almost a monopoly on jute and vast acreages of wheat and rice.)

India, on the other hand, also is important as a great agricultural nation, but has most of the area's industry. Actually, the economies of the nations are interlocking, and if a solution could be found to religious and political problems both nations would be better off as one.

In the meantime, the world is taking notice at last of one of the oldest countries in the world, one whose civilization dates back more than 5000 years—a nation with more than 390 million people, one-fifth of all the human beings in the world.

Senor Santa's Having Hard Sledding in Mexico

By Ruth Mulvey

Miss Mulvey is a former Washington newspaper woman now working in Mexico City.

MEXICO CITY—About 10 years ago this month, a fat, friendly businessman in a red suit crossed the Rio Grande.

His name was Santa Claus.

Since then, he has become one of the most popular extranjeros who ever set foot on Mexican soil. The children of this country, who normally wait until the January 6 "Day of the Magi" for their presents, were particularly enchanted. So were a lot of Mexico's merchants.

Santa Claus brought some new customs to Mexico—the sending of Christmas cards, exchanging of presents and setting up of Chirstmas trees. His appearance in the show windows at Salinas y Rocha, Sears Roebuck, the Palacio de Hierro, the Puerto do Liverpool and other selling and buying centers caused a flood of letters at the Central Postoffice. They started out politely, "Muy estimado y fino Senor Santa Claus," and worked briskly into a long list of Spanish "I want's."

For the first few years, the novelty of the visitor and his exciting ideas won everybody. But last year reaction set in, and a number of officials and unofficial leaders have been working to have the visitor deported in favor of a return to the old ways of Christmas in Mexico.

FIRST STEP was a campaign inaugurated by Gen. Rodolfo Sanchez Taboada, president of the Partido Revolucionario Institucional (principal political party), to prevent the devastation of forests by Christmas tree vendors. The annual cutting of 150,000 arboles de navidad menaces the conservation program. What is more, he said, it is a "Protestant, Nordic and un-Mexican" custom.

Actually, there is considerable to be said for the general's argument to revive the traditional Mexican Christmas customs, which are among the most charming in the world.

Christmas in Mexico begins traditionally on December 16, when the first of nine "posadas" is held. A posada, which comes from the Spanish word for inn or shelter, is a party at which the journey of Mary and Joseph to Bethlehem is commemorated.

A posada is held by a family or a group of friends. The guests meet at a nearby house and go in procession to the home where the posada is to be held. They carry lighted candles and are preceded by several small children bearing a litter on which are clay figures of the Holy Family.

When they arrive at the home, they sing a stanza of the posada song in which they ask to be admitted. At first denied, the host admits them after much pleading in song when they finally say that the Virgin Mary is with them. Then the litter with the clay figures is put in a niche and all kneel before it and pray.

AFTER THIS, fiesta reigns. There is singing and dancing and plenty of Mexican food—sweet tamales and the cakes and meats which have been prepared for the occasion. The climax of the posada is the breaking of the pinata, a clay jug covered with tinsel and paper and fashioned in the form of bulls, birds, trees and, most popularly, a six-pointed star. The jar is full of candies and small gifts. A child is blindfolded and given a stick. He must break the pinata when it is swung aloft, releasing a shower of favors and sweets.

The posada differs slightly in various towns and regions. In small villages, it is usually held in the church, and all of the people participate in the single general fiesta. In the slum districts, the families who live in one building hold it in the large central patio. Posadas have now become commercialized, and in the capital and larger cities each business organization and social group holds one, with paid admission and dancing.

Other customs prevail in other places. In Oaxaca, the principal Christmas activity is the Feast of the Radishes on December 23, when the markets are filled with huge radishes cut into grotesque and artistic shapes. In Celaya, Queretaro and some of the other colonial towns, the European procession of floats still prevails.

THERE IS CONSIDERABLE preoccupattion with food and drink at this time of year. The Noche Buena beer, which is made only during December, is part of every fiesta, and so is the thick creamy "Rompope," which most of the local residents prefer to the thinner "tom'n Cheri," or the Northern eggnog bowl.

Christmas proper means mostly the midnight mass at the cathedral or church and the Christmas supper which folows, and which has as its chief constituents bean soup and a beet salad. In many homes, the purely Spanish supper of imported sweets and the famous codfish "bacalao" is served.

Christmas in Mexico also means the nacimiento—the lovely creches which are set up in every home. Pottery figures are sold on the streets and in markets. Although some are very expensive, the most charming are the simple ones which show Mary seated on a straw burro and Joseph wearing the sombrero of the Mexican peasant.

Ordinarily, the only present given on Christmas is a batch of bunuelos, paper-thin pancakes covered with a thick, sweet sauce and in some places served on dishes which are intended to be broken immediately after eating.

The passing of Santa Claus would still leave Mexico a very "tipic" Christmas. But those who have seen the crowds admiring the jolly fat man in the red suit on a dozen street corners doubt very much that Senor Santa Claus will leave after all.

Goering's Plane 'Joined' B-17s in Raid on Reich

By Richard K. O'Malley

FRANKFURT, Germany—Hermann Goering once flew in the middle of a United States bomber formation while it blasted a German aircraft factory to bits.

It was touch-and-go for the beefy Nazi Reichsmarshal, but his four-engined plane was unnoticed by B-17 crews busy dumping explosives on Passau late in 1944.

Guenther Fechner, radio operator aboard Goering's private plane for 11 years, says the Passau incident had him jumpy for a week.

Fechner, 47-year-old navigation and radio expert, was plucked from Lufthansa, the state-owned German airways system, and ordered to duty aboard Goering's plane. The slight, bespectacled German, now a teletype operator for Pan American Airways here, said it was a good job but that he preferred Lufthansa.

"I had flown a lot of transatlantic runs," he said, "and I won a national prize for drawing up flight charts on South American travel. Soon after that, they ordered me to serve under Goering."

FECHNER SAYS the flight with the B-17s was the result of a lag between ground and air communications.

"We had been warned that an American flight of bombers was over Germany, but were told it was north of us. Suddenly we found ourselves surrounded by bombers. Goering was in the co-pilot's seat, where he usually flew. Nobody said a word. We just held our breath.

"I think that we went unnoticed because we were flying a four-engined plane, too. Anyway, we had a grandstand seat for the bombing. Goering just sat there, pale and quiet. Finally we hit a cloud formation and managed to slip away. When we landed, Goering went into headquarters and shook up the ground communications system."

Fechner says Goering never flew anywhere without his valet, whose job it was to see that the proper medals were laid out for each stop. Goering always carried a couple of trunks full of uniforms in his plane.

THE FAT Nazi bigwig used to bustle like a brood hen before each trip, Fechner recalled.

"When he came aboard, he took over completely," said Fechner. "He fussed about packing, about the plane, about his uniforms and about food."

Goering always had a well-stocked pantry aboard his Focke-Wulf 200.

"At the rear of the plane he had a special, over-size sofa built so he could rest when he was not in the co-pilot's seat. It was a very fancy plane."

Goering, a World War I flier himself, grew nervous aloft and became angry if German fighter planes buzzed his ship. As his stature as a Nazi increased, his good nature decreased.

"We used to get along fine, but as the years went by he grew more and more formal. After his second marriage he gave up flying for nearly a year. We heard his wife didn't like flying."

FECHNER says Goering nearly always took a shot of morphine shortly after takeoff.

"It was a sort of open secret. He'd come aboard carrying a little box. After we were airborne, he usually went into the rear of the plane. Afterward he was always more agreeable, but sometimes he made weird requests. Sometimes he brought a nurse along and she would attend to giving him his drugs."

Goering did a lot of flying around Europe before the outbreak of the war, including junkets to Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Greece.

"Whenever we were in the Balkans, he put the medals on thick," Fechner said. "He always said that Balkan people were impressed by medals. His whole chest would be covered."

Goering frequently entertained aboard his plane. Among passengers who flew with him were Benito Mussolini, whom Fechner recalls as a "very insincere man and very cold;" Count Ciano, Mussolini's son-in-law, and the late King Boris of Bulgaria.

Although Goering and Hitler often were at odds, Goering shared Hitler's trait of not wanting to hear the truth.

"We had a colonel who had spent some time in America," Fechner continued. "He knew something of American production capabilities. But when he tried to tell Goering, it only made him angry. Goering didn't believe it and didn't want to hear it."

GOERING first got into serious trouble with Hitler as early as November, 1939, according to Fechner.

"He did not want war with England. He wanted to consolidate what Germany already had taken. One night we were told we were to fly to the Dutch border. Goering came aboard with a Swede, I can't remember his name. When we landed, the Swede got out and crossed the frontier. We understood he was headed for England to see if he could arrange an armistice.

"Von Ribbentrop got wind of it and told Hitler. We were ordered to return immediately and were told later that Hitler raised cain."

Although a leading Nazi, Goering never bothered to find out the politics of his airplane crew.

"I never was a Nazi," Fechner said, "but he never asked any of us. Maybe he took it for granted."

In the last days of the war, Goering kept plane and crew on a standby basis at his hunting lodge. Goering was in a rage when his Luftwaffe personnel was given guns and told to help the infantry.

When the final breakdown came, Goering jumped into a car and headed for Berchtesgaden. Russian planes were sweeping the sky and flying was unsafe. His crew flew to Berlin.

From there they went by foot and car to Berchtesgaden, where they were finally captured by United States troops.

Churchill Analyzes the Soviet Threat

By Winston S. Churchill

In a speech to the House of Commons, November 30

. . . Certainly we are in danger, but the danger is not new. It was visible in all its terrible potentials from the moment when the armies of democracy dispersed and melted away in the hour of victory while the armies of the Soviet oligarchy were maintained at an enormous strength and re-equipped to a very high degree, and when, on top of that, Russia imperialists, clothed in a new garb, advanced to carry the creed of communism and the authority of the Kremlin forth in every direction until some solid obstacle was reached . . .

There are two major differences between the state of the world after the first and after the second world wars. The sour aftermath of triumph in arms, however complete, brought with it in both cases many troubles. But after the first war, when the victors had disarmed the Germans and their allies, no powerful organized army remained upon the scene except the French army, whereas after the second war the armed might of Russia emerged steadily year by year, almost month by month, as a rock shows more and more above the ebbing tide.

The second difference, which arose out of the realization of the first, is that the United States, instead of retiring into isolation, instead of demanding full and prompt payment of debts and disinteresting herself in Europe, and even in the League of Nations, of which she was one of the founders, has come forward step by step as a knowledge of the situation dawned upon her, and has made the great counterpoise upon which the freedom and future of our civilization depend.

This fundamental change in the policy of the United States constitutes the best hope for the salvation of Christian civilization and democracy from Communist and Russia conquest and control . . .

THE WAR liberated Russia from her two preoccupations, Germany and Japan. Both these warlike nations inflicted terrible defeats and injuries upon Russia in the twentieth century. Now both have ceased to be military factors.

The years that have followed our victory have brought enormous increases of power and territory to Soviet Russia. In one form or another they have gained control of half Europe and all China without losing a single Russia soldier. They have every reason to be encouraged by the progress they have made, but they show no sense of being in any way satiated, satisfied, or even contented, and we can perceive no limits at present to their aims . . .

The time factor in some aspects is in our favor and in some it is adverse. The Soviets have hitherto, under the restraint of the immense United States superiority in the atomic sphere, and also by the consolation of the rapid and immense gains which they have made and are making in many directions without incurring any direct risk, been under restraint and control. They have repeatedly been assured that the United States would not fight what is called "a preventive war," the United States expressing the general opinion of the civilized world on this aspect.

On this basis the war, if it comes, and God forbid, will come at the moment of their choosing. It, however, should be noted that the two restraining or consoling arguments are both diminishing. The Soviet stockpile of atomic bombs is growing, how fast I do not know . . . and the Soviets must expect, while this stockpile is growing in their favor, more resistance to their expansion, and they will not find their progress so easy as in the past.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to prophesy what they will do, or when or how they will do it. One can only judge these matters by estimating what is in their interest. The great Duke of Marlborough quoted a saying in his day, "Interest never lies." There is no doubt that trying to put oneself in the position of the other party and seeing how things look to him is one way, and perhaps the best, of being able to feel and peer dimly into the unknown future.

This is, at any rate, the only guide, and it does not include accident, passion, folly or madness—madness which might arise from some error, blunder or from the results of some internal convulsion.

We are told that it is provocative to organize an Atlantic army with, as I see it, a European army inside it, and a German army on honorable terms inside that. It does not seem likely, however, that anything we can do in the next two years in Europe will reverse the balance of military power. We may be stronger but not in that time strong enough to deter, still less to prevail. There is plenty of room for us to get much stronger without altering the situation in Europe decisively. . . . .

Therefore, while it is right to build up our forces as fast as we can, nothing in this process will in this period deprive Russia of effective superiority in what are now called "the conventional arms." All it will do will be to give us increasing unity in Europe and magnify the deterrents against aggression, and perhaps give us the means of gradually approaching a situation when relations between world powers may express themselves in normal terms, and not be measured in the strange and novel methods of the atomic age.

DANGEROUS as it may be to make such a prediction—I make it in all good faith and without official knowledge—I would venture to express the opinion that a major attack by Russia in Europe is unlikely in the near future, and that it will not be provoked or produced by the modest measures of defense now being so slowly, tardily and ineffectively developed up to the present by the Atlantic and western powers.

Even if our preparations develop more rapidly, a long period must elapse before they can upset the Russian superiority, even if the Russian strength itself is not increased meanwhile.

It is upon this that I found my hope that we still have time, that there is still a breathing space for us to pursue the essential counterpart to any such hope—namely, to build up a more reasonable method of defensive strength.

That may be a vain hope. It is, at any rate, the working hypothesis of my thought in these anxious and agonizing times. Therefore I am in favor of efforts to reach a settlement with Soviet Russia as soon as a suitable opportunity presents itself, and of making these efforts while the immense and measureless superiority of the United States atomic bomb organization offsets the Soviet predominance in every other military respect and gives us the means to talk together in a friendly and dignified manner and at least as equals . . .

Truman Has Tougher Selling Job

present state of mind than a colorful leader like Churchill. One can only hope that he will present the situation to them, and to all the people of western Europe, in a way that will produce the right response.

HERE in the United States, the psychological and political setting is different. There is a good deal of belligerence in the country judging from the reaction to the news of the defeat in Korea. Telegrams and letters have poured into official Washington in the past week urging the Administration to "hit back" at the Chinese Communists, and to hit hard. If there should be a Dunkirk-like evacuation from Korea, with heavy American losses, the demand for stern action might be irresistible. And, if logic is any guide, it must follow that American labor and industry would respond to any demand the President might make upon them.

What distracts the President's advisers at the moment is, of course, the shrill criticism from Capitol Hill, the lack of bipartisan cooperation, the absence of any apparent unity whatever.

There has been no strong, steady current of congressional opinion in this crisis so far; the waters on the Senate side, at least, appear churned up in whirlpools and rapids as if no foreign policy could navigate them.

BUT the President has not yet reported to Congress on the seriousness of the situation. He has not yet reminded the members that Europe as well as Asia is a danger to American security because of its weakness against possible attack.

And he has not yet told Congress what he thinks it ought to do. It may be that when he outlines his program he will find Congress ready to do what an overwhelming majority undoubtedly wants to do—to stop the world-wide tide of Communist expansion and aggression.

If the President can harness this urge onto a program of action, and if the Prime Minister can give the British people a greater sense of the need for action, then both men will have shown that they can rise to real leadership.

High Hooper in the Red Zone

THE UNITED STATES again is unlimbering one of its best weapons against Soviet propaganda in Germany—humorous ridicule.

RIAS, the American radio station in Berlin, is reviving "Comrade Otto Pieckewitz," a clown who delights his listeners by arguing Communist ideology and propaganda slogans to their illogical and absurd conclusions.

For five months, "Comrade Pieckewitz" was on the air every Saturday in the role of a "200 percent Communist." RIAS discontinued the program September 16. Since then there has been an unending flood of letters from Soviet zone listeners demanding his return.

"He has helped us to remember how to laugh," is the tenor of the majority of letters.

An example of how the comrade operates is his description of the Soviet zone import-export program:

"We sell bricks to Italy in exchange for lemons. The lemons go to Denmark for butter. We trade the butter to Sweden for steel. We send the steel to Russia in exchange for clay which we use to manufacture more bricks for Italy . . ."

Foreign Policy Cleavage Hasn't Infected the House

Connally (D., Tex.), picturesquely summed up what will probably come of it.

"The hell with all that," said Connally.

With bipartisan relations deteriorating fast, the one man who could probably do something about it, ailing Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), won't be back at the Capitol until the pattern has crystallized.

Will it be a pattern of concord or discord?

Some of Vandenberg's disciples haven't yet abandoned hope.

"I guess I'm an optimist," said Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.). "Somehow the American people always get together in any crisis."

House Isn't Infected

CURIOUSLY, the almost party-line Senate quarrel over foreign policy hasn't yet been duplicated in the House.

Party leaders say it's too early to say that it won't be. But to date, at any rate, House Republicans and Democrats have been playing their foreign policy cards much as they have over the years.

House members, traditionally jealous of the Senate's constitutional role in foreign affairs, attribute the difference to something else: The Senate's "prima donna complex."

The session's first real foreign policy test will come this week when the Yugoslav aid bill goes to a House floor showdown. Preliminary surveys by party whips indicate preponderant approval of the measure.

Stepchild Grows Up

THE House rise in recent years to a position almost coequal with the Senate in foreign affairs received recognition last week in a completely new trend in committee competition.

For as long as any member can remember, the Ways and Means Committee and the Rules Committee have always been the blue ribbon units. Appointment to a seat on either committee was regarded as a top party plum. In contrast, the House Foreign Affairs Committee was a sort of a stepchild assignment, seldom vigorously contested.

Now the trend is strangely reversed. Hardly any contest has developed for the three Democratic vacaancies opening on the Ways and Means group in the Eighty-second Congress. Nor has the single vacancy on the once powerful Rules group created a stampede.

But the once spurned Foreign Affairs Committee, with three vacancies coming up, has many more applicants than it has seats. Some senior Democrats have offered to sacrifice high rank on other committees to take a junior place on the Foreign Affairs group.

Legislators attribute the shift in committee emphasis to three developments:

1. The Korean war, and the dominant foreign affairs note in the last campaign.

2. The politically unpopular tax role that now must be played for years to come by the Ways and Means unit.

3. Decline of the Rules group as the real masters of the House, with the 21-day rule enabling the House to bypass it.

Truman-Attlee

The Truman-Attlee communique reflects a fruitful meeting of minds as to Europe and rather serious disagreement on the Far East. There is no reservation whatever in their "complete agreement on the need for immediate action by all the North Atlantic Treaty countries to intensify their efforts to build up their defenses and strengthen the Atlantic Community." Both countries are to proceed "as rapidly as possible" to expand their military forces and speed up their production of weapons. Basic raw materials essential to defense of the free world are to be pooled and a supreme commander for the integrated force for the defense of Europe is to be appointed as soon as the NATO agreement is completed.

As to the Far East, however, the points of disagreement stand out much more sharply than the areas of mutual understanding. The President and Prime Minister agree that the principles of the United Nations must be upheld and that there should be "no thought of appeasement or of rewarding aggression." That reaffirmation of an old policy has some significance in the face of the Chinese Communist invasion of Korea. But it is seriously undercut by the statement that the United Kingdom still "considers" that a representative of the Central People's government "should occupy China's seat in the United Nations."

About the time this statement was being made the U. N. Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea was reporting that 26 Chinese Communist divisions have been "definitely identified" in Korea. The UNCURK has detailed evidence that the hordes which are directly assaulting the U. N. forces in Korea "form part of the armed forces of the Peoples Republic of China." So much for the fiction of volunteers. As the Peruvian delegate to the U. N. said yesterday in an eloquent speech, the Chinese invaders are "agents of subversive war." To reiterate a belief that a Chinese Communist representative should be seated at the U. N. in the face of this situation has the appearance of appeasement regardless of what the intent behind it may have been.

The President joined Mr. Attlee in keeping the door open to a peaceful solution of the Korean problem "by means of negotiations." "Every effort must be made," they said "to achieve the purpose of the United Nations in Korea by peaceful means and to find a solution for the Korean problem on the basis of a free and independent Korea." Their chief difference is over how far they should go in seeking a settlement, but that is a difference which may soon be rendered academic by events. If the Chinese show no disposition to halt their invasion, or to respect the anticipated cease-fire or withdrawal order from the U. N., the emphasis will necessarily be shifted to that part of the understanding which pledges the two countries to stand firmly together against aggression.

Voluntary Controls

Both Ford and General Motors have rejected Economic Stabilizer Valentine's request for a suspension of increases in 1951 passenger car prices. Zooming prices for raw materials and increased labor costs are cited by both companies as justification for the increases. The Ford reply, for example, notes that the RFC has just authorized a 32 per cent increase in the price of synthetic rubber and states that it is paying 120 per cent more for crude rubber and 17.5 per cent more for copper than before the Korean war—a reminder of the Government's failure to take any action to stabilize prices of strategic raw materials. Ford also points out that its production schedules have been sharply cut by shortages of raw materials and Government limitation orders. This means, of course, that its production costs per car will go still higher while profits on each car sold will decline.

The tenor of these replies confirms our belief that a rise in automobile prices cannot be halted by appeals for voluntary price controls. It may, however, be possible to persuade automobile manufacturers to forgo further price increases, provided they have positive assurance that mandatory price and wage controls will soon be invoked to prevent further increases in their production costs.

People jump too readily to the conclusion that companies with huge profits or greatly increased profits from sales can absorb increases in production costs and avoid price increases if they choose to do so. That may be the case in some instances, but a detailed analysis of individual unit production costs and unit profits is required to determine whether or to what extent such absorption is possible without reducing profits below levels yielding a fair return on invested capital. Any general freeze of automobile prices or any industry-wide limitation on increases to a fixed percentage of present prices would have most unequal effects on individual companies.

If a workable voluntary plan can be evolved at the meeting called this week to discuss the automobile industry's price problems it may pave the way for other voluntary agreements that will help to hold down prices until the Economic Stabilization Agency has assembled a staff to administer wage and price controls. We hope so, for Mr. Valentine is reported to have said that no general controls can be put into effect before spring. Meantime, the Administration will either have to rely on voluntary controls—a weak defense against spiralling prices—or mandatory controls applicable to a few industries that can be administered by an understaffed control organization.

NATO: Now Or Never

The cold facts of Communist aggression ought to bring an atmosphere of realism to the meetings of North Atlantic military chiefs and defense ministers in London this week. In a very real sense this may be the last chance the Atlantic allies will have to make meaningful the plans for common defense of western Europe. These plans are based upon the assumption that there will be time to build up integrated defense forces before Russia strikes. That is now a tenuous assumption at best. Its validity will depend in large measure upon the speed with which the NATO powers move to supply men and guns instead of talk.

Fortunately, the outlook seems good for agreement over Germany's place in the North Atlantic effort. The barrier in the disappointing talks here in October was French unwillingness to consider German rearmament except under conditions impossible of fulfillment. The reverses of the Korean war have had a sobering influence, however, and if they have dismayed Europeans they also may have convinced them that the Communists mean business. Reports from Paris say that the French cabinet has receded from its previous demands sufficiently to give promise of agreement over Germany.

In General Bradley's absence the choice of Admiral Sherman to represent the United States is an admirable one, for Admiral Sherman is a diplomat as well as a first-rate strategist. Briefly the American position may be stated as a conviction that it is now or never, and that the treaty powers must themselves come to basic agreement over the participation of German units before the United States can concur in the appointment of a supreme commander. The insistence that the commander have something to command before he is appointed is a reversion to the position held before the October meetings ran into the stone wall of French opposition.

Further, American military men contend that German troop units in the size of regimental combat teams must be self-contained and that the idea of international divisions should be ruled out because of command difficulties. Moreover, they believe that the German units must be regarded as cadres and that the way must be left open for the eventual formation of German divisions if the Germans prove their sincerity to the French. American planners do not exclude the possibility of a single European army under a common minister of defense, but they believe that this can be worked out by the Europeans themselves without delaying immediate rearmament on a less ambitious basis.

No one yet knows whether the Germans themselves will participate on Western terms—and the more dallying there is over conditions of German participation the higher the price the Germans may ask. Another question is the Russian attitude toward German participation. If the Soviets mean what they have said, they will not "tolerate" even joint forces if they are aimed at reviving the German regular army. This statement, which conveniently overlooks the Soviet-sponsored militarized east German police force, can of course mean anything they want it to mean. There have been plenty of statements of the American policy, which is strictly opposed to the creation of a German national army or general staff; the whole justification for German rearmament is participation in an integrated force which would preclude a separate German army. However, another declaration to make the Western position clear would not hurt.

Still another question is that of the American commitment of troops to western Europe. Prior to the Korean reverses the talk was of furnishing five to eight divisions relatively quickly. The timing of this commitment has necessarily been delayed; but nothing has altered the American conviction that Europe is the first target for defense, and the promise still stands as soon as the divisions are available. Meanwhile a great deal remains to be done in arranging a genuine division of labor on arms manufacture, and the time when national pride could be considered in this connection has long since passed.

The United States is going into the NATO talks hopefully, and in the belief that a strong stance in Europe attained quickly may deter the Russians. In a sense the success of NATO is a conundrum: NATO will become a going concern if the Europeans believe in it sufficiently to make it work, and they will believe in it if they are convinced it can be a going concern. Common danger ought to furnish the impetus. Nothing could be worse, however, than to delude either our own people or the Europeans with false hope. Europe is important to American security, but if there is not the will to make NATO work immediately, then the United States must rely upon other means of building its strength.

Civil Defense Money

Three billion dollars is an amazingly small sum to be asking for civil defense at a time when the military budget is well over 10 times that amount. The explanation is that the civil defense fund plan presented to Congress Monday, only 54 percent of which would be borne by the Federal Government, is concerned largely with personal defense against attack. It contains none of the elaborate strategic dispersal plans so often mentioned; some two thirds of the money would be devoted to the construction of air-raid shelters. The figure is an extremely realistic one, erring, if at all, on the conservative side. That, plus the fact that the start on civil defense has been almost criminally slow, is added reason for Congress to lose no time in voting the funds.

Quite properly, States and local communities are expected to provide nearly half the $3,100,000,000 themselves. The Federal Government will construct control centers down to the State level and will assume the whole cost of stockpiling regional medical and engineering supplies. It will share the cost of building communal-type shelters and acquiring special fire and rescue equipment. Communities themselves will be expected to pay all administration costs.

One virtue of the plan coming at this time is that it should end the cry that communities have no guidance on finance from the Federal Government. In some instances this has been a plausible reason for not going ahead, but in many others it has been a convenient excuse. Now cities know precisely what help they can expect from the Federal Government.

States themselves will be vital intermediate agencies in civil defense. It is both significant and disturbing that only eight States so far have voted appropriations for civil defense. If the need is to be met with anything like the urgency that the international situation demands, then special sessions of Legislatures may well be in order. The District of Columbia, of course, must depend wholly upon the Federal Government for its civil defense funds. Perhaps the recommendations of the National Security Resources Board and the knowledge that the District has not yet purchased a single warning device will spur Congress into enlarging the appropriation that it so injudiciously pared last summer.

Coincidentally with the NSRB request, the President has appointed former Gov. Millard F. Caldwell, jr., of Florida as the new director of civil defense. This appointment, and the proposal to give the Civil Defense Administration operating powers, should help the civil defense program get rolling on the administrative side. For its part Congress must recognize that preparations for elementary civil defense are quite as important as the military aspects of defense—and must come just as fast.

Arming Japanese

Total Diplomacy Department:

The President at his last press conference was asked whether a decision had been made to "use" Japanese manpower. There was a noncommittal response, and the offense lay only in the question, which, of course, got wide circulation in Japan. The reaction could well be imagined without reporting it; the Japanese didn't care to be referred to by implication as tools of the Americans. It is five years since the Japanese surrender, and since then the world has changed radically, yet there was no recognition of the transformation in the question addressed to the President.

The same blind spot as this incident showed was evident in the talk three months ago about rearming the Germans. Nobody bothered to find out ahead of time what the Germans thought of it. It was taken for granted that they could be enlisted on our terms—as if they were tools. Now we know differently, and so we shall find that the Japanese have a mind of their own and a sense of their own dignity This is necessary to take into account as we seek their active help in forwarding our purposes.

Prince Georges Surplus

With schools in Prince Georges County straining at the sills and crying for unavailable money to expand, county residents are logically asking "How come?" as they read about the $950,000 surplus turned up by the outgoing Democratic regime. At any time $950,000 is a whopping surplus for a county such as Prince Georges. Now, when population inroads have placed extraordinary and unmet demands on schools and other county facilities, it reflects a financial conservatism out of keeping with basic needs. This is no call on incoming Republicans to engage in any sort of squandermania, and a balanced budget is still desirable; but county residents have a right to expect that at least there will be a recognition of the county's appalling community requirements, and that the county's available money will be put to productive use instead of lying around.

St. Nicholas Anthology

Mr. Sterling North's heartfelt review (December 3) of The Second St. Nicholas Anthology must have struck a responsive chord in many persons, who once read the magazine. I write of St. Nicholas in Alaska.

Alaska's Seward Peninsula forms the westernmost projection of the North American continent. It faces Siberia across the narrow Bering Strait. In the heart of this remote peninsula early in the century lived a young woman with two sons. For a time the boys were the only white children in the region, and schools were lacking. Instruction had to be given them at home. But the mother found the lesson books insufficient.

As a supplement to them, she subscribed to St. Nicholas; to the American Boy, to the Youth's Companion. These magazines became in a measure the windows through which we looked out upon the outer world. Owing to the vagaries of the mail service, they were likely to reach us in irregular batches. But that did not greatly matter—we devoured them from cover to cover just the same.

St. Nicholas in particular had a good influence, I think, because, apart from furnishing excellent reading matter, it encouraged subscribers to feel themselves a part of the great adventure of life no matter where they lived. One of its features—not mentioned by Mr. North—was the section devoted to letters received from children in all parts of the world. Our mother once prevailed upon one of us to contribute to it. The letter was printed between one from a girl in Naples, Italy and one from a boy in Chicago. Through the pages of St. Nicholas we all got around.

"China Firsters"

Your editorial of December 2, "China Firsters," insults the intelligence of your readers. What is an American "China Firster?" You intimate he is an American who is for China first and America second. An honest editor knows that the persons your editorial pillories are only interested in China because the welfare of China affects America; any other interest is secondary.

You call them "GOP right-wingers." I am sure they will not mind the term; it is getting more honorable every day. Further, they are not "Johnnies come lately" in criticizing the China policy of the Truman Administration. Five years ago they said the policy of deception practiced was wrong. The pretense that aid was being given to Chiang Kai-shek was a crime against the American people and the price is being paid in blood in Korea today. Those responsible should have to pay for their conduct, not continued in office. Had they really given to Chiang the support they pretended to give, and as Congress authorized, the Chinese Communists would have their hands full today fighting Chiang and not be mowing American boys down in Korea.

It is amazing to read that you apparently agree with the Chinese Communists that America has a "record of incredible intermeddling in China." These are your words; they are not from Pravda. You speak of "down-and-out" Chiang Kai-shek. The record is plain that this Administration helped put Chiang "down-and-out." Mr. Acheson said to "let the dust settle in China." It is being settled tonight in Korea with the blood of American boys. Is that what he looked forward to?

You say the Reds in China do not endanger our "national security" or our "national survival." Are they an asset? A strong Chiang Kai-shek would have been.

Military Scientists

There be created within the United States armed services a scientific staff organization practically parallel to the staff organization of the medical profession. This scientific staff organization be developed (for the Air Force) down to the independent squadron.

The lower echelon of this organization should be manned by those scientists whom General Hershey would draft. Here I heartily agree with General Hershey except that I would use these scientific draftees as intimate consultants of low level commanders.

This group of men, although drawing knowledge and inspiration from the civilian scientific world, should be strictly under the military establishment and in uniform.

The priority of organization should be air defense, tactical operations, land combat operations, strategic air operations and naval operations.

I premise this proposal on two facts: (a) Where as the medical profession staff organization was a major factor in winning the war against Japan, the scientific staff organization will have the greater responsibility and opportunity in the next war; (b) the present system of dividing military requirements and the scientific "knowledge" into two separate camps will and is producing a great amount of frustration, inefficiency and false economy into both organizations.

"Appeasement"

"Appeasement" is a naughty word. We connect it, of course, with Chamberlain's concessions to Hitler at Munich in September, 1938. And we forget that those concessions probably kept the Second World War from beginning a year earlier than it did. England and France traded space for time, as Stalin did later.

The real trouble with this "appeasement" by England and France was that they did not make good use of the time they gained. England did something, but she had further to go. France sat tight behind her Maginot Line with attempting to complete the fortifications of her northern frontier, which were in the original plan, and would have made the rest of the Maginot Line good for something. So she left herself open to the blitzkrieg of 1940.

Concessions to the Chinese Reds would be disgusting and humiliating, but they would not necessarily be fatal, if they give us time to strengthen our defenses in ways and places where they may help us to win—or better, to avert—a third world war. Korea may be another Pearl Harbor, or Dunkirk. But remember what happened to the Japanese after Pearl Harbor, and to the Germans after Dunkirk.

Christmas Meaning

Have we forgotten that 1950 years ago the first Christmas really began? If it were not for the tiny Babe in Bethlehem there would never be a Santa Claus, or a Christmas tree.

Today our Nation faces great peril because a large part of the world has thrown God out of their lives. Let us put Santa Claus "second" in the minds of our children and Christmas cheer; and put God first.

Equal Sacrifice In Korea

It is always to be regretted that any reporting of the gallantry of our fighting men must be accompanied by those deafening blasts on our own horns which have always made us appear a Nation of coxcombs. These are always implemented by a corresponding disparagement of the efforts of our allies which cannot fail to be as wormwood to their souls.

A recent headline reads: "Casualties Among U. S. Forces in Korea Far Exceed Allies'." The article goes on to state that "the United States has contributed the most and suffered by far the greatest—etc." After a considerable amount of similarly modest and self-effacing comment, a tabulated list of the contributions of other nations aiding in the Korean effort is set down. A close inspection of this list leads one to question whether our allies have actually fallen down on the job to the extent reported.

The United Kingdom, practically prostrate after the last war and preoccupied with a costly campaign in Malaya, has 10,000 fighting men on the ground. We have about 100,000. The population of the United Kingdom is about 47 millions; ours is about 160 millions. A day or two ago the fact that the British brigade was covering the retreat of a large body of our forces was mentioned off-handedly and quite by the way.

Turkey has 4500 men in the fight, out of a population of about 19 millions. Slight mention is made occasionally of the fact that the Turkish troops are fighting with a fearless and ferocious gallantry. All honor to Turkey, who sits under the very shadow of the uplifted clenched fist of the Soviet.

Until the article referred to appeared, I was personally entirely ignorant of the fact that starving, torn, and shattered Greece had offered 5000 men out of a population of only about seven millions. One thousand of these men, coming from clear around the world, are already near or actually in the fight. It is shameful for us to imply by generalities that this sacrifice on the part of that crippled nation is not in every way the equal of our own.

Canada, with a population of only about 12 millions has 10,000 men in training at Fort Lewis, Wash., and ready to go. Our population is some 14 times the size of hers, yet it appears that our contribution is only about 10 times hers.

Australia (population about 7 millions) landed a battalion of 1000 men about 6 weeks ago. With characteristic Aussie carelessness, in only a week or two this battalion permitted itself to get close enough to the enemy to lose 30 killed and 104 wounded.

Little Belguim, has sent 1000 men out of her 8 millions of population. Luxembourg is a leading backslider, having sent only 60 men. Her population is roughly equal to that of a rather small American city. There's no question about the fact that we certainly have contributed more than mighty Luxembourg.

Let's quit howling "We wuz robbed!" when we get hurt and crowing "We did it; where were you?" when we win. Our men are good men, none better; but they don't have any monopoly on skill or daring. Let our newspapers report the gallant actions of the British, Turks, Greeks, Canadians, and all the others at equal length with those of our own men. We'll find all our allies a good deal more solidly behind us if we try to assume a little of the modesty which never fails to command respect.

Progress On German Arms

By Andre Visson

Can We Buy Time?

IT WAS NOT difficult for President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee, this week in Washington, to reach agreement on the essential problems. The English speaking nations will not allow themselves to be discouraged by the terrible reverses suffered by the United Nations forces in Korea. They refuse to consider any appeasement of Red China or of Soviet Russia. They will continue their world-wide struggle against Soviet imperialism. But they agree that in this global struggle Europe, for both military and political considerations, remains the main theater.

To be sure, the defense of western Europe will require time. The optimists say it can be achieved within two years. The less optimistic say that four years would be the minimum required. But whatever it may be, the United States and Great Britain are willing to buy as much time as they can—provided the price asked for it by Red China and her masters in the Kremlin is not too high. Whether the Soviets and their Chinese satellites are willing to sell us any time, is the question that no one in Washington or in any western European capital can answer for sure.

But the American and British leaders have decided to proceed on the assumption that time is still available. They are determined to do everything in their power to organize the defense of western Europe. And they hope that the continental nations, as fearful as they may be of an invasion by the Reds, will join in the immediate common effort.

THE LONDON meeting of the Chiefs of Staff of the North Atlantic nations, which was originally scheduled for the first week in December, has been postponed because of the Chinese offensive in Korea. The military developments in Korea continue to prevent Gen. Omar N. Bradley and Secretary Marshall from going to London. But they did not want to delay the meeting any longer and have selected their representatives, who will attend the session to open in London the coming week.

The military chiefs meeting in London will have to pass on two important documents. The first is called "The organization for integrated defense of western Europe."

The first paper deals, among other problems, with the appointment of a supreme commander of the North Atlantic forces and the establishment of his headquarters somewhere in continental Europe. This document has been approved by the Military Committee of the North Atlantic nations. The North Atlantic nations easily agreed on the man who is to command their forces—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. But Secretary Marshall, supported by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, refused to give the final approval to this document until the North Atlantic nations shall have reached an agreement on the second paper, dealing with German rearmament. And agreement on this second paper, discussed last October in Washington, was blocked by the French Defense Minister, Jules Moch.

THE PREVAILING feeling in the Pentagon is that it would be useless to appoint a commander-in-chief unless the North Atlantic nations can create an effective defense, and that an effective defense can hardly be establishd without German contribution. Despite considerable pressure by the British, the French and other European governments, the Pentagon is sticking to its theory.

The European governments have tried in vain to obtain the immediate appointment of General Eisenhower, leaving for later the decision on German rearmament. The Pentagon's theory is that General Eisenhower should be the commander-in-chief and not the "convincer-in-chief," which would have to be his first task if the matter of immediately incorporating German contingents in the integrated defense of Europe is not settled beforehand.

The document on the German contribution to the defense of western Europe was sent to London for discussion by two different committees. The Military Committee was to work on finding a military solution that would be acceptable to all parties involved—the American, as well as the French and the Germans. The Council of Deputies of the North Atlantic nations was to find an equally acceptable political solution. An acceptable political solution was the easier of the two. But last week, after a long discussion, and acceptable military solution was agreed upon in London. The so-called Dutch proposal, which originally suggested placing German contingents under a German civilian defense minister—to overcome the French objection to the reestablishment of a German chief of staff—was amended in such a way as to be acceptable to the American military planners.

Now, the two committees meeting in London will have to pass on the two solutions. There will then be a joint meeting of the two committees. And their work will later be crowned by the meeting of the Defense Ministers.

But, of course, all these meetings will produce the desired results only if the peoples of western Europe are willing to implement the solutions worked out by their leaders.

Wet New Year's Eve

Liquor selling hours have been extended for a "more joyful New Year's eve." Temperance people should increase their effort to quench the spirits, since our Capital now has the name of being the "wettest city in the world," and that is especially bad, since we call ours a Christian Nation.

Russ Invasion of Japan Feared

By Drew Pearson

ONE OF THE MOST important things to be remembered about North Korea is that there are five Red Army infantry divisions just a few miles away at Vladivostok, plus another three Red Army infantry divisions at Dairen in Manchuria, and a total of about one million Red Army troops in Siberia generally.

That is why the State Department kept warning the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who in turn were supposed to warn MacArthur, that the Russians would never permit an American army to come within 40 miles of Vladivostok without attacking.

Now the big question mark is whether the Red Army in Siberia will remain put, or get the urge to invade Japan. That is the current fear at the Defense Department.

The fear is especially vibrant because an intelligence survey of Siberia shows that the Red Army is strongest in airborne divisions, which are used for one thing only—invasion.

Two airborne divisions are at the extreme northeastern tip of Siberia, just across the Bering Strait from Alaska. Another airborne division is on Kamchatka, not far from the Aleutian Islands. Another airborne division is in Sakhalin, a few miles north of Japan, and a total of eight other airborne divisions are in the maritime provinces of Siberia opposite Japan.

Along with these Red Army troops are estimated to be about 4000 Russian airplanes. Finally, Russia has a treaty of military assistance with China, and could now claim it as an excuse for attack on United States forces in Japan.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES: Steve Leo, press chief for the National Security Resources Board, overheard a conversation between two White House guards the other day. One remarked that the White House squirrels were unusually busy this year storing away acorns for the winter. This, he said, was a sure sign of a long winter.

"Naw," disagreed the other guard, "they're just preparing for inflation."

FOLLOWING front-line reports that Chinese soldiers appear to be "hopped up" with drugs, this column can reveal that for some time the Peiping government has been secretly cultivating and smuggling opium. This has been a secret project of the Chinese Economic Commission to raise revenue for the Chinese army and to hire spies.

Last month, Chinese Communist authorities actually tried to sell 500 tons of opium to the British Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., in Hongkong—enough opium to supply the world's legitimate needs for 15 months. The offer was turned down and the incident reported to the United Nations, which is trying to control the world-wide use of narcotics.

Most Chinese opium is handled by international smuggling rings, working with Chinese Communist agents. Inside China, the opium traffic is actually directed by Mao Tse-tung's national police. The Ministry of Social Affairs also helps supervise the distribution of poppy seed, controls the cultivation of opium and restricts opium consumption by Red soldiers and officials. It now appears, however, that Red soldiers are given a "drag" of opium before going into battle.

WHEN MAYOR MIKE DI SALLE of Toledo walked out of the White House after President Truman gave him the unwelcome job of Federal Price Administrator, newsmen asked Di Salle what his qualifications were for the post.

"President Truman said his job requires a man with guts," replied the genial mayor, stroking his slightly paunchy middle. "I've got 'em."

Aside from that, however, the new Price Administrator has a lot of other things—imagination, know-how and the ability to get people to work together.

This writer was given credit for instigating the tremendous flow of democracy letters to Italy just before the Italian elections which helped defeat the Communists. Mayor Di Salle deserves chief credit for initiating this idea.

Di Salle also did a great job for the Friendship Train and the American Legion's Tide of Toys. But perhaps his most important accomplishment has been to inaugurate a new era of management-labor relations in strike-torn Toledo. So successful has he been in persuading labor and business to work together that Toledo has become a model for labor-management relations.

Mayor Di Salle has five children, the first four daughters named alphabetically—Antoinette, Barbara, Constance and Diane. So he should have a good start toward running an alphabetical agency.

HERE ARE SOME of the European press excerpts cabled Washington by United States Ambassadors, which indicate the public reaction to Korea which this country faces abroad:

The Manchester Guardian: "MacArthur did not know the strength of the enemy south of the Yalu River, though he thought it small. To reconnoiter would have been wise; to attack was foolish. He knew that whatever the number of Chinese Communists in Korea, enormous reserves were already north of the frontier. He knew that the last time the U. N. forces approached Manchuria in the western sector, the Chinese thrust them back. He knew that an offensive, though it might succeed if the enemy proved to be few, would arouse Chinese suspicion and might bring them over the border in great numbers. But he attacked in full force."

The Daily Mail: "A standstill in Korea was strongly urged two weeks ago by the British Foreign Office and United States State Department, and London hoped a cease-fire order could be arranged and a buffer state created. These ideas were still ripening when the new MacArthur offensive opened. They died away at once."

Franc-Tireur of Paris "The general has too often pretended to ignore the United Nations. American charges alone will not solve the problem."

THE SECRET SERVICE has quietly assigned nine agents to give Vice President Barkley the same protection as the President. This is a wartime precaution that has the free-and-easy Barkley fretting like a youngster with nine babysitters. The new bodyguards won't even allow Barkley to eat in the Senate dining room, the worst blow of all to his gregarious nature . . . Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas, Illinois Democrat, doesn't try to conceal his bitterness toward Freshman Senator Estes Kefauver, Tennessee Democrat. Lucas blames Kefauver's Chicago crime probe for his defeat in the Illinois elections, believes Kefauver deliberately tried to eliminate him as a contender for the 1952 Vice Presidential nomination. As a result, Lucas' opinion of Kefauver, expressed in the cloakrooms, is unprintable.

Matter of Fact

What Mobilization Will Mean

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

TO MOST PEOPLE, Government decisions have only a rather distant and unreal meaning. Yet certain decisions made in these last terrible days, in smoky conference rooms in the White House, the Pentagon, the old State Department building and elsewhere, will most closely and intimately affect every American. For these decisions add up to national mobilization. Here is what national mobilization is likely to mean to you.

If you are a young man, and not now in service, the chances are very high that you soon will be, either through a rapidly stepped up draft or through universal military service. In the latter case, you may expect to spend two years in uniform, including a year of training and another year of service with a regular unit.

If you are a worker in an industry now producing civilian goods, you may be out of a job temporarily in the near future, while industry is converted to war production. You can then expect to work at least a 48-hour week rather than the present 40 hours. It is quite possible that your labor will ultimately be directed by the Government.

If you are a businessman, your business may be ordered, if necessary, into defense work. You can expect price control as soon as an adequate enforcement staff can be organized—probably in about two months. But this will only be the prelude to controls which may in the end be a good deal more rigorous than in the last war.

Whoever you are, you can expect that your dollar will lose value rather rapidly, even with the most rigid controls—about 10 percent a year, according to one informed guess. At the same time, the chances are that you will soon be paying taxes higher than during the last war, in whatever income bracket you may be. In short, you can expect a considerable lowering of your standard of living.

THE GOVERNMENT DECISIONS which justify this set of dreary predictions may be briefly listed. In the first place, the 2,800,000 manpower limit for the armed services established so recently by President Truman has been hastily discarded. No new limit has been set. This will depend on what training cadres can be salvaged from the tragic wreckage in Korea; on the rate of production of new arms and equipment, and on the manpower needs of industry. But certainly the new figure will be very much higher than any yet contemplated.

Similarly, the limit of 40 billion dollars or thereabouts for military expenditures which Defense Secretary George Marshall and Deputy Secretary Robert Lovett were trying to establish before disaster struck, has also of course been abandoned. A good guess is that the annual rate will soon be pushed up to between 60 and 70 billion dollars. At the same time, planned expenditures for strengthening our allies have been quadrupled, to between 20 and 24 billion dollars.

This means an annual budget edging up rapidly toward a staggering 100 billion dollars, to be imposed on an economy already bursting at the seams. Yet dollars have ceased to be the true yardstick. The only true measure of the national mobilization which is now in prospect is how quickly this country and its allies can exchange strength for weakness. If the job is to be done, and if the national economy is not to burst once and for all, something pretty close to an economic dictatorship is required.

PLANS FOR SCRAPPING the present cumbrous, incoherent and tentative mobilization machinery and creating a new organization—a sort of streamlined War Production Board, with very great authority over the whole economy—have already been drawn up within the National Security Resources Board. These plans await only the approval of President Truman.

Powerful pressure groups and advocates of business-as-usual will no doubt try to soften the hard program outlined above. Yet as every passing day makes it more clear that simple national survival is at stake, it becomes more unlikely that they will succeed. In short, about the best we can look forward to, for the indefinite future, is a full war economy. This means a standard of living which, although still less than Spartan, will be decidedly lower than that to which Americans are accustomed.

This is the price we shall have to pay for the years of incredible self-delusion, which will certainly puzzle future historians, when the United States permitted the world balance of power to be weighted ever more heavily in favor of the Soviet empire. And no one can be sure that a greater price will not have to be paid. For no one can be sure that the men in the Kremlin have not concluded that now is the time to have a war, now that the United States is weak and its allies defenseless.

NOT MILITARY TRAINING but universal military service is what this country needs, in the view of Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard, expressed in Look. "What is needed now is a force in being," he writes. "A training program provides only reserves." We must be prepared to maintain a strong force in Europe for as long as a decade, Dr. Conant believes.

In support of his view, Dr. Conant lists three prime considerations:

1. Only our air force and atomic bomb stockpile have kept Russia from attacking before now.

2. In the coming years, Russia's own ability to attack with atomic bombs and defend her cities against our planes will increase rapidly.

3. By 1952-54, Russia may consider she has won the technological arms race and, if sure she can get to the Channel, will start a global war.

"What seems to be required," writes Dr. Conant, "is a universal military service of two years for all able-bodied youth before they take their places in the industrial life of the country. . . . What we fail to do in 1950 may come home to roost in 1953."

THE NEW YORKER seems rewarding enough this week to have been fetched in by K. Kringle, what with the second in Rebecca West's Annals of Crime series, a piece by James Thurber and another of John Lardner's articles on sports—this one's about Gene Tunney, the continent commander.

TWO STAFFERS on The Washington Post are tapped in Magazine Digest. James L. Harte has done a profile on Herblock, the cartoonist, and the Digest has reprinted N. S. Haseltine's article on "planktonburgers."

A MAN TELLS in Woman's Home Companion how to fight communism: You go to bat for your subordinate who has a raise coming; you give the new grocer in the neighborhood a chance; you hold out opportunity to youth. "Finally, beliefs must be lived, not simply believed," says the author, Howard Whitman. "Action is the key. Action begins at the grass roots—in your community, your circle of friends, your home."

IN THE NEW Esquire is a piece by Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer on "Col. Robert T. Lincoln," the Phantom of the Middle East. Moscow created the mythical Lincoln—ostensibly an American undermining people in the Middle East—as a target for propaganda blasts. Lo, the United States, reacting oppositely to what Russia had anticipated, picked up the ball and built "Lincoln" into a figure of deepest wisdom, limitless guile, unbounded endurance and resolution. The Reds backed off, and the latest heard of Lincoln, he was working undercover in Korea with his equally mythical lady, Magda Obolensky Brown. Esquire also is featuring its annual collection of half-clad dollies disguised as a calendar.

ALL ABOUT EVA, you might say, in Life. Eva Peron, that would be, in an article by Robert Neville.

A HISTORICAL ACCOUNT of the development of the Potomac Valley and a plea for the salvation of the area around the Capital are the principal items of a piece by John E. Briggs in Atlantic Naturalist. The once-bright prospects of the valley have never been realized, Briggs writes. "Forming the natural bond to unify the valley, the river became instead a boundary between antagonistic regions, political rivals and social factions," he says. "Selected as the seat of the National Government, the valley remained provincial." And now, "if Congressmen will represent the Nation, if engineers will think in broader terms than dams and power, if real estate promoters will observe their community responsibilities, then . . . the valley can become a proper home for the Nation's Capital."

FELIX MORLEY, in Pathfinder, questions the wisdom of what he calls Gordon Gray's "plan for a permanent Department of Foreign Aid and Assistance." "Its prospects are as gray as its name," glowers Morley.

BALTIMORE, says Gerald W. Johnson in the Reporter, is in danger of developing a split personality, and the reason is the Ober Act, which makes membership in any organization branded as subversive by the Attorney General a bar to holding public office. So far, the act has cost four people their jobs—two school teachers, a doctor in the public health service and a librarian—not because they belonged to any subversive unit, but because they refused to take oath that they didn't. All are Quakers, whose tenets forbid their taking oaths of any kind. "Gone is the old equipoise that, during the reign of prohibition, enabled H. L. Mencken and Dr. George W. Crabbe of the Anti-Saloon League to chat with the utmost amiability when they met on a street corner," writes Johnson. Now you're either a pro-Communist or you're Adolf Hitler raised from the dead, he complains. "It is sad," Johnson says, "but it is the trend of the times. All one can say for it is that it may make the psychiatrists marvelously prosperous."

Also in the Reporter is a skilful needling of the Franco regime and the so-called Spanish lobby by Charles Wertenbaker.

READ ABOUT color television in Scientific American, piece by Newbern Smith. Full descriptions, with diagrams, of field sequential (CBS), line sequential (Color Television, Inc.) and dot sequential (RCA) systems, plus a performance characteristic rating box. Also in Scientific American the shattering statement that bears, despite anything you've heard, don't hibernate at all. They just sort of go to sleep.

CAREY McWILLIAMS relates in Frontier how distillers and processors are playing a shell game with California grapes and dollars. The loser, he says, is you.

"WHAT HAPPENED to Joe Louis' $4,000,000?" asks W. C. Heinz in Cosmopolitan. Well, his managers got half of it, the Government got huge chunks (Joe was in a 90 percent bracket in 1946, his best year), poor investments got a lot—he lost $50,000 on a softball team, 40 Gs on a cafe in Chicago, 25 more on a Detroit restaurant, $30,000 on a soft drink. One of his biggest expenses, however, was Marva Trotter, twice his wife, twice his ex-wife. Marva was cut in on 25 percent of Joe's purses for three of his best years.

DOROTHY THOMPSON writes in the Ladies Home Journal about the relative hardships of her youth. "On my father's average salary of $1000 a year plus a house and coal, there were precious few luxuries . . . we knew that we should have to make good enough high school grades to win (college) scholarships, and that those who graduated first would have to help the younger." Miss Thompson thinks everybody should be a responsible member of the community. "And," she asserts, "community begins at home."

FEATURE in House and Garden details a spectacular house in Arizona built around a pool that "brings the cooling sound of water into every room." It has vertical glass slits in the stone masonry, other attributes too spectacular to mention. Probably pick it up for maybe $200,000.

New Avenue in Cancer Research

By Alton L. Blakeslee

NEW YORK.—Discovery of virus-like bacteria in the blood of humans with cancer has been disclosed by a research team.

The tiny living organisms were not found in the blood of healthy persons. They were found in cancer tissues, but not in the bodies of healthy persons.

Just what meaning these strange bits of living matter may have in cancer is not yet clear, says the report in the American Journal of the Medical Sciences. They might play some role in development of cancer.

The report was made by a research team headed by Dr. Virginia Wuerthele-Caspe of Presbyterian Hospital, Newark, N. J., in studies under the Bureau of Biological Research of Rutgers University. The other members are Eleanor Alexander-Jackson, Ph.D., John A. Anderson, Ph.D., James Hillier, Ph.D., electron microscope specialist of RCA, Roy M. Allen, D.Sc., and Lawrence W. Smith, M.D.

The organisms seem to be virus-like bacteria, they said. Viruses are disease-causing units, smaller than bacteria, which can grow and reproduce only in the kind of tissue they attack.

THESE ORGANISMS can be recovered from human blood or cancer tissues and grown in cultures of nutrient fluid. They vary in size and shape under different conditions of growth. Some are visible only under the powerful electron microscope. At first they appear as the tiniest of spheres. Later they may form larger spheres or exceedingly small rods.

Similar organisms have been recovered from the blood and tissues of people with scleroderma, a generalized disease in which tough, hard areas appear in the kidneys, lungs, liver and other organs. Like cancer, this is a proliferative disease; that is, one marked by growth and change of the affected body cells.

Dr. Wuerthele-Caspe and associates injected mice with the organisms taken from various sources. One was the blood of a person with cancer, another was from human breast cancer, a third was from a chicken with cancer. A fourth came from a type of cancer in mice.

The injections produced pathological changes in more than half the mice, they reported. The mice developed yellow-gray areas, with a cheese-like appearance, in their body organs. Tissues in the centers of the areas were dead or dying, and there were growths of the strange organisms inside the lesion or sore. The destruction sometimes involved blood vessels.

The same type of lesion appeared regardless of whether the injected organisms came from human or animal cancer.

IT IS NOT known whether these organisms "may be of primay or secondary significance in the development of malignant disease," the report said. There is a chance, it added that all belong to a group of related organisms that can cause growth and changes in the cells of an infected person or animal.

The studies are supported by grants from the American Cancer Society, Damon Runyon Memorial Fund and Abbott Laboratories, Chicago.

Tax Assessor Doesn't Miss Much

By Harry N. Stull

THE NATURE of the work of the Assessor of Taxes is not designed to make him the most popular man in the community. From the standpoint of government, however, no office is more important, since it has control over the amount of taxes we pay and has the duty of raising the necessary municipal funds.

STULL

The office of Assessor of the District is divided into several divisions covering real estate, personal property, income and franchise taxes, inheritance taxes, the sales and use tax and special property assessments for street and similar improvements. The real estate tax, now at $2.15 per $100, is the greatest source of revenue, and, since it is general in its application, the only questions raised in connection with it concern the assessed valution, which by law must be made at stated intervals.

The personal property tax has been the basis of much complaint, but the Assessor has recommended, and the Commissioners have approved, a bill to repeal this tax on household goods, jewelry and property in storage. Repeal was contemplated at the time the sales tax was imposed, but no apparent progress in that direction has been made by Congress. There is likely to be strong opposition to the repeal of any form of taxation at this particular time.

The income tax law has been criticized because of the use of the word "domicile," and there has been much controversy whether it means actual residence. Many persons claiming residence elsewhere have sought and in some cases have received exemption from the law. At the present time, persons living in the District seven months in any year are regarded as residents and subject to the tax.

The Assessor's office has to combat continually the natural tendency of property owners to undervalue their property for taxation. While decisions have sometimes resulted in inequities, the office has been successful in obtaining the maximum payable under the law without too violent protests from the public.

The matter of delinquent taxes is one that concerns all municipalities. In the District, tax collections on real estate are 99.9 percent, a record that would be difficult to surpass.

In most of the measures designed to modernize the District Government, there are provisions merging the Offices of the Assessor and Collector of Taxes; it would seem that their duties are so interrelated that a combination of the two would be a logical move.

THE FIGHT for home rule, which has just culminated in the House in failure to secure the necessary signatures to a discharge petition, will continue in the next Congress with renewed vigor. The fact that the petition lacked only 23 of the necessary signatures indicates the amount of work done by a small group of citizens with great determination but very little financial help. The reelection of Senator Robert A. Taft and the election of Everett M. Dirksen as the new Senator from Illinois, both strong supporters of home rule, will not injure the movement in the new Congress.

DISTRICT CITIZENS will be interested in knowing what effect the new amendment to the Maryland sales tax law will have on sales in the District. The amendment is expected to reduce Maryland's income from the tax about 7 million dollars annually.

Of particular interest to District residents is the fact that the new tax begins at 51 cents and exempts all foods, soap and soap powders, cleaning fluids, detergents and baby oils and powders. This undoubtedly will have some effect on stores close to the Maryland line; if the effect on Districts merchants is substantial, there will undoubtedly be a movement to amend the District sales tax statute in accordance with the Maryland law.

AS TIME goes on, there is mounting evidence that the civil defense organization now in the making will not be a temporary expedient but will be in existence for some time. This is more reason why care should be exercised in the selection and training of those who will guide this organization.

There appears to be agreement among the experts that mass evacuations in time of emergency should be avoided, and that more stress should be placed on defense of the home. Whole families may have to be relied upon during such periods, and future training undoubtedly will include means of safeguarding the individual. Shelters may have to be erected or improvised in large numbers.

The seriousness of the situation cannot be stressed too strongly. The apparent opinion among some that we are in some way divinely protected and that nothing can happen to us, needs immediate revision.

Editors Split Over Dilemma in Korea

By Benjamin Muse

THE DEEP ANXIETY of Virginians during the past week and the divergence of opinions expressed here have been not unlike the reaction of the American public as a whole to the grave turn of international developments.

MUSE

The most provocative Virginia commentaries came in the voice of Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman and the editorial columns of the Richmond News-Leader. Dr. Freeman, revered State philosopher and nationally famous military historian, gave the public twice daily over the radio a lugubrious picture of things to come. He was an early prophet of disaster for the "mad policy" in Korea and has repeatedly urged evacuation.

After President Truman's atom bomb interview, he declared that "the President has lost his head," and called for a "Congressional rebellion."

The News-Leader, where Dr. Freeman formerly occupied the editorial chair, said of the wrangling at Lake Success, ". . . the lights were slowly going out for the third time in this century . . ." It also insisted upon withdrawal of United Nations forces from Korea and urged "peaceful settlement" with the Chinese Communists.

Along with expressions of approval, News-Leader readers shouted "traitor" and "Quisling." J. L. Hodges, commander of the Virginia Department of the American Legion, protested in an irate letter: "Compromise principles in a 'new Munich'? Never." A North Carolina reader wrote: "Looks as though the enemy has taken Norfolk and is advancing fast from Roanoke."

THE RICHMOND Times-Dispatch, under the same ownership, took a more temperate view of national leadership, although it shared the News-Leader's uneasiness about General MacArthur, whom it described as "a great military man but a worse than bumbling political and diplomatic leader."

Opposed from the beginning to the crossing of the thirty-eighth parallel, it said first: "We earnestly commend to the United Nations and to our own Government" withdrawal now south of that parallel. Later, however, in a major editorial review of the situation it said: "But, if, as appears more likely, our position is hopeless, let's get out as fast as possible."

The more belligerent Lynchburg News, run by the sons of the late, great Carter Glass, came stoutly to the defense of General MacArthur, and found "fallacy" in the theory that fighting on in Asia would result in "the milking of American resources . . . to such an extent as to leave Europe all but defenseless against a Russian attack."

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, without attempting to chart specific policy, eloquently refused to be downhearted. Stressing the importance of British-American solidarity, it expressed "confidence in the resources of the spirit and of material power which, if joined together, can bring us through," and said that statesmen "can light a torch for which the world is waiting."

THE ROANOKE TIMES, sympathetic in its treatment of MacArthur, but insistent upon "understanding between the United States and Great Britain," also headed an editorial: "The A-Bomb Must Not Be Used Now." This expressed the sentiment of most Virginia newspapers, but the Lynchburg News, without qualification as to time or place, said: "Most of us, whatever the wrenching of heart and sickness of soul, will agree that it must be used"—when its use is essential to victory for the free world.

Pending decisions on higher levels, there seemed nothing that the public or the Commonwealth could do but speculate—even in the pressing matter of civil defense. Paper civil defense organizations have been set up in the cities and civil defense heads have been named for the counties, but all, including J. H. Wyse, coordinator for the State, are stymied until instructions are received from Washington as to what to do.

Immediate concern focused on President Truman's proposal to spend $3,100,000,000 on civil defense, with $1,430,000,000 of that amount to be contributed by States and localities. On a per capita basis this would call for some 30 million dollars from Virginia, but, in view of this State's highly strategic situation, expenditures will be much greater here than in the average State.

Since the General Assembly does not meet again in regular session until January, 1952, a special session of that body is likely to be called as soon as the civil defense situation crystallizes.

Bay Bridge Gets a Double Wallop

By James P. Connolly

THE CHESAPEAKE BAY BRIDGE being built between Sandy Point and Matapeake received some comparatively minor damage in the record wind and rain storm of November 25, and on December 4 Governor-elect Theodore R. McKeldin struck the outgoing Democratic Administration's $40,000,000 improvement another blow.

CONNOLLY

Before the bridge damage could be assessed and while a study was being made for the State Roads Commission, the Republican Governor-elect rushed into print, in effect yelling "fire." He was quoted as saying he had been advised by "engineers" that the bridge might not stand up under the battering of the Bay tides and ice.

Advised by what "engineers"? McKeldin did not specify. Hardly by those of the State and the J. E. Greiner Co., consulting engineers on the job. None of them expressed any doubt about the basic sturdiness of the bridge, and they considered the storm damage largely superficial. One said: "The damage, as estimated in dollars and compared with the cost of the bridge, was not exactly insignificant but next to it."

Meanwhile, McKeldin's alarums had helped weaken public confidence in the project. Timid souls vowed that they would never set foot on the bridge when it is opened. Maybe this is the Milquetoast approach to a bridge they haven't come to, but premature and amateur scares encourage it, and if it persists it could affect the use and worth of the investment.

Since an expert report was on the way for public record, McKeldin might better have kept his toga on and awaited it. If his engineer advisers were the responsible ones, at best he jumped the gun; if they were not, he jumped the reservation.

PURSUING his concern over the bridge, he said in part:

"When I become Governor (on January 10), I propose to reexamine completely the bridge situation . . . I was told that not only was the superstructive damaged but that there was considerable underwater damage."

The proposal to reexamine is in line with present Republican high policy. Does it include the need or desirability of the installation? That would seem to have been determined beyond any call for a post-mortem.

McKeldin added that what he has in mind is a fact-finding, not a fault-finding, investigation. Very well. Such an investigation already is being made, and a few of the established facts are these:

The Bay Bridge has 57 piers, 65 bents (steel and concrete pilings carrying lighter loads than the piers) and two abutments, all in varying stages of construction but none quite complete. The survey to date shows that three piers and six bents were damaged, one of the six bents being carried away.

Now the Bay, despite all brave talk of tides, ice and other weather conditions, is a fairly sheltered and mild body of water. Students of its characteristics say there are few cross tides or other complications to kick up unexpected conditions. Further, a bridge under construction is like a house. Its unfinished and exposed parts are more vulnerable than the completed whole.

THE LONG and the short of it is that practically all the damage at the Bay Bridge site is believed to have been done by contractors' heavy equipment being whipped around by the high winds and waters. The bent that was carried away is thought to have gone by that means. No one was there, so no one knows. But if the bridge had been finished, the contractors' gear would not have been there and that danger would have been removed.

Further, the damage on the bridge site was no more, proportionately, than the damage on other big construction jobs in the storm area where contractors' stuff was lying loose, speaking loosely. Finally, the four tower piers of the bridge and the backstay piers for the main span still stand as firmly as ever. The tower piers rear 80 or 90 feet and the wind was said to have been as strong as it ever has been in that stretch. Also, a steel span in place was not disturbed.

Could it be that McKeldin's shudders were primarily for the lingering bridge opposition? The Democratic platform in the election included a bridge plank, stating that the span was "on its way to completion and would not cost a cent of tax money." It is being bought with revenue bonds, to be retired from tolls. The Republican platform was resoundingly silent on the bridge subject.

Our Economy

A Precision Tool to Aid Mobilizers

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

FOR NEARLY six months, strategic planning in Washington has veered like a weathercock with each new wind that blew from Korea. Industrial mobilization has lagged because we have not known how many men would be needed by the armed forces, what defense production would be or what plants would have to be converted.

In mobilizing an economy, there must be a clear sequence: (1) Know what kind of a war you are fighting, where, for how long and on what scale; (2) translate this thing into arms and manpower, and (3) compare military requirements with other demands on the economy to see whether we can really meet the bill in terms of men and resources. Only now have we begun to face or answer the first of these questions.

During the early phases of World War II, we placed military orders without knowing whether they could be filled. Finally, in 1942 we developed the Controlled Materials Plan to reckon costs in carbon and alloy steel, copper, brass and aluminum, and channel these materials to arms production.

Today we have what is potentially a far more exact tool than CMP. That is input-output analysis, developed at Harvard by Prof. Wassily Leontief and a group of economists working with the new electronic computers.

IN ESSENCE, the Leontief system is a method for seeing the economy whole and measuring the impact on all parts of a change anywhere. Applied to a defense program, it could come closer than any method now known to telling us what a given arms order will do to the economy. Applied to enemy countries, it could be a devastating weapon of economic intelligence.

An input-output table is a rectangular grid something like the mileage chart on a road map. Each sector of the economy — iron and steel, motor vehicles, lumber, and so forth—is listed along the top of the table; and the same industries are listed down the side.

Since one industry's output is another's input, the square where the iron and steel row, for example, intersects the motor vehicles column would show the tons of iron and steel which go into motor vehicles in a given year. You could tell simply by glancing down the input column for motor vehicles how much metal, glass, cloth, etc., goes into the making of cars and trucks. Conversely, by scanning the output row for motor vehicles, you would know how many motor vehicles are used in the metals, glass, cloth and all other industries.

INPUT-OUTPUT analysis is a form of double-entry bookeeping covering all production and distribution. Its chief shortcoming at this time is that our tables are neither as accurate nor as complete as they need to be: we simply do not have the data.

But with a will and a serious effort, this shortcoming could be remedied. Already the Labor Department has some 50 people at work on inter-industry production studies. The Air Force is using input-output analysis for its procurement program.

Supported by a sufficient knowledge of production technology, an input-output table could tell us how an increase in any item—airframes, bazookas, tanks—would affect every other sector of the economy. Knowing that an increased demand in one place would have to be paid for somewhere else, we could decide where to cut with least damage to essential production. We could spot bottlenecks before a program was out of the planning stage.

Applied to the enemy's economy, input-output analysis would tell us where shortages were likely to develop, what sectors were most vulnerable and where to bomb for maximum effect.

BUT IN the last analysis a tool, however sharp, is only a tool. It cannot replace intelligent human direction.

What has been most fatally wrong with this first phase of mobilization has been, not the tools, but the lack of strategic planning. This is not altogether the Pentagon's—nor even the President's—fault. We were not sure what kind of war we were fighting.

The time has come, however, when we can no longer afford to rewrite our defense program over the morning headlines. For five years our military and economic strategy has been based on guesswork about someone else's intentions. The time for such folly has passed. Today we not only need to have intentions of our own, but to work with all speed to make them feasible.

Plastics Sneer At Acid 'Ulcers'

CHICAGO.—Plastics more resistant to corrosive acids than stainless steel were described to the American Chemical Society by Dr. Raymond B. Seymour of the Atlas Mineral Products Co., Mertztown, Pa. These are phenolic resins, made in a process in which sulfuric acid turns them from liquids to solids. A big tank protected by such resins developed no "ulcers" in 12 years' service despite a daily diet of 100,000 gallons of boiling sulfuric acid, he said. The acid is used to break down iron rust in the process of steel pickling.

Skin Banks Asked

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP). Dr. H. P. Pickerill, plastic surgeon, thinks "skin banks" should be established in readiness for atomic warfare because there will be thousands of burn cases.

Now is the Time to Look for Quality in Whatever You Buy!

With conditions as unsettled as they are now, there can be little justification for accepting less than the best. What you buy today may have to last much longer than you think!

Time was when a person could buy an article of inferior quality as a "tide-me-over" in confidence that it could be readily replaced with something better later. But that time is not today! Today it is of utmost importance to buy the best.

There is still a fine selection of high quality merchandise of all sorts. The prices of this merchandise have not risen as much as you may reasonably expect them to in the future. The fact that there is already serious talk of imminent curtailments strongly indicates that it would be unwise to wait any longer than absolutely necessary to acquire the things you have set your heart on owning. You may soon find, as we all found in the mid-forties, that quality merchandise is simply not available, and that even inferior stuff is priced out of reach.

So look for quality. Insist on quality, even if it means going without some of the things you've wanted!

BOOKS

Not as Final as It Sounds

Sandburg's Pen Is Still Flowing

COMPLETE POEMS, Carl Sandburg. Harcourt, Brace. 676 pp. $3.

"COMPLETE POEMS" as a title has an ominous finality about it, particularly when the writer has attained his four-score-and-ten.

On the other hand, there is the instance of the late Mme. Schumann-Heink, who made several farewell tours, and a number of poets whose "Complete Poems" have been published several times, each with newly written work.

In the instance of Carl August Sandburg, there are fresh poems—among them about 40 that have not been printed before anywhere—in a concluding "New Section." And in his prefatory note, referring to Hokusai, the enthusiastic Japanese who died in 1849 at the age of 89, Sandburg indicates that the ink still flows in his pen. The "Completed Poems" are, therefore, it may happily be assumed, complete just as of now.

Besides the "New Section," the present volume includes: "Chicago Poems," "Cornhuskers," "Smoke and Steel," "Slabs of the Sunburnt West," "Good Morning, America," and the masterly "The People, Yes."

BEGINNING with "Chicago"—"Hog Butcher for the World, Tool Maker, Stacker of Wheat"—there is Sandburg the young city man.

There is the poet with the social conscience—"The Mayor of Gary"—"I asked the Mayor of Gary about the 12-hour day and the 7-day week. And the Mayor of Gary answered more workmen steal time on the job in Gary than any other place in the United States."

In these pages, too, is the rural midlander—"Laughing Corn"—"There was a high majestic fooling Day before yesterday in the yellow corn." The poet of captured fragility, also, is here—"Smoke Rose Gold"—"The dome of the Capitol looks to the Potomac River. Out of a haze over the sunset; out of a smoke rose gold: One star shines over the sunset."

There are little poems of playful tenderness, too. Like "Sweeping Wendy: Study in Fugue," a new poem—"Wendy put her black eyes on me, and swept me with her black eyes—sweep on sweep she swept me."—with its suggestion of Leigh Hunt's "Jenny Kiss'd Me."

There is the mature man, looking at war. In "The Unknown War," in the new section, he begins: "Be calm, collected, easy!". He refers to a marshal of France, speaking like a gambler, saying, "The controlling factor in war is the Unknown." And the poet quietly concludes, "We shall do the necessary. We shall meet the inevitable. We shall be prepared. We shall stand before the Unknown aware of the controlling factor . . . the Unknown."

It is the stand of the courageous, of course, standing perhaps on decks awash.

ALONGSIDE of such poems as these are the topical, and sometimes trivial.

In one of them, a new one, "The Abracadabra Boys," Sandburg pays his respects to some of the more esoteric of his contemporaries.

"Have they picked up language for throwing into chow mein poems?" he asks, purely rhetorically. And concludes: "Pointing at you, at us, at the rabble, they sigh and say, these abracadabra boys, 'They lack jargons.' They fail to distinguish between pustules and pistils. They knoweth not how the kumquat cometh."

It is a case of the once accused, perhaps forgetting, pointing the finger.

There was a time—back at the beginning of World War I—when a Chicago weekly, The Dial, said: "The typographical arrangement for this jargon creats a suspicion that it is intended to be taken as some form of poetry . . . such an effusion as the one now under consideration is nothing less than an impudent affront to the poetry-loving public." The effusion under consideration was Sandburg's poem, "Chicago."

It is a case of other voices, another room. If the boys in the back room shout at the boys in the front room, and if the boys in the front room slam the door—and thereby shut themselves in, too—well, none of them can say exactly what poetry is. Not even Sandburg in his prefatory notes.

There is more than one kind of poetry, though. That can be said for sure. Though it cannot be said what poetry is, it can be said that Sandburg is a poet. And it is good to have the "Complete Poems."—LEE GROVE.

A Fitting Memorial

'Michelangelo' of Capitol Rescued From Oblivion

CONSTANTINO BRUMIDI, Michelangelo of the United States Capitol. By Myrtle Cheney Murdock. Monumental Press, Inc., Washington. 112 pp. Ill. $10.

CONSTANTINO BRUMIDI died poor and relatively obscure in Washington in February, 1880, after a quarter century spent in decorating the Capitol. Even his grave in Glenwood Cemetery was unmarked.

Now, after more than a decade of patient research, both the artist and the man have been rescued from oblivion and neglect by Mrs. Myrtle Cheney Murdock, wife of the United States Representative from Arizona. It is due to her energy, too, that Brumidi's grave is not remaining unmarked.

Though many of the details of Brumidi's life still are obscure, the outline is clear. He was born in Italy in 1805, and grew up in Rome, where he was admitted to the Academy of Arts when he was 13. He worked as an artist in the papal palaces, became involved in some sort of trouble growing out of politics, and came to the United States as a refugee in 1852.

In a very short time he began his fruitful years of work on the Capitol, and at a date apparently not certain married a Washington woman some years younger than himself, from whom he was obviously divorced as she was remarried in his lifetime.

As an artist, Brumidi considered himself the only worker in true fresco (painting on plaster before it has time to dry, with pigment suspended in pure water) in the United States at the time, and his claim does not seem to have been disputed.

Brumidi, who was trained in the decorating of great buildings, an art for which there was no tradition in the United States, as American artists had little opportunity, performed a prodigious amount of work in the Capitol. The most spectacular is the 4664 square feet of the Capitol Dome—in true fresco—but other of his works in various media have their admirers, too.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that a Senator in 1880 linked Brumidi's name with Michelangelo's, and a writer in 1897 said Brumidi "may almost now be called the Michelangelo of the Capitol."

The quality of the photographs and the reproduction in the 13 color plates in Mrs. Murdock's approximately 10x13-inch book are remarkable. They indicate that her labor was not misplaced. This is a fittingly beautiful volume in honor of a too long neglected artist who took pride in having become a citizen of a free country.—L. G.

Salty and Sassy Prose

Iconoclast Reviews Prohibition

By Sterling North

THE GREAT ILLUSION: An Informal History of Prohibition. By Herbert Asbury. Doubleday. 344 pp. $4.

ANY WAY you look at it, the control of the liquor industry has been a headache ever since the thirsty Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, possibly nursing hangovers.

HERBERT ASBURY

It has been a subject seldom viewed with moderation by either side of the controversy. On the one hand, the drys and bluenoses have led their rip-snorting attacks on demon rum with enough hosanna-shouting bigotry to turn the stomach of a cat. On the other hand, the traders in rum and slaves, the pre-Volstead saloon-keepers who worked hand in glove with crooked politicians, brothel-keepers and other criminals, and (until recently) the greedy brewers and distillers have furnished a constantly vicious pressure group shockingly indifferent to the welfare of the community and to decent government.

By the time we were engaged in the orgy of crime which Herbert Hoover called a "noble experiment," both sides of this ancient feud had reached new nadirs in dishonesty and vituperation.

As Herbert Asbury says, the period lasting from 1919 to 1933 was "the era of the Big Lie. The drys lied to make prohibition look good; the wets lied to make it look bad; the Government officials lied to frighten Congress into giving them more money to spend; and the politicians lied through force of habit."

MR. ASBURY, who has made a profession of living down his collateral ancestor, Bishop Francis Asbury of the Methodist Church, probably began this book as he has so many of his others, hoping merely to milk it of all possible excitement and color. Somewhere along the line he got religion—the religion of moderation. By the end of the book he is so intemperately moderate that he is reviling both drys and wets with almost equal scorn.

This may occasionally do injustice to men of real conviction in the two extreme camps. But it has the virtue of keeping the Asbury prose salty and sassy.

The author revels in the ironical fact that our ancestors for the most part drank like fish. He enjoys his iconoclastic duty of revealing that the Puritans, far from being teetotalers, were given to concocting and swilling large quantities of grog.

For nearly 200 years, preachers seem to have been among the worst offenders. Asbury appears to have proved beyond cavil that in some parts of New England half of the Bible-thumpers were sots, and that ordinations were likely to be roaring revels.

But Asbury's devilish joy in needling our forebears does not keep him from showing equal relish when he starts relating the activities of the reformers, many of whom he seems to admire. True, the Washingtonian crusade of former inebriates, which was a howling but brief success in the 1850s, and the women's praying-and-hatchet-wielding forays against the saloons, which began in the 1870s, went the way of most emotional revivals. After a short binge of virtue and repentance, most of the boys who were "saved" soon deserted the sawdust trail and once more went reeling down the primrose path.

BUT OUT OF the mass movement of knocking-in-the-heads-of-barrels during the 1870s came the WCTU and the Anti-Saloon League, which are still functioning.

Not all the drys were eccentrics and fanatics. Asbury has great respect, for instance, for Frances Willard. And, while he thinks Carrie Nation was literally a little crazy, he admits that she dramatized the evils of drink as no other rampaging female before or since.

As the book approaches the Prohibition Era and enters that long drought, it gets very serious. Asbury admits the obvious truth that the drys were (in many cases) selfless idealists, while the pre-Volstead wets were, almost without exception, corrupt and greedy.

During Prohibition, while unprecedented crime raged throughout the land, the quality of dry leadership diminished while many surprisingly respectable citizens glamorized the good old days of plentiful and legal booze.

And, as the author so rightly insists, "everybody was lying."

Well, we have it all back again. And in some parts of America there are streets of bars as tough, as dirty and as linked with crime as before Prohibition.

Drinkers and drink dispensers alike have been given a "second chance." But what have they done with it? Asbury quotes the late Will Rogers for his final punch line:

"The poor dumb clucks. They ain't learned a thing."

"I have the feeling, Miss Cardew, that you might have a bright future in the cover department of some pocketbook publishing house"

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF PRESS PHOTOGRAPHY, a compilation of technical articles and history's best news pictures, published by the National Press Photographers Association, Inc., 235 East 45th st., New York 17, N. Y. 206 pp. $4.95.

THE BRAINS of 1800 active newspaper, magazine, newsreel and television cameramen, plus the talents of the men who make professional cameras, electronic flash units, shutters and lenses, all contributed to this textbook on press photography.

Each chapter deals with a subject in that field. Don Mohler of General Electric wrote the section entitled, "Multiple Flash in Press Photography." The B-C circuit is described by Joseph Costa, chief photographer for King Features. Gordon Kuster, head photographer of the Columbus Dispatch, writes about shooting color transparencies for newspapers. And the other pages are full of articles written by experts and doublechecked by other experts and the photographers themselves.

Of course, the book is also full of great pictures—The Hindenburg disaster; the submarine Squalus sinking; the Texas City explosions; the Bonus March riot. There is also a picture of a man grief-stricken over the body of his wife killed in an automobile wreck.

The book has been chosen as a text in several collegiate schools of journalism. It will interest all photographers.

Psychiatrist Bridges Gulf

The Neurotic Revealed As No Repulsive Alien

By Edith Weigert, M.D.

Dr. Weigert is chairman of the Washington subcommittee of the Washington-Baltimore Psychoanalytic Institute.

PRINCIPLES OF INTENSIVE PSYCHOTHERAPY. By Frieda Fromm-Reichmann, M.D. University of Chicago Press. 246 pp. $3.75.

IN THE FLOOD of modern literature on psychiatry, this book stands out by reason of the unspeculative, practical clarity and sincerity with which the author, a well-known psychotherapist, gives the public glimpses into her daily workshop.

Dr. Fromm-Reichmann was trained in psychoanalysis in Europe, and has devoted the past 15 years to therapeutic work with people neurotically disabled and to the treatment of mental patients at Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium, Rockville, Md. She has also given much time to training colleagues in the field of psychiatry and psychoanalysis at the Washington School of Psychiatry and the Washington-Baltimore Psychoanalytic Institute.

She combines deference to the genius of Freud with an alert openness to all progressive trends in modern American psychiatry, and shares with the late Harry Stack Sullivan a pioneering penetration of psychoanalytic insight into the obscure isolation of the mentally ill.

TO DR. FROMM-REICHMANN, the mental patient is not the uncanny alien whom the so-called well-adjusted person shuns. She sees no essential differences in emotional make-up between the healthy and the sick, but only variations in degree.

Neurotic and psychotic patients suffer under the stress and strain of living, like all of us, only more so, and not so much because of congenital inferiority as because of heightened sensitivity due to harm to their early development which has walled them off from their environment. Unfortunately, they have been more or less unable to hope and to trust. Since emotional equilibrium depends on the capacity for exchange in meaningful interpersonal relations, the inwardly isolated person may become the victim of disintegrating despair.

The author shows in this book how the psychiatrist can become a bridge between the more or less isolated mental sufferer and the rest of us, but only to the degree that the psychotherapist's very personality becomes a useful instrument toward helping the patient to become not perfect, but more aware of his own blind spots, his own harmful prejudices and his own emotional insufficiencies. Dr. Fromm-Reichmann stresses the importance of training-analysis, in which the psychiatrist strives for the Socratic wisdom of self-knowledge. Important accompaniments are freedom from authoritarian conventionality and genuine respect for ethical values.

IN A SERIES of instructive examples of doctor-patient interviews, the author teaches the psychiatrist to understand the symbolic language of the patient's highly guarded and obscure communications. She demonstrates the tact of the careful listener, and shows how the over-sensitized patient recoils from any pretense or falsehood on the part of the physician like a burned child. The reader senses the value of genuine humility and spontaneous respect in the psychotherapist, respect for the patient's fundamental constructive potentialities which, even though he may have lost sight of them, are nevertheless unconsciously waiting for liberation.

The reader is moved by the author's deep enthusiasm for psychotherapy. Here is no flat optimism which denies life's tragedies, but a serious awareness of the dangers of human destructiveness, combined with trust in the ever-restoring resources of life.

This book offers not only valuable advice to the specialist; it appeals also to a broader public in whom interest in mental suffering is leading toward greater understanding and increased responsibility.

Notes on the Margin About Comic Genius

By Lee Grove

PETER KAVANAGH, author of "The Story of the Abbey Theater," has about him something of the same sweeping extravagance of the comic genius that characterizes H. L. Mencken.

In fact, Kavanagh considers Mencken "a darn good man, whom I enjoy," and the latter would probably have enjoyed himself hugely at a talk Kavanagh gave several weeks ago before the serious minded James Joyce Society of New York.

"They got blue with anger. One fellow couldn't even open his mouth, he was so angry," says Kavanagh unrepentantly.

"I said because they were puritans they needed obscenity cloaked as literature, and because they were ignorant they needed obscurity. Joyce is a gift to the ignorant and illiterate.

"They didn't applaud. I had only one supporter there. He came around the next day and gave me a pipe," said Kavanagh, handing over a $50 briar for admiring inspection.

IF THE JOYCEANS had been more familiar with Kavanaugh's background, they might not have been as surprised.

There was precedent. As president of the Gaelic Society at Trinity College, Dublin, student Kavanagh felt that there was a yawning uninterest in the society's forthcoming annual ceilidhe, or festival, with Irish square dances.

"I decided to introduce a little American jive into the festival, and the society broke into two sections," said Kavanagh.

Feeling ran high on both sides. "I was actually once thrown out of the chair physically, on my head," he recalled with relish.

DeValera considered it un-Irish. George Bernard Shaw wrote Kavanagh regretting that he was unable to attend because, said Shaw, "of my own attacks on sentimental Ireland."

When the ceilidhe came off, one of the newspapers ran a headline, "Jig Gives Way to Jive."

KAVANAGH was born 34 years ago in County Monaghan, which projects into northern Ireland, and is "sick of listening to politicians talking about the border—their coming here and collecting money is becoming a racket—but I am not interested in politics.

"My father was a shoemaker, and I am, too, by trade. Hans Christian Andersen, Maxim Gorki, Thomas Dekker the playwright, Lloyd George—anyone who was any good was a shoemaker," he adds expansively.

"Ireland is a peculiar country," he observes. "It was 500 years behind the times in 1900. It has only now reached Victorian times, and everyone is now trying to make himself respectable."

Referring to censorship there, Kavanaugh said, "They banned my brother (Patrick, poet and novelist), but I don't object to their banning books because I believe it is only a front to hide economic censorship. Liam O'Flaherty, James Stephens, Shaw, James Joyce—exiles all.

"Why do they leave Ireland? Not because they wanted to, but because they couldn't make a living. Why? Because the ultrarespectable, Tammany Hall type is in control. They are great praisers of the dead. Ireland is run by the Church and the politicians."

TURNING from Ireland to the Irish, Kavanaugh, who meanwhile had noted that "poverty never prevents anyone from making a fool of himself," observed that "the Irishman subconsciously realizes that emotion is part of the truth. I think the way we should arrive at truth is first by emotion, then prove it by reason."

Kavanagh, who spoke at the Arts Club of Washington Book Fair last Sunday, is currently considering doing a book about "the Irish American, that peculiar character. Maybe after the manner of George Borrow."

Smith Runs 100 Yards, Aggies Win, 40-20

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

BOB SMITH, TEXAS A&M, RUNNING 100 YARDS TO SCORE WITH OPENING KICKOFF AGAINST GEORGIA IN PRESIDENTIAL CUP GAME. TEXANS WON, 40-20

Only 12,245 See Georgia Beaten in 'Cup' Game

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Those rootin', tootin', high-falutin' Texas Aggies made a touchdown stampede out of the Presidential Cup game yesterday, running over Georgia's gridiron galoots, 40-20.

Bolted into the lead on a dazzling 100-yard touchdown run by Bruisin' Bob Smith with the opening kickoff, the Southwest Conference gang didn't let up until late in the third period when they had the Bulldogs muzzled with a 40-0 deficit.

Despite perfect football weather, a disappointing crowd of only 12,245 showed up in the 43,000 capacity Byrd Stadium for the first post-season skirmish sponsored by the Washington American Legion posts.

The 190-pound Smith, wearing a leather mask to protect a broken nose, was only one of the stars the two teams trotted out but as far as the skimpy gathering was concerned, the Houston-born junior was the top drawer performer.

Less than two minutes after Smith's long sprint. Quarterback Dick Gardemal passed for another A.&M. touchdown, but Smith was right back in the act 30 seconds before the first quarter was over.

This time he cannonballed 81 yards for another touchdown to catapult the Aggies into a 20-0 lead over the stunned Georgians.

Mr. Smith really went to town at the expense of the Bulldogs, who slightly overplayed their role of 7-point underdogs.

He gained 158 yards on 20 rushes, picked up another 121 on two kickoff returns, added 22 more on a pass reception and threw a 5-yard pass to set up another Aggie score to account for 306 yards against the vaunted Bulldog defense.

In the scoring department, however, the Aggies' mainspring took a back seat to his halfback teammate, 175-pound Bill Tidwell, who scored three touchdowns on runs of 36, 5 and 8 yards.

Halfback Zippy Morocco scored two of Georgia's touchdowns, one on a dazzling 65-yard punt return in the fourth quarter, when the losers scored twice while holding Smith & Co. scoreless.

Georgia's other score, its first of the game, came late in the third quarter, when the Aggies had cleaned their bench. Morocco bolted over from the 2-yard line to climax an 81-yard push.

Sophomore Halfback Lauren Hargove came up with the other Bulldog score, racing 40 yards on a punt return to the Aggie 16-yard line in the fourth quarter and then going over for the tally two plays later.

Unlike most Texas teams, the Aggies didn't resort to the air to do their damage. Maybe it was because the ball was wet from the damp field or maybe it was because they found the Bulldog line vulnerable. But the visitors from the pass-conscious Southwest tried only nine passes, completing three, one for a touchdown.

On the ground, however, they really pulverized that Georgia line, moving for 304 yards.

The Bulldogs, hamstrung by an alert, viciously charging Aggie line, gained 200 yards, but 131 came in the last half when the Aggies let down a bit, feeling safe with the 33-0 lead Smith and Tidwell had provided them.

The Aggie linemen were smacking the Bulldog ball carriers so hard they fumbled seven times and the Texans reclaimed three of them, converting two into touchdowns.

Caps Beat Knicks, 91-84, With Late Rally

Schnittker, Scolari Lead Comeback

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

The Washington Caps made a remarkable recovery late in the fourth quarter of their game with New York last night to beat the Knicks, 91-84, before 1825 delighted customers at Uline Arena.

Dick Schnittker was a one-man blitz for Washington as he steered the Caps away from what looked like a certain defeat in the final quarter. Schnittker dunked in three of his own rebounds, stole pass after pass from New York, and scored 13 points in the fourth quarter for Washington. Scolari also got hot for the Caps and the locals won going away.

Scolari was high point man for Washington with 22, while Schnittker garnered 18.

The victory was the first the Caps have scored over New York this year and only their second victory in 12 games against the Knicks. It made their National Basketball Association record seven wins against 14 losses. Tonight the Caps travel to Fort Wayne to play the Pistons.

Elusive Ray Lumpp made life miserable for the Caps in the third quarter by personally scoring 12 points with an unguardable hook shot. New York built up a nine-point lead, 67-58, one second before time ran out in the third quarter. Tom Byrnes' drive-in shot made it 67-60 at the end of the quarter.

Referee Sid Borgia was lucky to escape with his life before dozens of enraged fans who swarmed out on the floor to protest when he ruled that Vince Boryla's jump shot, made just as the horn sounded, was good. That tied the score, 42-42.

The undaunted little Ref ruled that not only was the shot good but that Frank Kudelka had fouled Boryla. Vince missed the free throw and the score remained tied.

Noor Wins Cup, Hill Prince Is Poor Third

By Bob Myers

INGLEWOOD, Calif., Dec. 9 (AP). Noor raced to a tremendous victory in the $100,000 Hollywood Gold Cup today and convinced his arch rival, Hill Prince, and more than 50,000 roaring fans that he is the finest handicap horse in the Nation this year.

The dark five-year-old horse from Ireland, the familiar red and white silks of a great western racing family flying brightly in the late afternoon sun, thundered under the wire to win his richest race of the year by a full length in new track record time for a mile and one-quarter.

Isador Bieber's Palestinian scored a surprising second and Hill Prince, the proud three-year-old champion from Virginia, rolled in a disappointing third, three lengths further back.

The Noor triumph, matching in brilliance the four conquests he ran over the superb Citation earlier this year, was clocked at 1:59 4/5, a fifth of a second off the track record set by Cover Up in 1947 in this Gold Cup classic.

Noor Pays $3.40

Noor, racing for Mrs. Charles S. Howard, was the public choice from the first moment the lights began to blink on the parimutuel board, and paid $3.40, $2.90 and $2.20. Palestinian returned $14 and $4.90, and Hill Prince, the second in the public fancy, $2.60.

The victory of Noor in this eleventh running of the Gold Cup at a mile and a quarter further enhanced his acclaim as the top handicap horse of the year and did much to rub off some of the glitter for Christopher T. Chenery's Hill Prince, who had been named not only the outstanding three-year-old of 1950, but the "Horse of the Year" by the august Thoroughbred Racing Associations.

If nothing else, Noor's scorching first place for the $100,000 net prize afforded adquate revenge for the Howard faction for the Irish chapion's humiliating four-length defeat by Hill Prince in the Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont early in October.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Next Move, the lone filly of the field of eight, almost swiped the race from the male faction but wilted under a spectacularly hot pace and finished fourth.

Ponder, the Calumet Farm's third choice favorite, rallied too late and wound up fifth. Trailing in order behind him were the Yolo Stable's Great Circle, the King Ranch's veteran Assault in doubtless his last race, and On Trust.

Noor's triumph, with veteran rider Johnny Longden winning this fixture for the first time in seven tries, brought his earnings in this country to $356,940 and marked his seventh first place in 11 starts this year.

Hill Prince suffered a slight nick on the right hind coronet, apparently clipping himself when he was taken up sharply on the stretch run.

Game Had Everything—but Fans

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

No doubt about it, the President's Cup extravaganza at Byrd Stadium yesterday had everything — everything but people.

The announced crowd of 12,245 seemingly was being outnumbered when the last of the colorful marching units came out of the north side ramp to blanket the field from goal line to goal line.

At that, the bandsman were lucky. They didn't have any trouble finding choice seats.

The one portion of Maryland's beautiful stadium packed to the rafters was the press box. Elbow room was at a premium. Press Director Jack Espey proudly was talking about all the cities covering the game. They included New York, Chicago, Newark, Atlanta, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth and Virginia's Richmond, Portsmouth and Norfolk.

Baltimore and Washington were more than slightly represented and a record number of free-loaders contributed their bit in making working conditions tough for the working press.

Montgomery - Blair's band marched to the stirring tune of "The Washington Post March." That ought to be worth a line in this newspaper.

Only people not enjoying the pre-game ceremonies were the officials. They plainly were fretting at 1:30 p. m. when it looked like it would take two hours for all the bands to get off the field.

Not only that, the ball hadn't even arrived. It did, though, at 1:42 p. m.—the hard way. Disdaining anything as simple as a helicopter the people in

Fesler Quits Ohio State Due To Poor Health

CHICAGO, Dec. 9 (AP).—Wes Fesler, on the verge of a nervous breakdown during the football season, resigned as head football coach of Ohio State University in a surprise move tonight at the annual Big Ten winter meetings.

Giving his reason for quitting as "poor health," Fesler presented his resignation to Athletic Director Dick Larkins. Larkins, in turn, handed it to Ohio State president, Dr. Howard L. Bevis. It was accepted.

Fesler told a friend that "I was in the training room during the football season more often than the players — getting treatment for my head and neck."

Rumors that the handsome 40-year-old coach would resign came a year ago when Ohio State was training for the Rose Bowl game. After the game, which his Buckeyes won from California, Fesler said he would stay as coach.

Although it lost its opener to Southern Methodist, Ohio State finished in a tie for second place in the conference

Browns, Needing a Victory, Meet Redskins Here Today

The Cleveland Browns, exuberant over the prospect of winning the divisional championship, and the Washington Redskins, exuberant over the end of the season, clash at Griffith Stadium today before about 30,000 observers.

It's the twelfth and last game of a nightmarish campaign for the locals. But, if they should upset the 9-point-favored Browns it will probably be the end of the road for the Clevelanders also.

Here's the situation: Cleveland is tied with the New York Giants for the American Conference lead. Each has won 9 games and lost 2. The Giants play the Eagles at Philadelphia today and are 3-point favorites to whip the dethroned champs.

One contender, either the Browns or the Giants, must lose and the other win today to settle the race. A tie by one would do it too.

If both win, lose, or tie, they play off next Sunday at Cleveland.

Over in the National Conference, the Chicago Bears must whip the Detroit Lions to tie the Los Angeles Rams, who finished their regular season campaign last Sunday with a record of nine triumphs against three losses.

If the Bears win, they will play off next Sunday also, at Los Angeles.

Winding up their first season in the National Football League, Coach Paul Brown's four-time AAC champs come to Griffith Stadium with a five-game winning streak.

One of the victories is a 20-14 decision over the Redskins, gained against the Browns. He was in-

At Caps Basketball Clinic

McKinney Takes the Mike to Instruct Kids; As Refs, Scolari, Bones Make Good Players

COACH BONES McKINNEY and his Washington Caps won themselves thousands of new young friends yesterday with their free basketball clinic at Uline Arena.

The Caps were in uniform and Bones was at the mike. He had the Caps go through their plays and shots, and explained how and why they use them.

There were also three 10-minute scrimmages, between Eastern and St. John's, McKinley Tech and St. Albans, and Gonzaga and Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

Each scrimmage was broken up into five-minute halves, with the Caps stepping in at intermission to point out mistakes and suggesting ways of correcting them.

It made a big hit with the kids and the coaches. Coach Herman Littman of Eastern, for example, said, "This is the best type of help we could possibly receive and we're extremely grateful. McKinney and his players were cordial and helpful and very sincere. My boys will be better players as a result."

For the record, scrimmage scores were: St. Albans, 12, Tech, defending Interhigh champion, 10; St. John's, Catholic champs, 12, Eastern, 8; Gonzaga, 10, Bethesda, 9.

McKinney, Freddie Scolari and Frank Kudelka refereed the scrimmages, and some of more mature onlookers chuckled "After their exhibition, they shouldn't complain about the refereeing the Caps get."

Of course, there were autographs. Each youngster was given pictures of his favorite Cap player, and a "Follow The Caps" button, entitling him to a special 25 cents admission to the rest of the games.

McKinney's comment about the whole affair was:

"We should have more of these. I particularly enjoyed watching the high school teams play. A couple of those kids I could use right away.

"Only disappointing thing I saw," said McKinney, "was some of them trading 10 of my pictures for one of Scolari."

ATLANTA, Dec. 9 (AP).—Live telecasts of football games were barred today in the Southeastern Conference as officials wound up their three-day annual winter meeting.

Television broadcasts of football games were permitted beginning at noon the Sunday following the game, earlier than a 6 p. m. deadline recommended by the executive committee.

Missouri Tops CCNY, 54-37

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP).—Underdog Missouri sprang a major upset tonight by whipping City College of New York, 54 to 37, in the feature of a cage twin bill at Madison Square Garden. It ended a 12-game winning streak for the NCAA and NIT champs.

The Big Seven Conference quintet played a possessive style of game that baffled CCNY. Missouri put together a string of 17 straight points to lead, 31 to 14, at halftime and kept Ed Warner, Ed Roman and company bottled up in the second half.

A crowd of 18,000 saw Siena upset Manhattan, 56 to 51, in the first game.

Ward—Who Else?—Post's Player of Year

Opposing Players Pay Best Tribute to Him

Bobby Ward, whose name has appeared in local newspapers almost as frequently as President Truman's the last 10 days, is The Washington Post's college football player of the year.

Bobby Ward

Ward, 23-year-old University of Maryland guard, has made practically everybody's All-America except the Ladies' Home Journal's this season.

He's the first District player in 11 years to be named to the Associated Press' first team All-America and only the third from the District in 26 years to be so honored.

Ward's selection to the All-America is not tainted, even though a good tub-thumping job by George Carroll, Maryland publicity man, helped considerably.

He was the unanimous choice of four of Maryland's foes who have picked All-Opponent teams so far and yesterday the Nation's football players themselves voted him to the Chicago Tribune's players' All-America.

His coach, Jim Tatum, is naturally thrilled over the success of his star lineman, but he's more enthused over the fact that Ward will be back again next season. He's only a junior.

Area All-Collegiate Comprises 2 Platoons

By Herb Heft

In keeping with the trend toward the two-platoon system, The Washington Post's 1950 area All-Collegiate football squad consists of a 22-man first team and 11 honorable mentions. The squad:

Erdelatz and Guepe Area Coaches of Year

Navy's Eddie Erdelatz, whose Middies' amazing 14-2 upset of vaunted Army, and Virginia's Art Guepe, whose Cavaliers' 8-2 record was the best in the area this season, are The Washington Post's area coaches of the year.

Eddie Erdelatz

Art Guepe

There'll certainly be no quarrel with those selections in Annapolis and Charlottesville.

Erdelatz, in his first year as coach of the Tars, piloted Navy to its greatest triumph in history in the Army game. It came during a week when when Army Coach Earl Blaik took offense at the rating of Oklahoma over Army as the Nation's top team.

Erdelatz's hopped-up Sailors quieted all arguments by dumping the 20-point favored Soldiers who were previously unbeaten.

Guepe, who like Erdelatz is only 36, coached the Cavaliers to their first victory over North Carolina in six years last Saturday. It wasn't just a victory, it was a rout, 44-13. Unlike most coaches, Guepe is a perfectly frank and even optimistic coach. If he thinks his team will win on a Saturday, he says so.

Last year he said his Cavaliers would beat Penn. The Virginians did, for the first time in 56 years. Last week he said they'd whip Carolina. They trounced the Tar Heels.

In Navy parlance, which they both understand since they served in it, "well done Coach Erdelatz and Coach Guepe."

Texas Jolts LSU on Big 2d Period

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 9 (AP).—Southwest Conference champion Texas smashed Louisiana State University with a three-touchdown flurry in the second quarter today, 21-6.

Fullback Byron Townsend came within inches of claiming clear title to Southwest Conference scoring honors for the season. He smashed through LSU's line twice from the 1-yard line for Texas' first two tallies, running his 10-game total to 84 points, same as Texas A. and M.'s Bob Smith. He missed a third tally by inches.

Quarterback Ben Tompkins turned in Texas' longest scoring run from scrimmage this year — 38 yards—and kicked three extra points to round out the Longhorns' 21 points.

It took a Texan to score for LSU. With a minute and a half remaining, Fullback Billy West broke into the Texas secondary and ran 24 yards before lateraling off to Right Half Billy Baggett of Beaumont, Tex. Baggett stumbled out of a tackler's grasp and sped the remaining 25 yards

Texas started rolling toward the end of the dull, scoreless first period. Rocked back to their 1-yard line by penalities, and slashing tackles by the Texas defense, LSU kicked out and Texas Safety Bobby Dillon returned to the 24. Then Bubba Shands swept to LSU's 12. Five plays later, Townsend slammed over from the 1, and Tompkins booted his first extra point.

With Tompkins obviously feeding Townsend the ball, Townsend cracked over from the 1 again to terminate a 41-yard surge. Tompkins' 19-yard pass to End Ben Procter was the key play.

Tompkins scored Texas' third touchdown of the second quarter on a 38-yard sprint after he appeared trapped on a pass attempt.

Smith Leads Aggies' Win Over Georgia with a record of having permited only two teams to score two touchdowns against it in an 11-game season.

Twelve minutes after the opening kickoff, Coach Wally Butts' crew couldn't make that statement as the scoreboard showed the Aggies winning, 20-0.

It took Smith 14 seconds to make his brilliant 100-yard run. He caught Tillitski's kick on the Aggie two-yard line, dropped it and recovered on the goal line. He then set out on a sideline course and behind a mass of redshirts streaked untouched down the east sideline to score.

Tillitski, who had kicked off to him, made a futile leap for the cannon-balling Smith at the Georgia 40 but missed him by a yard.

Darrell Hooper kicked the first of his four extra points to make it 7-0 in the first 16 seconds of play but it remained that way for only about a minute.

Georgia, dazed by Smith's great run, fumbled on the first play after the kickoff and Center Jim Fowler pounced on Morocco's fumble on the Georgia 22-yard line. In three plays it was 13-0 as Quarterback Dick Gardemal flipped 18 yards to End Jerry Crossman and then four more yards to Halfback Glen Lippman for the score.

Quiet for 30 Seconds

All was quiet for the next few minutes but 30 seconds before the quarter ended they again were yelling "Whatta man this Smith is."

Center Fowler again provided the Aggies with their start toward a touchdown. He smacked into Halfback Billy Mixon, made him fumble and pounced on the ball on the Texas 19, stemming a Georgia charge which had gone 37 yards.

Gardemal then pulled a beaut. He neatly faked a handoff to Halfback Lippman, who ran wide, and handed off to Smith who slammed between tackle and guard. He squirmed away from one tackler, cut to his right and zoomed 81 yards for a touchdown the second time he had gotten the ball from scrimmage.

Now trailing 20-0 and with only two first downs to show trying to run against the Aggies, the Bulldogs switched to a passing game in the second quarter and it quickly paid off in a touchdown—for the Aggies.

Charlie McDonald intercepted a Mal Cook aerial on the Bulldog 36 midway in the period and four plays later the scoreboard showed Aggies 26, Bulldogs 0.

Tidwell Around End

Smith ripped off 23 of the 37 yards in two tries and when the attack reached the Georgia eight, the Bulldogs stacked their defense waiting for Smith at tackle. What they got, however, was Tidwell at end and another TD scored against them.

The teams exchanged fumbles for the next few minutes, but 29 seconds before intermission, the Aggies had scored again. Lippman legged back to set up this one. A Smith pass, his first of the year, to Copeland, was good for 5 yards, and on the next down Tidwell got his second touchdown with another encirclement of end, to make it 33-0 at halftime.

Tidwell accounted for his third touchdown midway the third quarter with a 36-yard excursion to up the score 40-0 and at that point Coach Harry Stiteler called off the dogs and inserted his poop troopers.

Georgia Goes 81 Yards

Georgia took advantage of the lull to go 81 yards, aided by two penalties, for a score with Morocco gaining 56 of the yards and the touchdown.

In the fourth quarter, Mr. Morocco sped 65 yards for another Bulldog touchdown and late in the game the Bulldogs drove 44 yards for the game's final score.

The Aggies had the ball on the Bulldog eight at the finish, driving for their seventh touchdown but the clock, not the Bulldogs, stopped them.

Dodgers Restrict Game Broadcasts To 'Own Territory'

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 9 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers announced today they will cooperate with minor leagues and restrict their radio broadcasts to their "own territory."

E. J. (Buzzy) Bavasi, Dodger vice president, said in a telephone conversation from Miami the Dodgers would broadcast the games "only where it would do us some good."

Last year the Brooklyn club broadcast over its own network into many sections of the country.

Touchdowners Honor Parilli, Bud Wilkinson

Bud Wilkinson, coach of Oklahoma's unbeaten Sugar Bowlers, and Babe Parilli, quarterback of the Kentucky team the Sooners meet in New Orleans January 1, have been chosen as the Washington Touchdown Club's coach of the year and back of the year.

Along with six other college and pro coaches and players, they will be honored at the Touchdown Club's sixteenth annual awards banquet at the Statler January 6.

Bud McFadin, All-America guard on Texas' Southwestern Conference champs, was named college lineman of the year; Quarterback Bob Waterfield, of the Los Angeles Rams, as the pro player of the year; and Steve Owens, of the New York Giants, who beat the Cleveland Browns twice, as the pro coach of the year.

Bobby Ward, Maryland's All-America guard, will receive the Lieut. Rob. Smith Award as the area's outstanding player.

Navy Quarterback Bob Zastrow, who scored one touchdown and passed for the other in Navy's sensational 14-2 upset of Army, will be presented with an award for the best individual performance of the season.

Nichols' Foul Defeats C. U. For Quantico

Special to The Washington Post

QUANTICO, Va., Dec. 9.—Jack Nichols sank a technical foul shot with less than a minute to play and gave Quantico's Marines a 66-65 triumph over Catholic University of Washington, D. C., here tonight.

Nichols also brought the Marines from behind with 1:15 left when he made a backhand shot from underneath the basket to put the Marines in the lead, 65-64.

George Hughes of Catholic matched Nichols' charity toss with 25 seconds left, but Quantico put on the "freeze" to sew up the game.

Eastern, GW High, St. John's Represented

By Bill Gilbert

SPENCER LAMPIRIS of Eastern, Tom Collins of St. John's, and Les Scott of George Washington High are The Washington Post's High, Prep and Suburban Players of the Year.

Lampiris, a center playing his second year of football, improved with every game and he began his uphill fight by beating out last year's regular center.

A good blocker on offense, he was a strong stop-gap on defense while backing up the line.

FULLBACK Collins was a big cog in St. John's Catholic High League championship season. He is as good a runner as any other man on the squad, and his blocking helped pave the way for other members of the backfield.

Les Scott

Spencer Lampiris

Tom Collins

The Washington Post, apparently, is not alone in its opinion of Scott. Friday night, team members, at their annual banquet, voted the 170-pound guard most valuable player, and he is a top candidate for the All-State team.

Scott's 1950 season with G. W. was his third varsity year, and in Scott's case, the third was the charm. He did all the team's punting, played both offense and defense, and sometimes pulled out of the line to try his luck at running and passing.

Redskins, Cleveland Play Today

in the last five minutes of play at Cleveland three weeks ago. Flushed by this and a two-game winning streak, their longest of the year, the Redskins are confident that this time they'll whip the Ohioans.

Sammy Baugh, who pitched the Redskins to victories over the hapless Baltimore Colts and Pittsburgh Steelers to snap an eight-game losing streak, didn't play jured and so was Harry Gilmer, who played despite a shoulder ailment.

It's the first meeting of Baugh and Quarterback Otto Graham, of the visitors, rated the best passer in the old AAC for four years.

But the player most Washingtonians want to take a peep at is Fullback Marion Motley, the Browns' 240-pound Negro ramrod. Motley is the league's leading rusher, with a 5.6 yards average, which is no news to the Redskins.

Against the locals, Motley ground out 178 of the Browns' 258 yards on the ground.

Proximity Wins Harness Title

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP).—Proximity, harness racing's all-time champion money winner, today was named "harness horse of the year" for 1950.

Bannerman Gets Lost Jersey Back With an Apology

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 9 (AP).—Midshipman Dave Bannerman is grateful to someone. The Navy fullback received his lost football jersey with today's mail, special delivery.

Bannerman had issued a plaintive call for the No. 34 blue and gold jersey he wore when Navy upset Army in Philadelphia a week ago. It had turned up missing at a post-game celebration.

Someone somewhere read of Bannerman's misery. The package contained a note of apology, but no name.

Coley Wallace And Spagnola Fight Monday

Coley Wallace, young New York heavyweight, makes a bid for the bigtime in a scheduled 10-rounder with Duilio Spagnolo, highly-touted fighter from Milan, Italy, tomorrow night at Turner's Arena.

Wallace, former national amateur champion, is undefeated in the pro ranks. He has scored 10 knockouts, five of which were scored here.

But the hard-hitting New York University law school student will be up against his toughest opponent to date when he faces Spagnolo who claimed the Italian heavyweight title after whipping Gino Buonvino.

Spagnolo, who has won 14 out of 16 fights since coming to the United States, has been rated a 6-5 favorite

County Park League Opens

The Montgomery County Park Unlimited Basketball League opens its third season tonight at the Takoma Park Junior High gym. The league is under the sponsorship of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The league consists of eight teams and will operate on the round robin basis for seven games. The five teams with the highest percentage will participate in the playoff tournament.

High, Prep, Suburban

Mentzer, Gallagher, Lee Coaches of Year

DICK MENTZER of Eastern, Joe Gallagher of St. John's, and Harry Lee of Mount Vernon are the Washington Post's High, Prep, and Suburban Coaches of the Year.

Mentzer piloted his Ramblers to the Parochial-Interhigh (Division 1-9) city championship, and he did it the hard way. Dick's boys played their last three games in 12 days, and in three other games he had to bring his boys from behind to win.

Gallagher's T-formation Cadets won the Catholic High title and nine of their 10 games, but successful seasons are nothing new to Gallagher. In 1947, his first year as head coach, he took St. John's through an undefeated season of nine games and won the Catholic championship. He has also won three straight Parochial crowns with his basketball squads.

Joe is a local boy that made good. He graduated from St. John's in 1939 and from George Washington U. in 1943.

Lee's Mount Vernon Majors won the Fairfax County championship for the fourth straight year, but that isn't nearly all. Lee guided Mount Vernon to the most successful season in its history, finishing with eight triumphs and only two defeats.

A former quarter back at Furman, Lee's team finished sixth this year among the 21 schools in the Virginia High School Group I Conference. This was only Mount Vernon's second year in Group I, since the student enrollment was not large enough for admittance to the group until 1949.

Lee is married and has two boys. Nine-year-old "Happy," the team mascot since his dad came to Mount Vernon, has a regulation uniform and accompanies the team captains to midfield for the coin toss prior to kickoff for each game.

It seems that Mount Vernon, Lee and "Happy" have all grown up together.

Cooper, Barron Gain 4-Ball Final

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 9 (AP).—Pete Cooper and Claude Harmon face Jim Turnesa and Dave Douglas tomorrow in the finals of the $10,000 Miami International four-ball golf tournament.

Douglas, of Newark, Dela., and Turnesa, Briarcliff, N. Y., were forced to come from behind to upset Defending Champion Cary Middlecoff, Ormond Beach, Fla., and Ed (Porky) Oliver, Seattle, Wash., one up, on the eighteenth green.

The amazing combination of Cooper, Ponte Vedra, Fla., veteran and Harmon, Palm Beach, Fla., eliminated Bob Toski, Northampton, Mass., and Toney Penna, Cincinnati, Ohio, 2 and 1.

The Douglas-Turnesa team has carded 26 birdies — one under par — and one bogie — one over par — in 87 holes of match-play golf over the tricky 6347-yard Miami Country Club course.

Cooper and Harmon have carded 22 birdies—one eagle—two under par — and today had their first "bogie" in 82 holes of golf.

Cooper has turned in one of the most amazing displays of precision putting ever witnessed in a Miami tournament. He paced his team to a 3-up lead in the morning round with a six-under-par 66.

On the third hole in the afternoon round he canned a 30-footer for a birdie three. On the next hole he chipped in from 40 feet off the green for another birdie three and sunk a 25-foot approach shot on the sixth hole but lost the hole to Toski, who canned a 30-foot putt for a birdie two.

Cooper's five-foot birdie putt on the seventeenth green ended the match.

The four losing players each picked up $400 today.

Losers of the 36-hole finals match each receive $750; the winners take home $1250 each.

Group Blasts AAU Snub Of Stranahan

The Ohio delegation to the AAU convention here loosed an angry blast yesterday at "Avery Brundage and his bunch of stuffed shirts."

Brundage is head of the AAU.

The delegation was angered by the refusal of the James E. Sullivan Award Committee to accept the nomination of amateur golfer Frank Stranahan, allegedly for the reason that "Stranahan has too much money."

Members of the Ohio delegation signed the following statement protesting the refusal of the committee to consider Stranahan for the award:

"When the world's outstanding amateur golfer is not given consideration for nomination as the outstanding amateur athlete of the year for the James E. Sullivan award solely because of his financial status then it is time for the National AAU to reorganize the Awards Committee to better insure fair play and justice to all.

"We, of the Ohio Association of the AAU, feel that Stranahan's brilliant record as an amateur athlete far surpasses any of the nominees selected by the Sullivan Award Committee.

"When presenting our case for Stranahan, we followed the established procedure of former years, only to find out at the last moment that a new procedure was established which was not only misleading and confusing, but made it impossible for any consideration this year."

The petition was drafted by A. G. Morse, of Toledo, a member of the Ohio AAU Board of Governors. Mayor James Rhodes of Columbus, Ohio, a former president of the AAU was quoted as saying he would sign the statement.

The University of Wisconsin's Don Gehrmann won the Wanamaker Mile yesterday, but it took him a long time to do it—314 days to be exact.

The national Convention of the Amateur Athletic Union named Gehrmann winner of the event by a vote of 314 to 108 as it balloted to accept the report of a special committee to investigate the decision of the race.

Last January 28 Gehrmann and Fred Wilt of the New York A. C. ran to a near dead heat in Madison Square Garden with hardly an eyelash between them.

Ray Robinson Wins; Dutch Boo Low Blow

BRUSSELS, Dec. 9 (AP).—Ray (Sugar) Robinson, world welterweight champion, knocked out Luc van Dam of Holland, in the fourth round tonight but he left the ring with virtually all 15,000 spectators on their feet booing his victory.

The Dutch middleweight champion, who outweighed Robinson by a single pound, was holding his own until late in the third round when the American uncorked what appeared to be a low blow. Van Dam, who scaled 157½, went down but was saved by the bell.

He was carried to his corner, came out for the fourth round and was flattened, this time by a left cross to the head. The end came in one minute of the fourth round.

Until the questionable blow in the third the Dutchman was a distinct surprise. In the first he scored frequently with lefts to Robinson's nose. He continued his success in the second and Robinson was warned by Referee Gustave de Baecker of Belgium, for his ring tactics.

It was not until the third that van Dam unlimbered his right. He was doing well with it until Robinson dropped him with the blow to the stomach.

No. 5 Wins Metro Title

Club No. 5 captured the 140-pound championship of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club football league yesterday, defeating Club No. 11, 14-0, at Fairlawn Field.

Porky Hollis scored first for the winners, scooting 20 yards with an intercepted lateral pass. Bob Dewdney scored on a 65-yard jaunt. A safety gave No. 5 its other two points. The winners play Merrick Boys' Club next week for the city-wide championship.

A playoff in the 120-pound division saw Club No. 4 defeat Club No. 10, 6-0, on a touchdown by Johnny Guice. Next week Club No. 4 will meet Club No. 11 for the 120-pound championship of the League.

In other games, the Western Branch of the Washington Boys' Club triumphed, 19-0, over Police Boys' Club No. 12, to win the city title in the 90-pound division.

Western Branch also won the 105-pound city championship, beating Police Boys' Club No. 10, 7-6.

Presidential Cup Production Had Everything—But People

charge decided to drop it from a Piper Cub at 1000 feet.

Surprisingly, it came off pretty well. The ball floated down in a parachute with both school colors. It came to rest on about the 42-yard-line—and only in the eighth row on the south side.

Bombardier on the mission of dropping the ball was Air Force Lieut. Col. Joe Batjer. For some strange reason, the pilot was Detective Sergt. Cecil Brown of the Fairfax County police.

Notre Dame Coach Frank Leahy was a surprise visitor. He came up from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where he's taking a rest from his strenuous football season and losing battle with an influenza bug.

Maryland's big Jim Tatum took considerable pride in showing Leahy around the new stadium.

Venerable Senator Tom Connally is all Texan. Right before the game he was placed in an official box but protested bitterly when he learned it was on the Georgia side. They could not placate him, either, and Dan Wiseman, chief of the U. of Maryland police, finally dug up a car and transported him to the Aggies' north side.

General Chairman Charles R. Garity, whose pregame attendance guess was 25,000, insisted the whole affair was a huge success. His formal statement said, "The Legion feels it has pioneered what is destined to become one of the real institutions of postseason football."

Garity said the game committee will meet soon to lay plans for an "even greater attraction next year." At the same time, Legion officials were estimating a loss of more than $20,000 on yesterday's production.

Aside from the game sponsors, principal diehards were those who paid $2.40 for end zone seats. Although they could have moved nearer the 40-yard line, many sat behind the goal the entire game. Their attitude must have been that they paid $2.40 and insisted on $2.40 seats.

Oh, well, everybody appeared to be having an enjoyable afternoon. That may not include the party that posted $50,000 for the appearance of the two teams. And George Coach Wally Butts wasn't his usual smiling self.

Navy Thumps F&M, 72-54, For 2d in Row

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 9 (AP).—Gathering steam by the minute Navy whipped Franklin and Marshall, 72-54, today for its second straight basketball triumph.

The Midshipmen trailed for 10 minutes of a low-scoring first half but went ahead, 12-10, when Dave Mullaney sank a field goal at the end of one of Navy's flashy, fast breaks. Once in the lead, Coach Ben Carnevale's Middies stayed there.

Capt. Joe Fitzpatrick, an overhead set-shot artist, again paced Navy scorers with seven goals and two free throws for 16 points.

Western Branch Tops Club No. 10 For Boys Title

Bill McCormack swept three yards around end and Bob Herman rushed the conversion in the third period to give Western Branch Washington Boys' Club a 7-6 victory over Police Boys' Club No. 10 for the city 105-pound boys club championship yesterday on the Ellipse. Bill Smith ran 10 yards around end for the losers' touchdown.

Western's 90-pounders also won their city title, defeating Police Boys' Club No. 12, 19-0, with Dave Wilkinson scoring all three touchdowns.

Western won the 80-pound Boys' Club of Washington crown with a 6-0 triumph over Merrick. Sonny Tyson scored the touchdown on a 65-yard reverse.

Big 10 Gives Czar Sweeping Powers

CHICAGO, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Big Ten today granted Commissioner K. L. (Tug) Wilson sweeping authority to punish violations of its recruiting and subsidization regulations at its annual winter meeting.

The commissioner, who previously could investigate reported violation of these rules on a formal charge by another school, now can initiate investigation and also rule in such cases on his own authority.

Wilson can suspend both an individual athlete or a school he deems guilty of violation for a 10-day period pending an appeal by the affected school. If the school fails to appeal a formal suspension will follow.

In the case of a violating school, the commissioner can take four steps ranging from an official reprimand to a request for an indefinite suspension from conference membership. In the latter case, the severance of conference relations would follow failure of the temporarily-suspended school to refute the commissioner's findings in an appeal before the faculty representatives. This pertains to flagrant violation.

In case of a school's coaching staff member who recruits in violation of the code, Wilson may deny him and other staff members in the same sport permission to contact prospective sudent for a one-year period. Should a school be guilty of repeated violations, the commissioner may boycott the school from conference games in the affected sport.

In the case of a student who receives financial aid illegally, the commissioner may deprive him of one year's competition for each year, or fraction thereof, he received the illegal aid.

In effect, it makes the commissioner a judge as well as investigator and prosecutor in cases of recruiting and subsidization. However, action on eligibility rules still remain within the jurisdiction of the faculty representative eligibility committee.

The athletic directors and faculty representatives approved a Michigan-Rose Bowl party of 65 players and officials with a total budget of $45,689.30.

4 Pull Quarterback Sneak—Go to Florida

By Ralph Murdock

HERE ARE FOUR anglers who were peeping right down the weatherman's throat. They may have intimated that they were under strict orders from their family physicians, were suffering from constant cases of insomnia and overwork—

Murdock

But to fishermen who know their angling best—it was a quarterback sneak to dodge the wintry blasts of the Chesapeake Bay and get in some fishing in a more desirable climate. Confidentially, where could you pick a better spot to fish and vacation than the Bimini islands just out of Miami, Fla.?

In the blue waters of the Gulf Stream is where Lou Fishman, Joe Miller, Nat Goldberg and Harvey Steinburg spent their 10-day fishing trip—under doctor's orders. Incidentally, but funny—no frost bites were reported.

Like any ordinary fishing trip (even in Chesapeake Bay), the big ones got away. However, good catches of barracuda, dolphin, kingfish and amberjack were boated. Fishman, rightfully named, landed the largest fish—a 40-pound dolphin. The sun-tanned anglers arrived back in the District Thursday to resume their regular chores.

IN WISCONSIN SEVEN men were reported killed by gunfire in the recent "any deer" season that probably brought out more than 300,000 hunters and resulted in a record take of deer. That means one hunting death for every 43,000 hunters.

SUCCESS RANGING from very good to fair was reported by hunters who came to the North Carolina coast for the opening of the waterfowl season. Gunners were out in capacity numbers all along the line.

Hunting was very good in the Carrituck Sound area and in the fields around 50,000-acre Lake Mattamuskeet, two of the world's most famous waterfowl wintering grounds.

On Lake Mattamuskeet itself, shooting reached the very good stage on the third day, when almost all parties got birds. The bag included many ducks as well as Canadian honkers for which the lake is best known.

Refuge Protector L. B. Tunnell states there are about 60,000 geese on the lake, more than there were on hand last year. The number of ducks is also greater than usual.

Coan's 4 Hits on Last Day Gave Him .303

Gil Coan's four hits in the last game of the season brought him the distinction of being the only .300 hitter on the Nats, it was disclosed yesterday with announcement of the American League's official 1950 batting averages.

Gil Coan

Coan lifted his figure to .303 with his final-day production against Philadelphia pitching. Eddie Yost and Irv Noren finished with identical averages of .295.

The Nats' team batting average of .260 tied them at sixth with the Chicago White Sox in that department, but the lack of power on Bucky Harris' club is pin-pointed in other statistics.

The official figures showed that the Nats were the lightest hitting team in the league in point of total bases—seventh in two-baggers and last in the home run department. The Nats with 76 homers and the White Sox with 93 were the only teams that failed to hit at least 100.

Noren, with his 98 runs batted in, tops for the Washington club, was eleventh in the league in that department. His 14 home runs was also the top figure on the team.

The final batting figures of other Washington players:

Mickey Grasso, .287; Mickey Vernon, .281; Same Mele, .275; Ed Stewart, .267; Cass Michaels, .266; Sherry Robertson, .260; Sam Dente, .239; Al Evans, .235; Len Okrie, .222.

It's Official: Goodman Wins Batting Title

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Boyish Billy Goodman of the Red Sox, an anemic-looking 150-pounder who fashioned a healthy .354 batting average, today officially was acknowledged as the American League's leading hitter of 1950.

The versatile 24-year-old from Concord, N. C., who played first base, third base and the outfield on different occasions for Boston during the past season, showed a 14-point margin over his nearest competitor, Detroit's George Kell, winner of the 1949 batting title.

Goodman, a left-handed hitter serving his fourth season in the majors, pounded out 150 hits in 424 times at bat, including 25 doubles, three triples and four homers in 110 games.

Dom DiMaggio, the Red Sox center fielder, finished third with a .328 mark.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Austerity And Discombobulation

Austerity is ahead. All the goings-on in Washington—Prime Minister Attlee's talks with President Truman, congressional hearings on taxation, the National Production Authority cutbacks on civilian use of aluminum, copper, nickel, zinc, and other metals—point straight to one thing, and one thing only: Fast and vast rearmament.

Livingston

Discombobulation is ahead, too. You can't recruit men for an enlarged military establishment, demand rapid war production from factories, and deprive civilian industry of basic materials, without causing some unemployment, some losses of earning power, and some revisions of industrial programs. The company that makes calculating machines today will be making tachometers for planes tomorrow.

As a consequence, Leon Keyserling, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, takes the wrong tack when he implies that we can rely on super-duper production to bail us out. Keyserling notes that the economy expanded by 75 percent between 1939, a near-depression year, and 1944, the year of the wartime peak. He holds forth the hope that maybe we could do that again.

To me, that's a snare, a false glow. We can't heap a defense boom. Civilian consumption will have to be cut. We'll have fewer cars, television sets, washing machines and other items which consume strategic materials. The standard of living will drop. The economy is not as elastic as it was in 1939.

Then we had 9,500,000 unemployed and the steel industry operated at only 65 percent of capacity. Today 2,200,000 are unemployed and the steel industry is operating above capacity. Manpower is the production bottleneck. As inductions of men into the armed forces accelerate, America's capacity to increase production will decelerate.

The prospects of discombobulation bring protests. Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, has assumed an unbecoming role, spearheading the attack on behalf of automobile dealers against Regulation W. Ruther contends that Regulation W favors the rich. The man who has money can buy a car, the man who hasn't money, can't.

Threat of Ford Layoffs

True enough. That's the very purpose of the regulation. If the rich man who has money doesn't use it on a car he might use it on something else. The effect of Regulation W is to cut down the credit, the demand, for goods as a whole.

Reuther is pursuing the United Auto Workers' line of 1940 and 1941. It was industry's line then, too. Understandably, employers and unions dread idleness and uncertainty during conversion from civilian to defense production. Nothing could be sweeter than a mesh between civilian cutbacks and war orders. But that's too much to expect.

What's really going to hurt auto workers is not W, but limitation orders on aluminum, copper, and so on. The Ford Motor Co. has announced that it will have to lay off 42,000 workers next March. When the showdown comes, Ford is unlikely to scatter its work force with large-scale defense business certain to come in. Cutting hours, spreading the work, is a logical solution, even as it was after VJ-Day.

Protection for Workers

Some temporary disemployment, however, will be unavoidable. And, as a protection to workers who are laid off, Congress could pass a law authorizing States to eliminate the unemployment-compensation waiting period—on certification from employers that the laid-off workers were victims of conversion. The Federal Government could bear the cost.

Economically, things won't jell for weeks. Washington's order of urgency runs like this: First, to decide on policy in regard to Communist China. Second, to determine the size of the over-all military effort. Third, to develop a recruitment program to meet the new military timetable.

Fourth, to get the production of weapons needed to provide initial equipment for the expanded Armies, Navies and Air Forces. Fifth, and finally, to barricade the domestic economy against the impact of the garrison state. This last will be done through higher taxes, credit curbs, and price controls, either voluntary or involuntary.

Once again prices are rising. Flour is going up 20 cents a hundredweight, reflecting the high quotation of wheat. Cotton, calves, sheep, lambs, and wool are just about at the highest levels on record. These advances have improved the status of the farmer. Again, the prices of goods he sells are higher than the prices of goods he buys (see chart). The farmers' parity ratio today is 105. Back in January it was 94.

The decision of General Motors to boost car prices 5 percent gives aid and comfort to advocates of price control and an excess-profits tax. They'll argue: If GM with record-shattering profits can't show restraint at a time like this, who can?

D. C. Nonchain Sales Up 7% In 10 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Sales of Washington independent stores in October increased 5 percent over the same 1949 month, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

This brought cumulative sales for the first 10 months to 7 percent above the corresponding period last year.

Of the 18 categories listed in the survey, nine showed plus signs, three were unchanged and six were down.

Sharpest increases in dollar volume were noted in the hardgoods fields. Gains for the month ranged from 11 to 25 percent in furniture, building materials, auto and hardware.

Declines were in jewelry, shoes and women's apparel. Grocery sales displayed a slump of 8 percent in sales.

Here are the comparisons of local nonchain sales for October and the 10-month period, as surveyed by the Census Bureau's business division:

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Dec. 9 (AP).—Grains wound up with a mixture of gains and losses today after firming in the early trade and easing toward the close.

Wheat, the market's bellwether this week, scratched out small fractional gains. But elsewhere final prices were mixed or lower. Much of the selling toward the close came from short-term traders anxious to be out of the market over the weekend.

Wheat finished ⅛-⅜ higher, corn ¼-1⅜ lower, oats ⅜ lower to ¼ higher, rye ⅛-½ lower, soybeans ½ lower to 1 cent higher and lard 5 cents lower to 5 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Buying orders which had accumulated in the hands of commission houses overnight created the initial bulge. This was helped along by another boost in flour prices, continued dry weather in the southwest and more cold and snow in parts of the mid-west.

Minneapolis mills raised family flour 5 cents, effective immediately. There were rumors further advances would be made next week. A big flour business has been put through this week, according to trade sources.

The range follows:

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, DEC. 9 (AP).—Cotton futures closed irregular today after a quiet session. Final prices were $1.25 a bale higher to 15 cents lower.

Dealers attributed quiet conditions to cautiousness over the Korean situation and uncertainty brought about by price control talk. Trade buying centered in nearby deliveries and there was covering in spot December contracts prior to expiration of the deliveries at noon on December 15. Some of the buying in cotton was touched off by ECA issuance of a procurement authorization for Germany amounting to $44,200,000 for cotton. The cotton is to be purchased from December 15 to January 31. Final delivery date will be March 21.

Truman Sees 'No Short Cut' To End Strife

By The Associated Press

President Truman in a letter made public yesterday said there is not going to be any short cut to peace.

He added that all Americans will have to "give up things we should like to have" and asked the support of all branches of American public life in meeting the problems that lie ahead.

The Democratic Party, he continued, seeks "no partisan advantage in those fields that affect our national defense and our relations with other nations."

The letter was written November 20 to Dwight R. G. Palmer, chairman of the second annual New York dinner of the Democratic National Committee, to be held in that city next Tuesday night.

It was made public by Palmer and Democratic National Chairman William Boyle. Boyle said, in accord with Mr. Truman's wishes, the dinner this year will be simple and informal, with speeches dedicated to "fostering national unity during this critical period in world affairs."

The President wrote: "There is not going to be any short cut to preserving our own freedom or securing the peace of the world through international cooperation of free and peaceful nations. All of us will have to give up things we should like to have."

Mr. Truman expressed confidence that the American people "have never been more strongly united in their determination to preserve our own freedom and to aid friendly nations to keep their independence and work together to secure peace through international cooperation."

Nine Winners To Get Nobel Awards Today

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 9 (AP).—Eight Nobel prize winners will receive their awards from King Gustaf VI in a resplendent mid-century festival here Sunday, the fiftieth anniversary of the Nobel Foundation.

At about the same time, the Nobel peace prize will be presented to the ninth winner of the year, Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, in a solemn ceremony at the University of Oslo, Norway.

Along with Nobel diplomas and peaquettes, the nine will divide prize money totaling 977,744 crowns ($188,582). The awards, recognizing outstanding services to humanity, are financed from funds left by the late Alfred Nobel, the inventor of dynamite.

Four of the nine are Americans.

Dr. Bunche, the only Negro ever awarded the peace prize, was cited for his work as United Nations mediator in the Palestine war.

William Faulkner, Oxford, Miss., novelist, arrived here today to receive the 1949 prize in literature, which was withheld last year because Nobel authorities could not agree on a winner.

Two men from the Mayo Clinic of Rochester, Minn., Dr. Philip Hench and Dr. Edward C. Kendall, won the medical award jointly with Swiss Prof. Tadeusz Reichstein of Zurich for hormone research including the discovery of cortisone.

Two Britons and two Germans won prizes. The British recipients are Philosopher Bertrand Russell, winner of the 1950 literary prize, and Dr. Cecil F. Powell, a cosmic ray expert, who received the physics award.

The Germans are Dr. Otto Diels and Prof. Kurt Adler, who share the chemistry prize for discovery of the dien synthesis, a method by which odors and complex chemical compounds can be produced artificially.

District Lawyer Named President Of Montana U.

Dr. Carl McFarland, 46, a District lawyer and former assistant United States Attorney General, yesterday was named president of Montana University.

Now with the law firm of McFarland-Sellers and living at 4224 Vanness st. nw., McFarland telephoned acceptance of the offer from Montana's Board of Education.

Younger of 2 GI Brothers Is Wounded

The younger of the two Taylor brothers of Camp Springs, Md., both fighting in Korea, was wounded in action November 29, the Department of Defense announced yesterday.

Pfc. Taylor

Marine Pfc. William A. Taylor, jr., 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Taylor, sr., 5306 Branch ave. se., wrote home recently that he "had been having a bit of bad luck lately." With the First Marine Division, he went through the battles of Inchon, Seoul and Wonsan.

"We were just relieved the other day by the Third Army," he told the family. "We were up on top of a mountain—and was it cold . . . went down to 16 degrees below zero. We couldn't get any water, our canteens had frozen . . ." He gave no details as to how he had been wounded.

His brother, Staff Sergt. Clabert H. Taylor, 21, is serving in Korea with the Air Force Eighth Fighter Squadron.

Police to Check Night Clubs For Obscenity

Should anyone observe Prince Georges County policemen be ogling the girls and lending an eager ear to the comedians in county taverns and night clubs, it's all in the line of duty.

Lieut. Roscoe C. Sines, acting police chief, said yesterday he will order a close check of floor shows following complaints of "obscene" performances.

The county commissioners last week referred to Sines a letter received from Brentwood town authorities.

The letter "invited" police and the State's attorney's office to "pay close attention" to floor shows currently showing in Brentwood establishments.

Georgetown Moot Court Winners to Get Prizes

Three Georgetown University law students who won the first national moot court competition of law schools last week will receive prizes at a law school convocation at noon Monday in the Georgetown Law School auditorium, 506 E st. nw.

PROTEGE AND PATRON—Miss Marion Venable, director of the National Ballet, shares a few moments of relaxation with her 17-year-old protege, Washington's Venita Louise. There won't be many spare moments between now and the ballet's big evening Tuesday in Constitution Hall. Miss Venable has singled out Venita from thousands of students as "most talented"

D. C. Girl Stars as Ballerina

Teenager Will Solo With National Ballet In First Performance

By Flora Gill

THIRTEEN YEARS AGO, at a Chicago Opera Company performance at the old Belasco, the child cast as Mme. Butterfly's small son became frightened and refused to appear. A little girl who happened to be present with her father went on in the truant's place, although she, too, was very much afraid.

This 4-year-old substitute making her stage debut was Venita Louise Quigley of Washington. With comparable precocity, at the age of 17 she is appearing as a soloist with the National Ballet on December 12 at Constitution Hall—where she will divide program honors with such experienced ballerinas as Miss Kathryn Mullowny and Mme. Gloria Fokine.

However impressive Venita's Constitution Hall appearance proves to be, it can hardly surpass her Belasco debut for a surprise finish. The toddler's role in the Puccini piece calls for the child to sit blindfolded with an American flag in his hand while unhappy Butterfly prepares to take her life. Venita sat quietly, flag in hand—then electrified the audience by rising and, just as quietly, walking blindfolded off stage.

This original bit of business foreshadowed the 17-year-old ballerina who today likes to create her own choreography.

VENITA WAS BORN in Alexandria in 1933 and became a District resident at the age of seven months. She has been here ever since and lives with her mother, Mrs. Lula R. Quigley, and little brother Jackie in Northeast Washington. For dancing purposes, however, she has dropped the name of Quigley.

The ballet girls whom Degas sketched and painted in such multitudes would have to make room for Venita if the French artist were at work today. In her black tunic, hose and slippers, with a white chiffon scarf about her dark hair and a silver ballet slipper charm at her throat, she epitomizes the ballerina.

Even her face is by Degas. But its exotic cast is deceptive. As a matter of fact, it couldn't be more indigenous. For Venita is half American Indian! (The other half is Irish.)

Venita doesn't speculate about whether or not she got her grace from this ancestral strain. She doesn't know any Indian dances, but her costume for the "Caucasian Fantasy," which she will do for the National Ballet Tuesday evening, has long pig-tails and makes her look just like an Indian princess.

(Venita's great-grandmother on her father's side was an Indian squaw, and Venita remembers her very well. She died five years ago at the age of 99.)

Miss Marion Venable, Venita's teacher, whose school is an institution in Washington and who is director of the National Ballet, considers the young ballerina unique among thousands she has taught over a period of 20 years. Venita has been studying with Miss Venable since the age of 5 and at 17 is her protege.

Miss Venable was responsible for "The Event" in Venita's 17 years—three months at the Sadler's Wells School in London during the past spring. Ordinarily a student is not taken by the school for a period of less than three years. But through her teacher's intervention, Venita was accepted and sailed on the Queen Mary last June for England.

IN LONDON SHE lived with a family she describes as "strictly English." But it's clear that her real family consisted of the people at Sadler's Wells. Her greatest admiration is for Fonteyn, "the nearest thing to perfection that could be possible as far as a classical ballerina goes."

BECAUSE Venita's mind "has always been on dancing," she has found relatively little time for outside interests that are unrelated. At present she is teaching for Miss Venable, both at the school on N st. and at special classes at Fort Belvoir on Saturday mornings. At the latter she teaches "babies" (in dancing school terminology, 4½ to 6 years) from 9 to 10 a. m. and successively older groups in the hours from 10 to 1 p. m. Saturday is an especially busy day for Venita—she has to return from Fort Belvoir in time for 2 p. m. rehearsal with the National Ballet which runs through all day and evening and picks up again at 11 Sunday morning.

EVEN VENITA'S relaxation is likely to be energetic. Her hobbies are athletic, physical pursuits related to her dancing. Her favorite is riding, though she hasn't managed to do any recently. But she also loves swimming and fishing.

Her little brother Jackie (real name, Charles) also claims a good deal of her time. Venita's mother works all day and Venita does the family cooking, which Jackie (who is as blond as Venita is dark) unhesitatingly pronounces good. Just as unhesitatingly, he calls her spaghetti his favorite of her culinary achievements.

Venita collects—guess what!—statuettes of ballerinas. She used to cut out and save pictures of dancers, but now the pictures of dancers she saves are all of herself for her personal scrapbook.

SHE'LL HAVE lots more to paste in her book after Tuesday evening's appearance at Constitution Hall.

The evening, sponsored by the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution, will be the first public performance of the newly incorporated National Ballet.

Harris and Ewing Photos.

CAUCASIAN ROYALTY—Venita Louise is a princess on her toes in "Caucasian Fantasy," the ballet with choreography by Marion Venable, in which Venita will solo in her Constitution Hall appearance Tuesday

Mrs. Pepper's Seen Nearly Everything

By Marie McNair

MRS. CLAUDE PEPPER, wife of the Florida Senator, can truthfully say, "Now I've seen everything." Her latest trip with her husband, chairman of the Far East Subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee, took her around the world by air.

Starting point was Washington on September 6. First stop was Dublin for the Inter-Parliamentary Union. From then and there it was touch-and-go through Germany, with a visit to Oberammergau for the Passion Play, on to and through Belgrade, Trieste, Rome, Athens, Istanbul and Ankara.

In the Turkish capital, the Peppers were entertained at dinner by our Ambassador George Wadsworth, sailed the Bosphorus and glimpsed the Blue Mosque. Then came Beirut, Damascus, Bagdad and Teheran, where Mrs. Henry F. Grady, as the wife of our Ambassador, is America's First Lady.

WHAT LUCRETIA GRADY has accomplished in Iran would take a book, says Mildred Pepper. She has planted trees in the embassy gardens, rebuilt a neglected park into a playground, declared an Iranian Labor Day and put all the ladies to work painting benches and oil drums converted into benches.

All the color, the mysticism, splendor and magnificence of an Oriental fairy tale can be found in India, Mrs. Pepper discovered.

Arriving in time to witness the famous Jaipur festival, Mildred Pepper watched the parade of elaborately trapped elephants and camels, sparkling in gold and silver; the flood lighting on the trees.

AT THE HEAD OF the parade was the Maharajah in a landau drawn by four snow white horses with waving tails and manes. Diamonds sparkled from the ruler's draped turban and his shoes and studded the hilt of his sword.

For nine days the natives celebrate Dussehar, a festival of victory of the Goddess over the Demon who ultimately gets consigned to the river. The first six days is a period of worship, the final three, of gayety.

Almost a month in Tokyo gave the Peppers a pretty good insight on General MacArthur and the job he's doing, and they've come back full of admiration for the Supreme Commander.

Mildred Papper says, the stories that wounded servicemen told from their hospital beds are too horrible for belief. The distaff side of the American colony is working as long and hard as their men, and one of the most useful enterprises is "Shopping for Santa Claus," inaugurated by Mrs. Anthony Story, wife of General MacArthur's Aide-de-Camp and his personal pilot.

When the Senator goes out at the end of the lame duck Congress, he's all ready to open law offices here. "I've been practising law for everybody in Florida for a long time," says he. "Now I'm going to get paid for it." He will also maintain a law office in Tallahassee and divide his time between here and there.

THINGS I'D LIKE TO REMEMBER:

THE WEEKS of hard work and planning put in by Mme Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, with help from the ladies of the Embassy, for the French Embassy Bazaar which raised the substantial sum of almost $23,000 for the benefit of U. N. forces fighting in Korea.

MARCELLA Miller duPont's "Sonnets and Lyrics," published the end of November. "After World War I" and "After World War II," her war sonnets, are particularly appealing.

THE DELICIOUS Finnish pastries, shaped like a pinwheel and filled with tart prune whip, served hot, at the Finnish Legation, and the tall glasses of Pisco sours served at Peru's Embassy, made with lime juice and Pisco, an almost colorless spirit which sends a powerful "message."

The Service Set

Time Scarce, but Not Parties

By Elizabeth Maguire

THOSE TOO BUSY for parties are frequently the ones for whom parties are given. With mounting crises, members of the Armed Forces in and around Washington have taken on new duties, and their new duties have occasioned a fresh round of entertaining.

Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Lauris Norstad are leaving January 5 for Europe, where the general will be commander-in-chief of the United States Air Forces, and are being sped on their way by many farewells.

Most recent parties in their honor included a dinner given Friday evening by Gen. and Mrs. Nathan F. Twining, and a dinner given last evening by Col. and Mrs. Harold C. Donnelly at the Army Navy Country Club.

Gen. and Mrs. Norstad were originally headed for Paris. Now, because of the fluctuation in the international situation, they are not sure where they will be stationed when they reach Europe. "We are on our way," says Mrs. Norstad, "But we don't know where."

THE SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE and Mrs. Thomas K. Finletter were honored Wednesday evening at a dinner given by the chairman of the National Security Resources Board and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington at the 1925 F Street Club.

GOLF BALLS instead of sleigh bells hold lure for the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, and Mrs. Vandenberg, who plan to play golf "somewhere warm" over Christmas weekend. Their son, Hoyt, jr., will join them for the holiday. "Our bags are ready," says Mrs. Vandenberg, "But we won't know whether we're to go there or stay here until the last minute."

MRS. PAUL ALLING, wife of the late United States Ambassador to Pakistan, knows what to do and when, all over the world. She is now with the State Department as an advisor in the Foreign Service Institute. Air Force Officers Wives will hear an address by Mrs. Alling at their luncheon meeting at the Army Navy Country Club on December 13. "The Problems of American Women in Official Life Abroad" will be the subject of Mrs. Alling's talk.

With her husband, Mrs. Alling spent five years in Beirut. Mr. Alling was chief of the Division

The Male Order for Christmas

By Bob Burchette—The Washington Post.

A BEAGLE AND BROOKS-TYPE SHIRT FOR FOLLIARD!

"I DON'T WANT pencils, typewriter or anything to remind me of work. I really don't want anything—and why don't you tell people that men really don't want gifts," said Eddie Folliard. But wait! Ed really wants a beagle to keep his cocker spaniel company. And—"Shirts are fine if they give me some (!) of the only kind I like—the oxford button-down Brooks-type shirt." Herewith, Folliard appraising an oxford b-d, B-t shirt and old school tie in stripes of George Washington University. Both shirt and tie from Knessi and Adler

JERRY KLUTTZ WANTS A CLOSE SHAVE!

"I HAVE three electric shavers of old vintage. Right now I'd like to have one of the very newest models to see if I can get a closer shave faster." He likes the idea of the five extra minutes a day he'd save! Jerry Kluttz contemplates a handsome Schick 20 that comes in its own saddle-stitched leather case. At Lewis and Thos. Saltz In.

P. S. A record player and records would also get a warm welcome from Jerry

3 TO MAKE MERRY FOR JORDAN!

"I know exactly what I want," says Bob Jordan. "A key chain, cuff links and Argyle sox." And if he drops the prefix from his "inactive" reserve status, he says he'll "wear them in the Air Force too." Here Bob looks pleased with a gold-pleated expandable key chain from The Mode . . . unusual. theater masque cuff links from Raleigh Haberdasher, and Forstmann wool and nylon Argyle sox from the niversity Shop. We hope he wears them here!

By Bob Burchette—The Washington Post.

DE LUXE GLOVES FOR HOPKINS!

Orval Hopkins put in his order for luxurious accessories—more extravagant than he'd ordinarily buy. "Ties are o. k. too, but women tend to go off the beam on these." (A feeling shared by most men!) If anyone wants to Go All Out for Orval, he'd also like a watch. Looking much too dour with such de luxeness, Hopkins tries on supersoft imported handsewn mocha gloves from Raleigh Haberdasher

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post.

A FOOL-PROOF LIGHTER AND GADGETS FOR POVICH

"I'M A GADGETEER," says Shirley Povich, "so I'd like something gadgety—especially bar gadgets. And I'd also like the very best lighter that Dunhill puts out!" Shirley Povich beams at a glass cocktail shaker with what he calls a "dashboard top"—a top that swivels to show cocktail recipes. At Young Men's Shop. And there's an 18K gold (!) Dunhill at Lewis and Thos. Saltz. Inc. which Shirley would love if he can find somebody to subsidize it!

By Bob Burchette—The Washington Post.

TIES AND MACHINE TOOLS FOR ALFRED FRIENDLY

"I COLLECT Countess Mara ties—and I like bow ties, too," said Alfred Friendly. "Put me down for a half dozen Countess Mara ties and a dozen bow ties for Christmas." Ably modeling one of his own collection, Al here casts a frankly covetous eye on a Countess Mara tie in hand with other ties spread out before him. (The Countess Mara ties from Julius Garfinkle and Lewis and Thos. Saltz, Inc.—the bow tie from Goldheim's.) And if anybody has Large Gift ideas about Al—he's secretly craving a "Shopsmith"—a fabulous machine tool Thing from Hechinger's. Much too manly and mechanical for a fashion ed. to understand or describe

What They'd Like Most

By Evelyn Hayes

WOMEN ARE ALWAYS staggered with the problem of what to buy the men in their lives. That's because the men in anybody's life are so self-effacing in stating their gift-wants. Ask your sister what she wants for and she'll rattle on endlessly, listing more items than you can possibly remember. Ask your father or husband the same question and chances are you'll draw a blank.

Ever anxious to be helpful, we thought we'd search for some clues. And so we queried The Washington Post reporters—the men whose by-lines you know—the men whom you must feel you know because you read their stories day in, day out.

Even with such articulate men, direct answers were hard to get. Naturally, in turbulent days like these "the hope of peace" was the first wish expressed by all.

That was their BIG wish, and it took some prodding to get them to reveal "the one present you'd most like to find under the tree at Christmas." But eventually they told us. Their holly-rimmed answers are on this page. Perhaps they'll give you a hint as to what would appeal to That Man on your Christmas List.

A TYPEWRITER—THAT'S ALL—FOR EDWARD RYAN

"NO ACCESSORIES—I like to buy my own," firmly says Ed Ryan. "But I definitely do want one of those new Smith-Corona Skyriter portable typewriters — and that's all!" (That should be, Ed!) Gaze on Ed happily typing on the aforementioned typewriter — from Lansburgh's.

THEN just to prove that you can never trust a man, Ed added, "I guess I'd also like a new billfold—a nice slim one that will lie flat in a coat pocket." Oh, yes, he admitted a slight bulge of gift-currency wouldn't annoy him!

By Bob Burchette—The Washington Post.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post.

A LONG, SLIM WALLET WITH FAT BILLS, SAYS HUME

An unabashed young man when it comes to passing out hints on Christmas giving, Paul Hume leads his list with a camel hair coat (no belt in back, please) "just like one I saw at Woody's." "I also want a wallet—a long, slim one—nicer if it's filled with bills!" Paul likes this goatskin wallet that opens like a book—from Raleigh Haberdasher. (Ed. note: Our own guess is that what Paul needs most of all now is a new scrap book for press clippings!)

By Bob Burchette—The Washington Post.

PRACTICAL BUT GILT-EDGED FOR RICHARD COE

"NOW THAT I have arrived at an age where I pay the bills, I appreciate practical things. But I want those practical gifts to be extravagant—much more gilt-edged than I'd buy for myself." Wearing a sweater of finest, softest Indian cashmere—from Lewis and Thos. Saltz, Inc., Dick is more than mildly interested in a fabulous watch-in-a-key—all gold—from Julius Garfinckel. Addendum: "Oh, of course liquor is a wonderful gift. And so is a check for cash at some men's store.

By Bob Burchette—The Washington Post.

CHRISTMAS ON TIME FOR BILL GOLD!

"I'VE HAD the same watch for 15 years. It's been magnetized and demagnetized. It either runs 5 minutes too fast or 10 minutes too slow—and there seems no regulation in between. I've been promising myself one for a long time, so I guess I'd like a new watch." Look at Bill Gold's delighted smile as he tries on a good-looking gold watch that seems to do everything but call you for breakfast. The alligator watchband is strictly a luxury touch. Check Small Fry at the 'Y'

JUST ASK ANY woman who's been Christmas shopping while towing her youngsters along—she'll tell you it isn't easy!

But if you ask Mrs. John B. Armstrong, you'll receive a practical solution. She doesn't take her twins along with her. She leaves them at the Young Women's Christian Association nursery and shops with a clear conscience.

Deciding on a gift for Auntie is a simple process when your mind is at ease, Mrs. Armstrong will tell you. "And the twins love it," she says as she thinks about their hours at the nursery painting, singing and playing outside under the "Y's" supervised nursery program. Crackers and milk are served as a mid-morning snack, too!

THE YWCA is a long-time friend of Mrs. Armstrong's. It was when her son was starting to school and the twins were mere babies that she read a newspaper account of some YWCA adult education classes. She vowed then that as soon as the twins were a little older, she was going to enroll.

She didn't have to wait very long with the Y's nursery in operation. She chose "Ladies Day Out," a class where she took swimming, badminton as well as slimnastics.

But Mrs. Armstrong was not limited to "Ladies Day Out." The Y was offering 65 classes of which she could take as many as she pleased.

SOME DAY when the twins are in school she wants to take art instruction and her eye is already on Laura Glenn Douglas' class. In this, she will be able to take water color, pastel, gauche and charcoal. She couldn't find a better instructor than Mrs. Douglas, either. Mrs. Douglas studied 10 years in Paris, Rome, Florence and Munich and she is the winner of the International Water Color award in 1943. In Washington, Phillips Art Gallery has bought 10 of her pictures for its permanent collection.

Another class Mrs. Armstrong wants to take is Fred L. Karpin's bridge session. Mr. Karpin is the author of "The Point Count System of Bidding in Contract Bridge" and is the associate editor of "The Bridge World," Ely Culbertson's magazine.

What woman today isn't interested in finding ways to stretch the family dollar? The Y has classes in sewing, millinery, making slip covers and draperies and even making lampshades. Classes in crafts and ceramics will help settle the ever-present gift problem, whether it's a Christmas gift or a birthday remembrance.

ONE OF THE most popular courses at the YWCA is the personal improvement class which is in reality a small-scale fashion modeling course. It offers tips on better grooming and economical clothes selection, how to sit, walk and meet social situations.

Mrs. Armstrong has another bright point in her future. The YWCA classes are beginning a new session in January. After Christmas the Y is planning to offer a varied program for mothers whose children are participating in the nursery.

Will it be French cookery, typing or photography she'll take then? She doesn't know, but Mrs. Armstrong can certainly have her pick among the Y adult education classes!

Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

DAY AT THE NURSERY—It might be hard to say goodby to Mommy right now but glum faces won't last when there are hours and hours of playing with other children ahead. Jane holds on to her mother, Mrs. John B. Armstrong, for a moment longer, while her twin, Judy, seems fascinated with what's ahead at the YWCA nursery. Mrs. Armstrong's twins are in the nursery while she takes the "Ladies' Day Out" program at the YWCA, and another day during the week while she does some Christmas shopping

Mary Haworth's Mail

Divorcee, 30, Is Eager to Marry Man, 24, Who Looks Even Younger, to Her Embarrassment; Once on Verge Of Elopement, Now They Quarrel and She Feels Stymied

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a divorcee, 30, now dating a fellow who is 24; and unfortunately he looks as if he might still be in his teens. I don't know whether I imagine it or not, but when we run into friends of mine who haven't met him before, I usually think they are laughing at me for robbing the cradle. Do you think this would continue if we were married?

I have known Steve for five months and we have been going steady for all but two weeks of this time. I think the world of him and his age doesn't bother me as much now as it did at first. We were going to run away and get married a short time ago. Then circumstances changed our minds; and lately we seem to be arguing quite a bit, something we never did before.

I have a good job with a large corporation and Steve also has a good job and could afford to marry, but now he is talking of getting into the Air Cadets in January, so that he will have an income in the future. He is in the National Guard now, and I tell him I think it is a good thing for him to enlist in the Air Force and get thorough training before he goes overseas — because he probably will be called eventually.

However, I feel I'm not getting any younger and I would like to marry and settle down, and I believe Steve would, too; but money and position mean an awful lot to him, because he wants comforts he's never had. And if he joins the Air Cadets, it means we'll have to postpone marriage for another nine months; and I am wondering if it is advisable to go steady with him in the meantime? I have many opportunities to go out with other men, but I don't accept because I have no desire for any company but Steve's.

Steve refuses to talk about anything concerning ourselves until after January; and do you think I should wait until then to decide what to do? Or should I stop going steady now? Why is it that Steve won't discuss the situation with me, as any two people should? F. R.

DEAR F. R.: Your friend Steve's embarrassingly adolescent looks probably reflect the inner man; he probably is an exceedingly immature personality. Perhaps you've never noticed, but the average person's characteristic ways of thinking and feeling are pretty clearly proclaimed in his appearance; and have most to do with the "first impressions" he makes on discerning minds. In Emerson's phrase,—"What you are speaks so loudly that I cannot hear what you say."

As to why Steve declines to discuss anything whatsoever, pro or con, about yourselves prior to January, I take it to mean that he thinks he is on his way out of the relationship, but hesitates to burn any bridges until he is sure. It is my guess that his ambitious day dreams about the Air Cadets include a theory that if he gets in, it will mark the beginning of a brand new life, and that he then can make a clean sweep of the past, including you, without feeling any pain.

He probably figures it's best to be in the clear, geographically, a safe distance away where you can't get at him with reproach or cajolery, if and when he says the word that dashes your hopes of catching him. I think your quarrels of recent weeks are caused by his stiffening resistance to your aggressive attempts to marry him. Your nerves are tense with anxious frustration, and his are frazzled by defense maneuvers at close range, and thus the sweetness of first affection is soured by growing mutual impatience.

If you have many opportunities for going out with other men, my advice is to act on them. In sticking exclusively to Steve, who won't commit himself, you are trying to involve him indirectly in a sense of obligation to repay your "sacrificial" fidelity by being equally "faithful" to you. And I predict that this will prove to be a self-defeating operation if you continue it.

In my judgment, your designs on Steve will come to naught, in any case, chiefly because you aren't his idea of a wife, and neither is he the sort who could make your life complete. Yet if you had a chance of marrying him, that chance would consist in your tooling along, while dating him, with a pleasant social life that includes other beaus. If he were seeing you in that kind of setting, a rosy arrangement that looked as if it could get along nicely without him, and that kept him wondering if he'd be missed in absentia, then the balance of power might be on your side. But your current tactics are fanning his interest away from, rather than towards the goal you've had in mind. M. H.

Introducing Hilda Porter

The Verdict: She's a Jolly Good Fellow

By Evon N. Clark

ATHENS, GREECE. — If you want a course in Charm in one pleasant lesson, then meet Hilda Porter. She has just left Greece to join her husband, Paul R. Porter, newly appointed assistant administrator for the Economic Cooperation Administration in charge of programming (and no relation to former OPA Administrator Paul A. Porter, now a Washington attorney.)

HILDA PORTER

Hilda Porter has been the wife of this brilliant young economist through 10 years of important government posts. Their first son Daniel was born in America when his father was chairman of the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee of WPB. Their daughter Kathleen was born in England when Daddy was chief of the London Mission for Economic Affairs. John Samuel was born in Athens while Paul Porter was chief of the ECA Mission here.

THROUGH EACH of these changes in her husband's career Hilda Porter has acquired staunch friends shortly after arrival at each post. Yet hers is not the schooled charm of a woman born to be a diplomat's wife. She was Paul Porter's private secretary when she married him in 1940.

Nor is hers the allure of a woman striving after glamour. Although her complexion is camelia-like in its healthy beauty, her brown hair, cut neither glamorously long nor stylishly short, gives the impression that she doesn't take much time about it. Her figure is not perfect, either.

Perhaps it's her exceptionally intelligent brown eyes, which really look at the person to whom she is talking, that so fascinate everyone.

OR, YOU CAN take the opinion of an office boy in the ECA Mission here, "She's so natural and regular."

In comments ranging from the office boy to the King of Greece, you get the same impression—unhurried interest in everyone she meets, a quietly tolerant wit, an invariable thoughtfulness towards others.

The job of an ECA Mission chief's wife entails much social life, both official and unofficial. But social life wasn't even half of Hilda Porter's life here.

When Secretary of Defense Marshall was Secretary of State, he visited Greece and suggested that a powerful organization of American women might be formed here. The result was The American Women's Organization of Greece, now affiliated with the General Federation. While Hilda Porter was in Greece she never missed but one AWOG meeting, nor did she miss a meeting of its board on which she served in an advisory capacity.

SHE ALSO HELPED in the distribution of over a million and a half articles of clothing for Greek refugees which she and other AWOG members obtained from friends in the United States. She went with other members of the organization to slums in Athens and to the Pireus. She sewed for babies in the Athens Foundling Home. She was a frequent visitor to AWOG-sponsored children's hospitals.

"Hilda was always an inspiration to us," says Mrs. James Pope, AWOG's president.

In addition to being an inpiration to AWOG Hilda's private charities in Greece were many, although few persons knew of them.

Hilda always managed at least several hours each day with her own children. She helped organize a group of parents in the suburb of Athens where the Porters lived, and took her turn each week minding neighbors' children along with her own.

BOTH PORTER PARENTS make use of every minute, and neither ever seems harried or harassed. Often Hilda got away early from committee meetings and swanky teas, donned an apron, gave the cook time off, with Danny and Kathleen helping.

But the principal reason Americans in Greece admired her is that she never threw her weight around. In her position she could easily have had someone else do her shopping at the Army Commissary—often a tedious chore. But twice a week, Hilda took her turn with the rest of the Mission wives in Commisary and in PX lines.

"GOOD HEAVENS, why in the world shouldn't I?" she would say. "Believe me, I'll have to do my own shopping when I get back to Washington. Besides, I actually like to come to the PX because it gives me a chance to see everybody—and you know how I love to talk!"

The tide of admiration for the Porters grew to a new high when news of their leaving Greece was made public. All the embassies, the King and the Queen, the Prime Minister of Greece and other dignitaries all wished to say their farewell with luncheons, teas, dinners.

"We certainly are eating our way out of Greece," Hilda said.

The ECA personnel decided to hold one mass affair, the evening before the Porters' departure. Almost every American member of ECA was present.

"I feel so sad at leaving all these wonderful people," Hilda said. "I do hope I won't make a fool of myself crying all over the place."

But her tears turned to a laugh a few minutes later. When Paul Porter finished his "thank you" speech, the crowd began singing: "For SHE'S a jolly good fellow."

Mrs. Porter will reach Washington in January, stopping en route to visit members of her family in Wisconsin.

Everybody Likes Good Beef; The Problem for Cooks Is How to Pick It Out

CHOOSING A GOOD, tender piece of beef at the meat counter is a job which challenges the wits of even the best cooks. A big help with the job is meat grading, about which W. A. M. writes:

DEAR ANNE:

Will you please explain something of the grading of beef? I read of "U. S. Good," "U. S. Grade A," and then some meat is marked "Cut-Rite." What is the best grade we can get in usual markets? W. A. M., Arlington.

Some meat packers have their own grading systems, while others use the system set up by the United States Department of Agriculture. The designation of the individual grading systems are so numerous that it would be difficult to go into them in the space available here. The Government system is fairly widely used, however, so a review of its beef grade may be helpful to you. These have just been revised, with the new terms to go into use after December 29. You'll find them stamped in purple ink on all Federally graded beef. They are descriptive terms rather than letters and are as follows:

PRIME: The top grade, it is excellent quality beef with a wide selection of cuts for broiling or roasting. It is available in very limited quantity in retail stores, since hotels and restaurants take about all the available supplies.

CHOICE: High quality beef, this is usually leaner than the Prime with juicy tender cuts of fine flavor. Many cuts may be broiled or roasted. (This is the beef that at the present time is labeled "good," and constitutes the majority of the beef found in retail stores.)

GOOD: Under the new system, this grade will cover beef from higher quality young animals. Such beef will be relatively tender with a high ratio of lean to fat, providing consumers with economical meat dishes.

COMMERCIAL: This grade comes, for the most part, from more mature animals. It has a more pronounced beef flavor than the "Good" cuts, but requires slow, moist cooking because it has less natural tenderness. It can provide many nutritious, low-cost meat dishes.

These are the four types of Federally graded beef generally found in retail stores. Grades are stamped in harmless purple ink on the fatty part of the meat. The grading itself is done by Government experts, who take into consideration the marbling (intermingling of fat with lean), as well as the texture, grain, and color of the lean meat. The quantity of fat and the proportion of edible meat to the bone also count in grading.

DEAR ANNE:

I have some Scotch wool material of the MacDonald clan and wonder if you could give me the name of someone who might make several neckties for me.

Mrs. George K. Harris,
447 Valley ave. se.

If you will telephone Sterling 8618, you will reach a shop which maintains a list of women who do various handwork at home. They have at least two on the list who make neckties.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to remove what appears to be a large rust stain on a tile bathroom floor? I have tried bleach, cleansing powder and ammonia, all to no avail.

Mrs. Lois Schrimsher, Arlington, Va.

One of the rust-removing preparations sold in housewares departments or stores may turn the trick. Another possibility is kerosene. Cover spots for a couple of hours, then wash with soap and piping-hot water.

Constructive Aid Pledge of Soroptomists

CONSTRUCTIVE SERVICE will keynote the work of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs during the next two years, according to an announcement by Miss L. Grace Nicholls, Toronto, Canada, president of the American Federation, following the meeting of the executive board of directors at Philadelphia, headquarters of the organization.

To start this program, the board authorized three International Fellowships of $3000 each. Complying with the terms of a resolution to give active support to UNESCO, passed at the last convention, two of these will be awarded through that organization. These will be, possibly, in the fields of research into the economy of undeveloped countries and anthropology. The third fellowship will be awarded to an applicant from a generalized list for advance study in Political Science.

These fellowships will be outright gifts; their purposes to promote the advancement of qualified women in legislation, statesmanship and in unusual fields of endeavor. In addition to the fellowships, $1000 was set aside as a special gift from the American Federation to UNESCO. Dr. B. H. Wind of Holland, Soroptimist International delegate to UNESCO will select the project.

Following through on another convention resolution, the support of savings bond drives of the respective governments of American Federation members, $4000 each was alloted to be invested in United States and Canadian savings bonds.

Put Science to Work And You Can Reduce Without Losing Energy

By Ida Jean Kain

THE MIRACLE of modern nutrition can give you a seven-league-boot pace in the pursuit of slimness. Just put science to work and you can reduce at a brisk clip, 2 to 3 pounds a week, and have more energy, not less.

Eager to try it? Begin by concentrating on building slimness, rather than losing. To build slimness, go by this blueprint: Plan the menus around the foods that furnish protective nutrients, and cut calories through foods that do not offer protection. In a low calorie diet, every food included must be there for an exact purpose: to repair tissue, to regulate body processes for smooth running, to burn the fat clean and to stimulate the rate at which pounds are turned back into energy.

Slimness is built when protein foods are included in optimum amounts . . . not only enough to take care of wear and tear, but to stimulate the burning of fuel. Excess body fat will be lost faster on a 1000 calorie diet that is high in protein, than on exactly the same number of calories but with less protein.

And that's not all. The latest research in protein stresses the importance of having a complete protein food with each meal, beginning with breakfast. Make sure to have an egg or lean meat or milk at breakfast. An egg and a thin slice of toast make for faster slimming and more energy than a breakfast that includes two slices of toast and no egg or other protein.

HERE'S ANOTHER BIT of scientific magic: When a small amount of carbohydrate (sugar and starch) is included in a low calorie menu, the tissue burned is largely fatty tissue—protein tissue is spared and the condition known as acidosis is avoided. In other words, some carbohydrate is needed for the clean burning of stored fat. For this reason a scientifically planned reducing diet includes a small amount of bread and potato and skim milk and buttermilk, and a liberal amount of vegetables and fruits. The milk, fruits and vegetables also furnish the necessary minerals and vitamins which play an important part in tissue building and help to keep all parts of the body working together. That adds up to smooth running.

And where are calories cut? Through the fats and other high fuel foods. It is not only safe, but necessary to have a low fat content in order to force the body to draw on stored fat for part of its energy needs. Since Vitamin A is decreased by the necessary restriction on dairy fats—cream, butter and whole milk—it is wise to reinforce the 1000 caloire diet with a multiple vitamin concentrate daily. Ask your doctor or the druggist for a concentrate furnishing normal amounts only of Vitamin A, B-1, B-2, C and D.

These seven basic foods make up the Seven-League-Boot Diet and build slimness . . .

DAILY PATTERN

Eggs: 1—not fried

Lean meat, fish or fowl: 5 to 6 oz., not fried

Milk: 2 glasses of skim milk or buttermilk or 1 glass and 1 oz. of yellow cheese

Vegetables: 2 cooked—1 may be potato plus a raw vegetable salad, including dark green leafy vegetable

Fruits: 1—1 orange or grapefruit, or tomato

Butter or margarine: limited to 3 half-pats a day

Bread: 3 thin slices, or 2 average slices

Plus 1 multiple vitamin concentrate furnishing Vitamins A, B-1, B-2, C & D.

If you'd like help on your menus, send for the "Scientific Wonder Diet." Please address request to Ida Jean Kain, care of The Washington Post, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

No Soap, It Works

Splash Suds on Christmas Tree

By Dorothea Cruger

AS THICK as snowflakes in a blizzard are Christmas decorating ideas this time of year. The best of them make use of material available around the house or nearby—tinfoil, crepe paper, gummed labels, boughs of pine and fir, and of course yards of scotch tape. The Christmas card itself becomes more this year than something to admire, then tuck away and forget. It can be used to cheer up a bare wall or dress up a meager tree. And the lowly soapsud emerges from the dishpan into the living room to lend a wintry look to the green of wreath and tree.

Use Christmas cards to frame a mirror, to deck a tree, or display them on one of the special card holders being sold in local stores. One type is made to stand on table or mantel, another to hang on the wall. $3 at Little Caledonia, Garfinckel's. Or make your own card holder by taking a few small tree branches, painting them with aluminum paint, and sticking in a flower pot covered with aluminum foil. Scotch tape holds thhe cards firm.

IF YOU REALLY feel venturesome, you can set out with paint and brush to transform your home for the holidays a la Peter Hunt. This artist advises cutting angel and Santa Claus figures out of plywood, and painting them in vivid brushstrokes and colors. Paint an old orange crate to look like a holiday package, with ribbon and labels and fill with gifts for a child. Take dime store tins and decorate with snowflake design to serve as tableware for a child's party.

Your front door is a good place to start this type of decorating. Cut plywood panels, and paint with any motif you choose, Santa, reindeer or holly wreath. You could splash a greeting across the front, then surround the whole with pine or evergreen boughs.

A CHRISTMAS CARD TREE

Fasten the panels with brads so they can be easily removed when it's all over. Basic Peter Hunt techniques are explained in the "Transformagic" book at stores selling DuPont paints.

And, to give your interior a winter wonderland touch, here's a recipe for snow without frostbite. Mix two cups of luke warm water with a large size package of soap flakes and whip with egg beater or electric mixer to a frothy consistency. Apply to tree branches with your fingers. Incidentally, for a surrealistic effect, you can tint the "snow" by adding color dye while whipping.

This is two thirds of Architect Robert A. Willgoos' new, tri-winged "Crooked Z" home off the Potomac River south of Alexandria. Willgoos, at left, says there's "nothing more beautiful than nature—if you have the view"

Contemporary in style and comfortable is the living room, a portion of which is shown here. The wall-to-ceiling windows—in all, 32 feet long—slide up into the roof, opening the room to a large screened porch and the outdoors. That's Mrs. Willgoos in front of the Roman brick fireplace

32-Foot Wall of Glass Slides into the Roof

Architect 'Builds-In' the Outdoors

By Robert P. Jordan

ROBERT A. WILLGOOS, a well-known Alexandria architect, says you can't beat the contemporary-style, one-story house for downright livability . . .

If you've got plenty of ground to wrap around it.

It's as simple as that. If you want a spread-out, low-level house, he says, it's best to build it on a big lot. Not just because it rambles but because, as well, you're going to want a pleasant view from its large picture windows. What good is a lot of glass if it overlooks the neighbor's washing?

With this in mind, and the conviction that the outdoors ought to be an important part of the indoors, Willgoos set about drawing up plans and specifications in mid-1949 for himself, his wife and their two children.

The home he designed is now a reality and the Willgoos family is getting settled in it. The house, about 4 miles south of Alexandria, is what he terms a "true California rambler." It's a long, slung, modern-style home with so much window area in it that, using a little imagination, you might think you were camping out.

Ever wonder what an architect puts into a home he designs for himself? Depends on the architect, of course, but in this instance the result suits the Willgoos family to a "crooked Z" and it's impossible to look around in it without spotting something unusual.

The south living room wall, for example, is 32 feet long. Big living room, you'll admit. It's glass from floor to ceiling, and that makes it a whopper of a picture window, you'll agree. But what lifts it 'way out of the ordinary is that its panes, one by one, can be pushed up into the roof to a height of 6½ feet.

All you have to do then is stroll onto the ground level screened porch, which parellels the living room and with windows up doubles its size, and you're as close to being outdoors as you can come without actually being there.

Indoor-outdoor living is what architects who specialize in contemporary design, such as Willgoos, strive for. It won't be a surprise to learn then, that the Willgoos place is a solar house. On the shortest day of the year the sun's rays slant in all the way across the living room, and on the longest day of the year they stop at the outer edge of the porch.

The living room is a virtual "sun trap" in the winter—which cuts down on heating costs. In summer, when the sun's rays are at their meanest, they stop at the edge of the house.

It's worked out by complicated charts which, figured all the way out, can show the angle of the sun on any given day. After that, it's simply a matter of putting the house where the sun can see into it and pitching the roof properly.

Heating. Willgoos built his house on a concrete slab. Thermostatically controlled heat radiates from the slab. But, since the house really rambles, one wing might get colder than another.

Should this happen, the architect has placed individual heat controls for various areas of the house in the boiler room. He turns a control and more hot water is introduced into the boiler, sending additional heat to the desired area. If part of the house is too hot, he reverses the procedure—sending cold water into the boiler.

The layout of the house is interesting. Its northern wing starts with a double garage. South of this is a large game room. Then comes the L-shaped kitchen and laundry area. Here, too, is the boiler room. This wing runs due north.

THE COMBINATION living room-dining area extends east-west. The dining area, just off the kitchen, features a pass-through bar. The east end of the room is dominated by a large fireplace. A built-in bookshelf runs the length of the room on the north, with windows above it; the huge window wall is on the south.

The bedroom wing, which is 2 feet lower than the rest of the house, runs off the living room in

Apartment and Home Construction Hits the Skids

CONSTRUCTION of apartments in Greater Washington is rapidly passing out of the picture and home building is on the decline.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics yesterday came up with its area building report for October and noted that only 250 apartment units were started during the month—less than one tenth the number put under construction here in October, 1949.

A total of 1220 single-family houses were begun in October, BLS said. This was a decline of more than 50 percent from the 2500-unit peak last June. Even so, in each month of 1950, including October, the number of houses started has been higher than for any corresponding month on record.

Single-family housing starts have been dropping at the rate of about 400 units a month since July, BLS reported. The 1947 houses and apartments begun in October was less than one-third the number put under construction in October, 1949, and less than half of last June's peak 3090 units.

"Some of the slackening since June probably has resulted from the July curbs on housing credit," a bureau spokesman said. "The full impact of the October 12 curb on single-family starts, however, may not be felt for several months," he added.

THE REASON for this is the "large backlog of commitments made and applications filed prior to the effective date" of the October curbs.

During the first 6 months of this year, 10,450 new single-family residences were put under construction. From July through October, even with curbs on residential construction, another 7210 units were started. One-family housing starts for the first 10 months of 1950 totaled 17,660, compared with only 8050 for the same months last year.

Rental-type construction from January through October was only about a fourth of last year's unit volume for the same months.

Because of the decline in apartment construction this year, the total number of all types of dwelling units started locally in Greater Washington in the first 10 months of 1950—22,470—trailed

Inflation's Halted, Observer Says

'51 Building Costs Will Drop

By T. E. Applegate

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP).—Highly dangerous inflation in the housing industry has been halted and soon after January 1 building costs will be down some seven percent from September-October levels, a New York building financier said today.

George W. Warnecke in an interview credited Regulation 'X', the Federal curb on easy mortgage credit, with reversing the dizzy upward trend that set in after the Korean war started.

Nowhere was the regulation's effect more spectacular than in the cost of building sites, he said.

"The bubble has burst in the land buying boom. The mad scramble for available building plots, which was gathering momentum as it went along, was causing prices of vacant land to skyrocket.

"However, with the advent of Regulation 'X' many builders withdrew the options they held on large tracts of acreage. The result, of course, was a sharp decrease in land prices and a closer return to actual worth."

HE ESTIMATED the price of land for a single family dwelling averages about 10 percent of the total building cost.

Warnecke, who heads the mortgage financing company bearing his name, cited two other factors

It Pays Off

Put It On The Line, Says HHFA

IT'S LIKE money in the bank for the home buyer to make the largest practicable down payment, according to the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

For example, says HHFA, a veteran who pays $2500 down on a $10,000 home with a 25-year mortgage will pay $3168 less in interest charges than the veteran who pays only $500 down. The monthly payments on the loans would be $39.60 and $50.16, respectively.

Likewise, a veteran who pays $2500 on a $10,000 home and pays off his mortgage in 15 rather than 25 years will pay $5058 less in interest on his loan. The monthly payment would be $55.50.

a southeasterly direction. At its northern end, off the living room, is a den. Then comes 8-year-old Sandy's bedroom, a bathroom, 3-year-old Bonnie's room, and the master bedroom. The latter contains a dressing room and bath.

Willgoos, most of whose work is commercial, industrial and institutional designing, laid out the house with the idea of "taking advantage of Nature." He built it on a two-acre plot situated on East Boulevard dr. and midway between the Potomac River and Mount Vernon blvd.

"There's nothing more beautiful," he says, "than nature itself—if you have a view. So if you have a view, take advantage of it." This philosophy calls for extensive use of glass, a prime feature of contemporary design, and Willgoos has followed through on it.

At the same time, however, he has situated the glass areas so that there is no invasion of privacy. This, he points out, is relatively easy to do on two acres—and well nigh impossible on small lots.

The house is built of Roman brick. The architect had the bricks laid inside out, so to speak, which resulted in their rough edges being on the house's exterior. He plans to paint the outside white—thus giving the brick exterior the appearance of stone.

For storage space, he specified plenty of closets throughout the house, and then saw to it that the attic, from one end to the other, is big enough to walk in. Makes for a large amount of storage area.

Heavy Construction Awards Reach All-Time Record

NEW YORK—An all-time high of $484,875,000 was reached in heavy construction contract awards reported in the week ended Monday, according to Engineering News-Record.

The record was accounted for largely by the 260-million-dollar start on the hydrogen bomb fuel plant at Aiken, S. C.

The engineering construction weekly said the total eclipsed the previous record of 435 million dollars set during the week of May 7, 1942, some of which later was canceled by the War Production Board.

It also set still another record of $11,411,863,000 for the cumulative total of the 49 weeks of the year to date. The 1950 figure some weeks ago surpassed the highest previous total on record for a full year. In the first 49 weeks of 1949, the cumulative total was $7,815,604,000.

The H-bomb plant eclipsed all other contracts, but there were several other awards that would be regarded as very large by ordinary standards.

They included 33 million dollars in paving awards for the New Jersey turnpike, 14 million dollars for the New York City tuberculosis hospital, 12 million dollars for an electric generating plant at Waukegan, Ill., and 20 million dollars for open hearths, soaking pits and four new furnaces for Inland Steel at East Chicago, Ill.

Look Around You When It's Painting Time

When selecting paint for your house, its size, its style of architecture, the general surroundings and landscaping—as well as the colors of adjacent houses—should always be considered. Strong, bright colors give prominence to the building, accentuating the small house. Neutral shades are better suited to larger homes.

Mortgage Man Forecasts Lower Building Costs

as supporting his prediction of lower costs. They are:

1. Lower cost of lumber. "With the market suddenly shrunk to less than two thirds its former size, every last drop of excess profit will be squeezed out of the selling price in order to keep inventories from piling up." He added that with no extensive military camp building program in the offing, armed services requirements may not be more than one eighth of total lumber output for the coming year.

2. Stabilized cost of labor. Lower volume of building may bring about a potential surplus of skilled building mechanics, and while many will be absorbed by defense manpower needs, "enough of them will probably want to stay in the building trades to relieve the pressure for increasingly higher wages."

Warnecke said he believed these factors will outweigh probable higher costs for such items as plumbing and heating equipment, hardware and other articles made of metals in tight supply.

He does not go along with those who foresee depression-size cutbacks in housing as the result of restrictive regulations.

Noting that Regulation "X" was aimed at limiting housing starts to 800,000 to 850,000 units in the coming year, he indicated he expected that total to be achieved.

Along with shrinkage of housing starts may be some shrinkgae in housing demand, he said. This would result from a decrease in the number of family formations because of deferred marriages of men called into military service, and a tendency for wives of servicemen to return to live with their parents.

The price spiral that set in immediately after start of the Korean war, Warnecke said, "was bound to lead to a total collapse of the building program unless checked in time."

He said he believed the Federal credit curb would result in a healthier condition in the mortgage market and help return the building industry to a sounder footing.

Italian African Projects Completed

TRIPOLI, Tripolitania (AP).—A forest belt of five million trees—begun during Italian occupation of Libya—has been completed around Tripoli under British administration. The belt is intended to protect Tripoli from hot summer winds and the full effect of the Ghibli sand storms which last for days at a time. Trees also are used throughout the territory to control drifting sand dunes.

Farm Sales Drop Sharply

More United States farms changed hands from 1940 to 1950 than in any other 10-year period in history, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. But the number of sales has declined sharply since 1946. Most sales were voluntary. There were few foreclosures and tax sales.

First FHA-Sponsored Development Over D. C. Line

Low-Rent Project for Negroes Opens

THE FIRST garden-type apartment project for Negroes built outside the District and financed with FHA loan insurance will be ready for partial occupancy within a few days.

Officials of the development—Addison Chapel Apartments—hope it will serve as a model for similar projects. They say that the basic design of the apartments, plus other cost-saving steps, has enabled them to pass the savings on in the form of lower rentals.

The 318-unit project is located near 52d ave. and Addison Chapel rd., Prince Georges County. One-bedroom apartments will rent for $60.25 monthly, two-bedroom units for $73. All utilities are included.

First 65 units will be ready for occupancy about mid-month. The entire development is expected to be completed within four months. It is being constructed by Banks & Lee, Inc. Architects are Ross & Walton.

Savings were effected, according to sponsors of the project, in several ways. One was in constructing the structures of brick and frame, instead of using brick throughout. Another was in locating them on their sites in the most economical way possible.

This is a section of the 318-unit Addison Chapel Apartments—a low-rental project for Negroes under construction at 52nd ave. and Addison Chapel rd., Prince Georges County.

The development is the first to be built outside the District under FHA's minority housing program. Tenants will begin moving in within a few days

Permit Asked For Start of Bethesda Project

Permit application has been made for construction of 18 houses in the 7700 block of Westfield dr., Bethesda, by L. E. Breuninger & Sons, Inc., 1730 K st., nw.

The dwellings are the first section of a 92-unit subdivision—the remainder to be built in similar groups later.

Plans call for the houses to be two stories in height, and of brick, frame and cinderblock construction. They will be about 40 by 33 feet in size.

Area Building Pace Slackens

behind last year's January-October 29,040-unit total by 23 percent.

Analysis of building permits issued during the first 10 months of 1950 shows that single-family housing predominated throughout the area except in the District of Columbia, BLS reported. Montgomery, Prince Georges, and Fairfax Counties led in the number of new one-family houses for which permits were issued, while the District accounted for more than half the rental-type housing.

Construction cost of one-family houses started, as reported by private builders, averaged $11,100 for the first 10 months of 1950, compared with $9700 for the same last year.

These averages are for all new houses started, and do not reflect the construction cost of a typical house. Average construction cost is affected not only by changes in the cost of materials and labor, but also by variations in the size and design of the houses and the type of projects started.

Construction Awards in Nov. Hit Record High

NEW YORK.—Heavy construction contract awards reported in November reached an all-time high for that month of $1,012,046,000, according to Engineering News-Record.

The engineering construction publication said the November volume brought the 11-month total to $10,926,988,000—the highest ever reported by News-Record and 47 percent ahead of the 11-month total for last year.

The industry weekly said those figures represented gain in dollar volume. Physical construction, measured by the Engineering News-Record index is up 2 percent above the 1949 level.

Largest construction gains for the year to date have been in private, unclassified construction, principally pipelines, amounting to 89 percent.

The Eskimo Is Forsaking The Igloo

IF YOU tried to sell an icebox to an Eskimo these days, chances are he might take you up on it.

For the first time, many Eskimo families in isolated and primitive sections of Alaska now are living in warm and sanitary homes. The houses have been made possible under the remote dwelling program conducted by the Alaska Housing Authority.

Under this program, an Eskimo can obtain a loan up to $500 for construction or improvement of his home. Out of the proceeds of the loan, the housing authority supplies the materials required.

The borrower may receive material enough to construct a 14 by 17-foot dwelling, using 2x4-inch lumber for rafters and joists and 1x6-inch tongue-and-grooved lumber for floors, siding and sheathing.

Aluminum corrugated roofing is placed over the ceiling sheathing. Asphalt-treated insulation one-inch thick is used under the flooring and on the inside of walls and ceiling. Each dwelling has two windows, 36x30 inches in size.

This type of construction provides a dry home that is easier to keep warm and sanitary than the originnal dwelling which usually had only a dirt floor.

The Housing and Home Finance Agency is sponsoring improved housing for Eskimos under special provisions of the Alaska Housing Act.

Old Construction Bugaboo Licked By New Method

Many home owners and commercial building contractors across the country are using a new way to beat the old bugaboo of high costs, one authority reports.

According to the Metal Lath Manufacturers Association, Cleveland, Ohio, the recently developed 2-inch studless partition system for non-bearing wall construction provides the latest answer to this perennial problem.

Using a dollar-and-cents basis as one yard-stick, the association says that if 2-inch partitions are used in place of 5-inch partitions in a building whose construction cost is $1.00 per cubic foot for example, $2.25 is saved for each lineal foot of partition.

Baltimore's Famed Sunpapers To Roll From New Building

The Baltimore Sunpapers will move into this eight-million-dollar building this month. Constructed for the Sun, Evening Sun and Sunday Sun, the five-story structure follows a bold modernistic style

BALTIMORE.—The Baltimore Sunpapers, ranked with the country's greatest newspapers, move into their brand new home late this month.

The new building, costing about eight million dollars, was constructed for the Sun, Evening Sun and Sunday Sun on the site of the Pennsylvania Railroad's old Colvert Street Station.

Five stories high, it follows a bold modernistic style that features a glass front display of an impressive array of 24 units of presses.

The new building was constructed on a five-acre tract. It has a frontage of 250 feet and a depth of 158 feet. The pressroom—one of the most modern in the country—contains 24 units of new presses.

There is room for storage of 3000 tons of newsprint, which will be delivered on a six-car railway siding at the rear.

Use Ashes or Salt On Slippery Walks

It's no fun to slip and fall on an icy sidewalk. The thoughtful home owner protects his family, neighbors and passersby from falls by spreading a thin coat of ashes or coarse salt on icy paths.

An easy way to be prepared for winter's whims is to keep a pail filled with fine ashes in the basement or utility room. The bail handle is convenient for carrying the pail and a large scoop, such as is used for flour, is handy for spreading the ashes.

Need for Rent Controls Over, Chamber Says

THE UNITED STATES Chamber of Commerce urged last week that Congress allow States and communities to decide on continuance of rent controls, rather than make a blanket extension of the present Federal law.

In a statement issued following the House banking and currency committee's approval of extension to March 31, the Chamber pointed out that existing law provides that any community in which rent control is now in effect can maintain it until next June 30 if it takes such action prior to December 31.

"Any housing shortages that may remain are local and few in number," said the Chamber. "It is not necessary to maintain a ponderous Federal rent control system to deal with a handful of local situations. Therefore the need for Federal rent control has long since passed.

"The future is highly uncertain, and further international development might intensify the impact of the rearmament program. Should this contingency develop, the entire question of wage and price controls would necessarily be considered. Rent control, which is one form of price control, should then be reconsidered within this larger frame of reference."

Says Pilgrims Are Ill Housed

SINGAPORE (AP).—Moslem pilgrims to Mecca have to put up with dark, stuffy rooms, totally inadequate sanitary arrangements, lack of ambulances and doctors, a Malayan Federal Councilor charged on his return from Mecca.

Said Tuan Sheik Ahamad: "As every pilgrim paid $56 to the Saudi Arabian Government, it should be the duty of that government to provide sanitary comforts." He added this was a matter for the respective Moslem governments to appeal to the Saudi Arabia Government.

Aluminum Walls for Skyscraper

NEW YORK (AP)—Cast aluminum panels are taking the place of brick facing in inclosing New York's newest skyscraper, a 24-story structure at 655 Madison ave. Reflective insulation in connection with the air-conditioning of the building is one of the purposes. Modern appearance is another. Louis Katz, the builder, says 60 tons of aluminum, acquired before the freeze, are being used.

Christmas Party Planning Tops Realty Activities

Annual Christmas Party of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington will be held at noon next Saturday at the Statler Hotel. Attendance is expected to top 450 persons.

Net proceeds of ticket sales will be divided between the Boys Club of Washington and the Police Boys Club. The money will be used to buy athletic equipment.

According to James W. Pearson, executive director of the home builders' organization, an old-fashioned Christmas dinner will be served. Entertainment will be under the direction of Eddie Carr and Lloyd Coates.

That's one Christmas party—one of many being lined up by building and real estate groups. Plans for the Montgomery County Real Estate Board's Christmas festivities are under way, it was announced yesterday.

The board's second annual Christmas party will be held at 12:30 p. m. December 22 at the Stone House Inn, Four Corners, Silver Spring. The program committee consists of George W. Members will be admitted to the party by bringing gifts for the Christ Child Society home at Rockville. The gifts will be distributed Christmas Day, according to R. H. Best, board president.

Next meeting of the Montgomery County Real Estate Board, President Best also announced, will be held at 8 p. m. December 14 at the Kenwood Country Club.

Product Previews

Do your potatoes keep rolling over? Do you need a fish that swims with a limp? Here are some new products to fill the bill.

The potato roller controller fits all ovens. It is a rack with prongs. Spike a potato on a prong, slip it into the oven, and there she stays. It's marketed by Sunset Sales Corp. of Hollywood, Calif.

The limping fish is a lure molded of tenite plastic especially designed for Pacific Northwest salmon fishing. Erickson Laboratories of Seattle, Wash., said: "Carefully shaped and painted to resemble a crippled herring, this lure is adaptable to a variety of hook combinations."

The line passes through the body of the lure, which runs free when the fish strikes. It comes in five sizes from two and a half to five inches.

Surface Protection Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, has a liquid silicone water repellent designed to protect unglazed exterior masonry and stone building materials. It can be applied by spray or brush in summer or winter.

The company explains that it makes surface and mortar joints water repellent by halting capillary action but it won't block pores and prevent normal breathing.

Gardening and Homemaking

Done With Panelboard . . .

IF YOU'VE GOT a few feet of floor space just off the dining room, you can remodel it into a compact, informal dining alcove like this one—a "natural" for breakfasts, lunches, coffee sessions.

This particular dining alcove was finished in a combination of wood-grain and Jonquil yellow predecorated panelboard, with an attractive fluted glass screen inserted in the wall immediately above the wainscoting. The prefinished panels of hard-pressed board have a factory-applied baked enamel finish that is as easy to clean as the surface of a refrigerator and never needs refinishing.

Sheets of this wall covering material are available at lumber and building material dealers, and if the man of the house is handy, he can install it himself. The sheets can be permanently applied to any flat, dry surface with a special adhesive.

A rainbow of color choices and a wide variety of plain, lined, and tiled patterns can be combined to meet the decorating tastes of any homemaker.

New Heating System Uses Wintry Blasts to Warm Home

Let the cold north wind regulate the heat in your home this winter. This is the advice of R. E. Moore, vice president of Bell & Gossett Co., which makes special hot water heating system equipment for home and industrial use.

Moore says that his engineers developed a new device called the comfort control system whereby changes in outdoor temperature and wind velocity are immediately reflected in the amount of heat circulated through the home. Gone is the inevitable heat lag between changes in the weather and home temperature.

Spark plug of the new system is a regulator which extends through the wall of the home and measures the exact amount of heat lost through the building wall. It is, in effect, an outdoor thermostat which, being exposed to the elements, anticipates their effects on indoor temperatures and guarantees a smooth, steady flow of heat.

"The mark of a good heating system," Moore says "is the utter lack of a sense of air movement and an unvarying temperature. The comfort control system insures just that by working with the elements instead of against them."

Light Furniture Finishes Dress Modern Homes

WITH so many ranch-type homes appearing on the American scene, a demand has developed for various light finishes in furniture which will be suitable for their furnishing.

Limed oak is currently popular because the color is well adapted to modern styles of furniture.

Silver oak is another popular color, especially for occasional pieces. This effect is obtained by using a basic mahogany finish on the oak and then overtoning it with a light color.

The rich natural grain of mahogany lends itself admirably to all kinds of blond finishes. Walnut, in various shades, is also popular.

Garden Club Gives $100

Key Accessories

Deck the Garden With Treasure

By Katherine Barrett Pozer

BRISK DAYS spent in the out-of-doors can take the form of treasure hunts most profitable for those who have neglected to supply themselves with the things necessary for dried bouquets, terrariums and dish gardens.

It is time to collect bark, driftwood and the twisted branches and roots of trees, which have become so popular as accessories to flower arrangements. These bits of wood are expensive to buy and the selection of one's own makes gifts and house decorations of a much more personal nature.

For the ill or shut-in, a collection of small, growing plants is always a welcome gift and one which will give pleasure throughout the winter months.

VETERANS in the hospitals especially like such gifts, and with the ever-increasing numbers in our nearby hospitals special thought should be given to making small dish gardens for the hospital wards. There is always keen competition between wards and patients as to their plants and their growth and general well-being. Many of the garden clubs are already making a number of these miniature gardens and it is hoped by the Red Cross that individuals will make additional contributions.

Attractive small containers can be purchased at modest cost, and for those who cannot go afield there are many small plants available which can be used with small figurines or animal figures to make amusing bedside companions for long days far away from family and friends.

For the artistic and those who have more time, attractive small gifts can be made in the form of plant containers covered with bark. Aluminum foil linings make these waterproof and also can be used to cover flower pots and boxes to give them a festive air.

BULBS make attractive gifts and are much more welcome when started on their way to bloom. Containers for watergrown varieties can be made by using small tins covered with bright foil and tied with brilliant ribbons. Starting these bulbs properly is the secret of their success. They must be kept in a cool, dark place until the roots are well established. This will take two or more weeks. If the spot is too warm the tops will start growing too soon and the result will be leggy foliage and small, insignificant blooms.

Pots of tulips in midwinter are a much-to-be-desired addition to the household decoration. These should be planted in good garden soil and the pots sunk in the ground and covered with several inches of cinders or light soil, so that they can be dug in late winter and brought indoors to bloom:

TERRARIUMS are perhaps the most popular of all the indoor types of gardens and are much more fun to make and, when made with care, are sure of success and a full winter of enjoyment. The plants grow and develop interesting forms in the damp conditions in which they grow.

The type of container can be varied. They can range all the way from large fishbowls to glass teapots; old pharmacy jars or brandy snifters, are very popular, as singly or in pairs they can be used many times for dining table or mantel decoration.

If a tall container, such as a brandy snifter, is used it is important that the underneath be more sightly than in the flat-bottomed variety of container. A thin piece of moss, placed upside down, can be used to cover the bottom and over this a layer of sharp sand and charcoal mixed should be covered with an inch or more of good garden loam. When finished, the bowl should be wiped inside and out and covered with a piece of glass to retain moisture. The soil should be kept damp but not wet and in a cool place away from direct sunlight.

Make Your Own Yule Decorations

By Joan Barlow

NOTHING dampens the Christmas spirit faster than a price tag. Even the most ardent celebrants lose their enthusiasm as the odds and ends bill for Christmas assumes alarming proportions. With the aid of a little imagination and a few evenings at the work table, however, it is possible to meet January on other than bankrupt terms and still have all the holiday trimmings.

Tree ornaments, which seem to diminish magically over the summer, can be colorful without being costly. A supply of paper cups, some celophane tape, a few sheets of cardboard and a wonder-working substance called flock can be turned into a variety of brightly decorated ornaments.

For candy canes, place red tape diagonally on a piece of white cardboard. Draw a single cane pattern and use it as a tracer for the rest. Vary the red with green stripes if you like, and for miniature canes wrap the tape around pipe cleaners.

PAPER CUPS, with leftovers from Christmas wrappings pasted on or striped with gay Christmas tape, can be filled with nuts and candies suspended from tree branches. Christmas seals pasted together and hung with loops of tape or yarn will add a touch of color.

Flock, which can be used to touch up worn ornaments or glamorize inexpensive ones, consists of tiny flecks of rayon filament which can be attached to almost any surface and form a thick velvety design. Available at art and handicraft stores, it provides variation from water color or crayon trim.

To flock cardboard ornaments, first lightly sketch in your design. Fill in the design with adhesive and, while it is still wet, scatter flock over the surface. Tap the cardboard from underneath to insure even distribution and reuse leftover flock.

WRAPPING packages, too, can be an expensive proposition. Shelf paper and a skein of yarn will go a long way to whittle down the wrappings bill. Get as gay as you like with poster paint for your "to—from," and, if you like to play, try making your own Santa Claus for decoration. Cotton wool glues on easily to make a splendid beard and trim for the jolly gentleman's cap, with bright red paint filling in the important features.

For raised designs, the same tape as used for the Christmas tree put on cardboard and held up by tiny cardboard squares, serves to vary the appearance of your packages. Gifts for men can be wrapped in their favorite section of the newspaper, and tied with brightly colored yarn.

HOSTESSES who yearn for special holiday accents can brighten their everyday glassware with stickers or tape. Red and green glasses can be found at the local dime store and decorated with any design you fancy. Napkins and paper plates, too, can get in a festive mood for children's parties by the same method, and whimsical hats formed from colored shelf paper and left-over tape.

Paper chains to festoon tree or table will give the youngsters a chance to get in their share of decorating, and almost any kind of paper will do. Shiny gold and silver paper, of course, makes really fancy chains to tape on wall niches in the shape of wreaths or tiny trees.

Try to keep your list of materials down and use them in a variety of ways. Aim for color rather than perfection.

Give Color for Christmas

She's engrossed in creating an individual Christmas gift—a present splashed with bright colors and that personal touch

CHRISTMAS can begin any time you like — the minute, for instance, that you take your paint brush in hand to turn out attractive handmade gifts that have a personal touch.

Such gifts are easy to make — and fun. You'll find the dime-to-dollar store to be a treasure chest of materials.

There are, for instance, kitchen canisters, cake tins, casseroles and wooden salad bowls that can be eued to blend with any kitchen color scheme. They can be personalized with simple decorative touches in bright enamel. In decorating salad bowls, incidentally, put your design on first and then apply a coat of spar varnish to give it an odorless, tasteless finish.

Then there is an endless stream of closet accessories: Hampers, shoe and hat stands, brush racks, hat boxes and clothes hangers. All these will respond to paint brush ingenuity.

Don't overlook gardening equipment, either . . . things like trowels, diggers and watering cans. Brightly painted handles make them easier to find in the grass. Besides, they stand out among other tools — when borrowed!

FOR CHILDREN, you can create a brightly painted toy chest, embellished with story book figures of the child's name. These can be made from old sea chests or wooden storage lockers. You may also be able to find them in a store that sells unpainted furniture.

Unpainted furniture is, naturally, an excellent gift source. Record cabinets are especially welcome. Then there are bookcases, small tables and chests of drawers.

All these articles need just a few strokes of the brush to give them flair and colorful beauty. The important thing about it is that you don't have to be an artist or master craftsman to create designs. There are many books that will give you the basic brush strokes. You can also buy durable decalcomania decorations from your paint store which are easy to apply.

When the time rolls around to decorate your home for the holidays, bright colored objects help to give the house its air of festivity. Beautiful mantel arrangements can be made with branches of fir or pine, brushed with silver or gilt and accented with gay glass Christmas tree balls and ribbons. Sprays from trees or shrubs that have large oval leaves —such as magnolia—can be painted and used in the same manner.

For the Christmas tree, dip small pine cones in silver, gold or colored paint. And, just for fun, paint the names of the family and of those who will share Christmas with you on large Christmas tree balls.

To change the tree from its traditional glossy green, you can spray it with resin emulsion paint, casein paint, show card color, or one-coat, self-priming oil base flat paint.

SOMETHING OLD, SOMETHING NEW

NEW FACES: Monica Lewis is the lass at the left, a Metro beauty you'll soon be seeing in "Excuse My Dust" and "Inside Straight." Above are two singers new to Washington but widely admired in New York, where their roles in "The Consul" brought them raves—Rosemary Kuhlman, as the secretary, and Patricia Neway as the unhappy heroine; the Menotti music drama opens tomorrow night at the Gayety. Right, bottom, is a new pair Metro hopes may take the place of Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery, above. The 1950 team is Marjorie Main and James Whitmore, currently in "Mrs. O'Malley and Mr. Malone," at the Capitol

Two New Plays on Strip This Week; Frank Fay Calls Critics 'Plain Bums'

THE BROADWAY LIGHTS.

Stage entrance: After a seven-day intermission (following seven consecutive nights of premieres) the first-night menagerie will be introduced to a pair of new plays this week . . . They are "Let's Make an Opera," which comes to the Golden Theater on the 13th, and "Bless You All" the following sundown at the Hellinger. "Bless" enjoyed good notices in the tryout-towns . . . Variety's box-office inspectors report the annual Christmas decline (plus the war reverses) is felt in most of the show temples. The Broadway gross for all 25 attractions was $595,500 or 75.5 percent of capacity . . . Only the hits with their huge advance sellouts are attracting regular capacity . . . "The Golden State," which took two years to produce, retires after three weeks . . . The top quick click among the straight plays is "Affairs of State" starring Celeste Holm. Its angels reaped 100 p.c. profit on their investment after only three months . . . The only show to win unanimous raves is "Guys and Dolls" . . . Frank Fay's "If You Please" closed in San Francisco after six performances. It sank $70,000 of his own coin. He blamed the defeat (in curtain speeches) on the critics, whom he called "plain bums."

WINCHELL

THE CINEMAGICIANS: "Kim" starring Errol Flynn has the adventurous gusto you'd expect from a Kipling epic . . . "Dial 1119" is a routine opus about a killer minus the diller . . . "Farewell to Yesterday," a newsreel history of the past 30 years, is a tragic record of violence and agony. It shows you how far humanity has strayed from civilization . . . A Mexican import called "Hidden River" is old sombrero . . . "Highway 301" is a mugg-and-mollodrama co-starring gun and blackjack . . . "Frisco Tornado" is more windy than breezy . . . "Hot Rod" is a sleeping pill.

SHOP-TALK: "Black Chiffon" starring Flora Robson cost $56,000 to stage. The same play (same star) was produced in London for $4800 . . . Tony Farrell, who squandered a few million invading Broadway, has $20,000 worth of "Bless You All" . . . "Arms and the Girl" (which Theater Guild did with him) cost him $159,000 . . . Clifford Odets, who started as a spear-carrier with the guild, gets $2000 weekly from his hit "The Country Girl" . . . "Guys and Dolls" is approaching the million advance mark . . . "South Pacific" just can't get into a rut. Its advance sale is what it was when it opened 86 weeks ago: $450,000.

THE AIRISTOCRATS: "Studio One," one of the best when it is merely good, came up with a spy-thriller that kept you on the edge of your suspense . . . Capt. Video's thrillers (via Dumont) are hogging the ratings in homes that have children . . . The forums on teevy haven't the zip that comes over the old-fashioned radio. This probably is due to the many debaters who are camera-shy . . . Hooper's latest teevy survey shows seven dramas and four vaudeos in its top 15 . . . A year ago it was the other way round . . . They complain of a talent famine and then program Helen Hayes against M. Berle . . . Estelle Taylor, once wed to Jack Dempsey, is the latest to invade the networks. Her offering is named: "The Taylored Lady." It's on the new Progressive B'casting System.

STAIRWAY TO THE STARS: British Star Hermione Gingold will anthologize the high spots of her London revusical hits for her US debut. The Theater Guilders have first call . . . At least one Boston critic (Elinor Hughes) appreciated Cole Porter's "Out of This World," which was also attacked by the censor there. This is the musical (in tights) which features male legs, instead of the popular brand . . . Warner's paid $200,000 for the film rights to "Where's Charley?". Newcomer producers Feuer and Martin produced it. They are also the parents of the smash "Guys and Dolls." Pretty soon they'll be so rich they can meet Rodgers & Hammerstein without curtseying

THE PRESS-BOX: The week's confusion-award was won by the legalistic hair-splitting in the Judy Coplon case. The court ruled "her guilt is plain" and then reversed her conviction on a technicality . . . Mud is clearer than that.

Whether evacuation of our troops in Korea will cause us to lose face isn't as vital as saving their lives. Dunkirk didn't stop Britain from winning the war anymore than Bataan stopped us . . . Correspondent Homer Bigart caught the tragic poignancy of war with two lines: "In this situation a soldier asks only to stay alive. He becomes a hoarder of days and each sunrise is lovelier than the last" . . . One bright spot in the news was Ilse Koch's weeping jags. Her wails must be music to her survivor's ears . . . The irony of Red China's war against us. Nine years ago this week the U. S. went to war to help keep China from being conquered by the Japs . . . Headline: "Henry Wallace Says Russia Seeks to Rule the World" . . . Good morning, sleepyhead.

LOVE LETTER. "Dear Walter," writes Gardner Cowles, publisher of Look, Quick, the Minneapolis Star and Tribune, and the Des Moines Register and Tribune. "I finally came to the sudden decision to suspend Flair because of the terrible foreign situation. In that connection I want to pay you a compliment. Many people have felt you were unduly hysterical during the past 18 months, but events are certainly proving you an accurate prophet. I am very much afraid the next decade will be black for the entire world. It is a horrible tragedy that the United States does not have real military strength in being."

Time's press dept. (discussing Billy Rose's resignation from colyuming) sighs: "He finally learned what every good columnist knows: that turning out a column three times a week is close to a full-time job" . . . Three a week! The poor fella.

Detecting Genius

Your Child Is Gifted— No Question

By Paul Hume

DOES your eight-month old son or daughter display sure signs of musical genius?

Have you a junior model Toscanini at home, who cannot hear music over the radio or from the phonograph without waving his hands in time to the music?

Yes, thousands of homes are brightened with these miniature musicians. Countless parents are certain that their children are uniquely gifted musically.

TAKE us, for instance. Our 1950 model is eight weeks old today. Yet it is already perfectly clear that he can make a brilliant career for himself in any one of several fields. Conducting is already an open book to him. His hands are constantly moving in patterns much clearer than those by which Mitropoulos leads the Philharmonic.

Ormandy would be proud of the cue our little sharpy gives for the end of a tough piece. At the same time, our neighbors will tell you that Caruso at his height never had more pure lung power than young Paul when he's hungry.

Of course yelling in opera is frowned on these days. But not as much as it was back in the first three decades of this century when singing was more of an art. The way things are going, yelling will pass very nicely for singing, just about the time our little PR will be ready for his Metropolitan debut.

OK, supposing you do have one to four or five of these young Horowitzes at home. What do you do with them? How do you find out if they have real talent or just a casual feeling for music? How do you give them the background and foundation for music that they want and deserve?

Well one way, and the best way, from the time they're old enough—and they're old enough when they go into preschool or first grade classes—is to let them take in the children's concerts of the National Symphony.

Long before that, they will hear music—the best music, if you twist your dial properly—from the New York Philharmonic, the Metropolitan, and the broadcasts of fine music over our several stations paying attention to music. For older children, the evening concerts, via radio, of the NBC Symphony, and those from the Library of Congress add further regular chances for simple, free ways of hearing the world's greatest music.

Movies for Youngsters

Children's Parley Evokes a Fine Idea

By Richard L. Coe

JUST ABOUT THE most illuminating criticism of our Hollywood movies I've ever heard came during a session of last week's Mid-Century White House Conference on Children and Youth.

A perfectly simple motion was made that the big movie companies be requested to experiment with making pictures especially for children under 14.

The work group (conventionese for "panel") smacked down the idea by a vote of 34 to 12. Several speakers explained that they felt the movies we've been having for the past 25 years are ideas for family groups, that they could see no reason for changing the existing system.

Now this idea of making pictures especially for the lower age groups is by no means a new one, but I couldn't help being struck by the very strongly expressed implication that the ideal of the moviemakers—that is, pictures which will have appeal to all—is fine as it is. Any number of recent surveys have shown that movie attendance falls off sharply after the age of 25, at which time, presumably, the unreality of the movies' world is felt by lagging customers.

SURELY THERE is some connection between the fact that Elmo Roper's survey finds people not going to movies because plots are "silly, pointless and not realistic" and the bland assumption by a presumably alert group that the movie set-up is fine for children just as it exists.

One reason I think this group was so anxious to hold to the status quo is the superbly efficient spade work done by the Johnston Office, whose Marjorie Granger Dawson is director of the MPA's National Children's Film Library. With charming doggedness Mrs. Dawson has worked at the grass roots for some years, pointing to the unquestionably excellent children's films that do exist.

Mrs. Dawson has gotten some 10 national organizations, ranging from the American Association of University Women, the DAR, the Federation of Women's Clubs to the National Board of Review, to go on record that they do not advocate making recreational films especially for children above the age of 8.

With such recommendations on the record, all the charming Mrs. Dawson had to do the other morning was to mention the fact. It's probably taken exhaustive work to get such backing and it's to her credit that she has done her job so efficiently.

HOWEVER, the motion offered by Mrs. Esther Speyer of New York representing the National Education Association, simply requested that the studios experiment with the idea.

Naturally, the economic how is in back of the movie people's lack of interest. It's felt that to make such pictures would be financially unfeasable. It was pointed out that the five-year attempt of the J. Arthur Rank Organization to carry out such a plan in England has been curtailed because of the rocky financial going Rank's outfit has had lately.

The British set forth their reasoning this way:

"Children between the ages of 7 and adolescence do not understand the plot, motivation and characterization of adult films. Their eyes may be amused by action on the screen, but their brain remains passive. A child appears able to identify itself with very few adult actors and is, therefore, unable to become an active participant in an adult program . . . There is very little concrete evidence that children are harmed morally by adult films, though some sensitive children are disturbed by violence on the screen."

IN UPHOLDING its program for children's films, the Rank outfit points out that "our productions are already beginning to train child audiences to have a sound appreciation of well-made films. A child can appreciate only what it can understand, therefore it is impossible to train children in film appreciation on adult films.

A long course of adult films, whose motivation and plot they cannot understand, conditions children to regard the cinema as a place where the eye is amused and emotions titillated, but where one definitely does not use one's brain."

The MPA-Dawson answer to this is: "On purely theoretical grounds it is not true that children need special pictures in the same way that they need special clothes, special toys and special books. Much faulty thinking arises from this loose analogy between books and motion pictures . . . After all, the child does not live in a 'special' world. He lives in an adult world and, from the age of 8 on, he is accustoming himself to living in that world. When pictures are deliberatedly drained of adult backgrounds and implications, the world they create is an unreal one. It is narrowed, emasculated and distorted by over-simplification. Thus, to the American child it does not ring true."

I THINK Mrs. Dawson's words may sound good, but I'm not so sure about her assumption that the movies' adult world is a real one.

Through the years the strictures of pressure groups, the plot restrictions of the Code and, for instance, the generally immature attitude about marriage, divorce and love have surely created a world that is anything but real.

This aspect of the matter and its subsequent effects on the children they were purportedly protecting did not even come up in the work group's discussion, which devoted four fifths of its three meetings to the matter of TV channel assignments to educational uses.

It gave me the oblique impression that the conference work groupers had written off movies created especially for children as (1) either perfect as is or (2) unimportant compared with the yet-to-be-developed ultra high frequency TV. The experts, so far as I could see, were satisfied with the past and the future.

But then, on leaving the Armory, I buttonholed six assorted people in their late teens, and asked them what they thought about making movies especially for kids.

Individually, each one replied that he thought it was a swell idea.

Old Sobersox

Martin's So Quiet You Simply Can't Miss Him

By Sonia Stein

TIME MAGAZINE went all out for Drs. Frank Stanton and Peter Goldmark because they are the big business wheel and the inventive genius, respectively, of the color wheel behind CBS' color TV system. Stanton, as president of CBS, and Goldmark, as head of the research department, share the glory.

Of a more pictorial turn of mind, Life went all out for Patty Painter, the blonde "animated test pattern" who has been modeling scarves and feathers for CBS demonstrations of color since 1946.

With a gentle tsk tsk, I berate them both for skipping over the most colorful one of the CBS lot. John Martin, executive assistant to Goldmark, is an extraordinary contradiction in terms. He stands out because he makes such a determined effort not to. There is not anywhere in any CBS picture I can lay my hands on the face or even an elbow or a lagging heel of Martin.

In dress he sticks—day in and day out—to blue Brooks Brothers shirts and black knit ties. The shoulders of his dark suits are not padded—another point of deliberate conservativeness. He is, in effect, so quietly dressed that you can't miss him.

NATURE compounds the effect. Slight of build, Martin has pleasant, undistinguished features. His hair is straight and blond, his eyes a pale green. When he is sun-tanned, his eyes and hair seem by contrast to disappear—giving a startling ghostly brand of blandness.

The name, as simple as John Doe, sounds slightly fictitious. It is—slightly. His real name is John Stuart Hendry Stuart MacMartin. He dropped all parts of it but the essentials, in order to be inconspicuous. (Martin, born a twin in a castle in Scotland, came to this country early and worked hard to lose all traces of Scottish manor and manner.)

Martin is totally unconscious of the effect he creates. Intent on getting a single perfect rose from florist to CBS color camera, he will carry it bare through the streets, its long stem hanging, its fair head making the one burst of warm color against his sober costume.

Much of the time he is followed or accompanied by Miss Painter, a fragile doll-like creature with china-white complexion who weighs 90 pounds when soaking wet and holding a couple of books. Since she looks like a Dresden figurine, she doesn't exactly divert attention from the pair of them.

Also with Martin almost incessantly is his "brain," a clip-board with long yellow sheets of paper on which he marks down the myriad details he is responsible for.

AND THE details mount, since it is Martin who is responsible for fusing the labors of the engineering and production departments, and for the general well-being of the invited audience. He is often responsible for the general well-being of the staff, making one take aspirin, sending another to eat something hot, and keeping a third out of the way of somebody else's bad temper.

He also keeps Goldmark's well-being foremost. When they were in Atlanta together for a color demonstration, a clap of thunder woke Goldmark up in the middle of the night. The addition of weather difficulties to their chore worried him and he called Martin's room, asked anxiously if that had indeed been thunder. "Certainly not," soothed Martin. "It's just the Yankees coming back to retake Atlanta." With just such nonsense, he often helps the hardworking Dr. Goldmark to relax.

In the early days, when CBS had only a single color camera and a single monitor screen, the lab found itself with a glorious opportunity to get a pharmaceutical company to finance a number of demonstration sets if CBS could prove that the color system was up to showing surgical operations in color. Martin was dispatched to get a papier mache medical model—a quiet lady minus arms and legs who could be taken apart organ by colorful organ for the cameras. Martin tore out to the model shop and tore back with the exquisitely life-like lady beside him in the cab. It wasn't until he heard gulps in the CBS lobby that he realized he was, to all casual observers, carrying a somewhat dismembered female torso in his arms. He paused momentarily to protect the lady's dignity by covering her head with his hat, and hurried on his way.

THE PROVOCATIVELY succesful demonstration last Tuesday by RCA of a tri-color TV tube, plus the heated three-way exchange of comments by Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission Wayne Coy, Chairman of the Board of RCA David Sarnoff and the editorial department of the Washington Daily News, make Coy's problems as a public administrator a matter of public

'Pygmalion' in Final Week; 'Alice' Is Next at Arena Stage

"PYGMALION" will start its final week tomorrow night at Arena Stage, with Codirector Zelda Fichandler as Shaw's cockney flower girl, Eliza Doolittle.

Lester Rawlins plays her correct speech and manners mentor, Professor Higgins, with Henry Oliver in the choice role of Eliza's garrulous father, who lectures for Shaw on the horrors of middle class morality. The run will end Saturday night after the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

"Alice in Wonderland" is to succeed the Shaw comedy a week from tomorrow night, when Mary Mangum will appear as Alice. This will continue through the 30th, with a special matinee Friday, Dec. 22. All evening performances will be at 8 o'clock, to accommodate adults who wish to bring children.

Other roles in the Lewis Carroll classic will find George Grizzard as the White Rabbit, Jacqueline Dudley as the Red Queen, Kip Conlon as the White Queen, Barbara Cole as the Queen of Hearts and Harry Scully as the Knave of Hearts. Such Arena standbys as Henry Oliver, Lester Rawlins, Henry Danilowicz, Warner Schriener and Dick O'Niel will double or treble in numberless smaller roles.

The theater also is offering a special Christmas gift subscription series, whereby purchasers will receive seven plays for the cost of six.

Yeats Dominates Abbey's Story

THE STORY OF THE ABBEY THEATRE, by Peer Kavanagh (Devin-Adair). 243 pp. $4.50.

For a small group in one of the lesser capitals of Europe, the Abbey Theatre of Dublin had a surprisingly wide and continuing influence. To be known as an Abbey player was, and still is, an accolade of the stage. Kavanagh knows his subject intimately, and guides us, with many a good story, from the founding of the theater at the turn of the century to the present time.

Naturally, W. B. Yeats dominates the story, but Lady Gregory, J. M. Synge and later playwrights like Sean O'Casey and Lord Dunsany all helped to add luster to its name. It is a highly readable history, although Mr. Kavanagh ends on a note of overpessimism with the statement that the Abbey Theatre is now no more than a training school for Hollywood and English movie companies.

Rachel Crothers Play Korean War Casualty

A casualty of the Korean war has been a new play by Rachel Crothers. The veteran dramatist shelved "My South Window," which she was writing for Josephine Hull, because "it is a comedy with good-natured satire about world conditions which would have been funny just before the Korean war broke out but is impossible at this time."—U.P.

For a Week
'The Consul' At Gayety Tomorrow

A MUSIC DRAMA which has won almost as many awards as "South Pacific" will arrive at the Gayety Theater tomorrow night for a week's run with the opening of "The Consul."

Gian-Carlo Menotti's dramatic musical story of a woman striving to get out of a European police state last season received the Drama Critics award, the Pulitizer Prize for its composer, the Outer Critics award, the Clarence Derwent award for a distinguished supporting player, five Donaldson awards, the ORT and the Sign awards as the best musical play of the season.

Menotti's successful fusion of words and music in this merciless contemporary story was instantly recognized as a unique triumph.

Patricia Neway, who created the taxing leading role, and Marie Powers, in the part of her mother-in-law, have the central roles, with Bruni Falcon, Norman Kelley, Russell George, Leon Lishner, Rosemary Kuhlmann, Maria Marlo, David Aiken, Mariea Andreassi, Elinor Warren, Francis Monachino completing the cast. Miss Falcon alternates with Miss Neway in the leading role at performances to be announced.

The author-composer staged the work and the orchestra is under the direction of Evan Whallon, jr.

Eddie (WTOP) Gallaher ON RECORDS

CHRISTMAS is a season celebrated both in song and story. About this time each year the ordinary brand of love song assumes a subsidiary role, while the Yuletide rondelays become the order of the day. Besides the traditional music of Christmas, many popular songs appear each year bearing the flavor of evergreen and holly. Some of these numbers live but for a day, and then depart like the snows of yesteryear; while others become perennial favorites, enjoying a rebirth each year as a tribute to their lasting qualities. Here are some of the Christmas records, old and new, which may find your attention this year.

A CROSBY CHRISTMAS, Decca: This column is proud of its prediction many moons ago that the sequel to the effort by Bing and Gary Crosby, which was received so warmly by record lovers, would be a disk engaging the talents of the entire Crosby clan. Bing and his four youngsters here join forces in a memento of the season which will find a ready welcome in the many homes where, thanks to "White Christmas," Crosby and Christmas have been synonymus for many years.

WINTER WONDERLAND, Buddy Clark, Columbia: Here is an unusual seasonal song because it actually makes no mention of Christmas. It's been popular every year at this time since 1934, though, so I guess it's fair to call it a Christmas song. "Winter Wonderland" affords a good illustration of why people like to write and record Christmas songs, despite the fact that they bloom only for a few short weeks each year. This number was written by Felix Bernard the composer of "Dardanella," in collaboration with Dick Smith, the writer of "When a Gypsy Makes His Violin Cry." Both are now dead. Buddy Clark, who made the record of the song which I consider tops, is no longer with us, either. Yet "Winter Wonderland" continues to be played each year as a living, even a joyous tribute to the fine talents who wrote and recorded it.

FROSTY, THE SNOWMAN, Vaughn Monroe, RCA Victor: Christmas is a season for the young in heart, be they 6 or 60. And Yuletide numbers written in the style of children's songs have had an appeal by no means limited to toddlers. Two years ago "Here Comes Santa Claus" was the popular Christmas favorite, and I'm sure that many a new copy of Doris Day's recording will find its way into homes this year. Last year an unemployed war veteran wrote and published the number one Christmas song all by himself, based on the children's story of "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer," and the Gene Autry record found favor with the kids of all ages. This year "Frosty, the Snowman" makes his first appearance on the scene, the brainchild of the same two gentlemen who conceived "Peter Cottontail" for the Easter season. Vaughn Monroe, who has two children of his own, gives the song just the right touch.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9 a. m.; Moondial, 11:30 p. m. to 12:30 a. m.

Morini to Play Here Wednesday

ERICA MORINI, foremost woman violinist today, will play the Bruch G Minor Concerto with the National Symphony on Wednesday.

The Milhaud transcription of Couperin's Sultana music opens the evening. Two second symphonies tell the rest of the story. Familiar to all symphony audiences is the second of Sibelius.

Receiving its first performance is the second symphony of Homer Keller. Washington has heard choral, symphonic and piano music by this young composer, now in residence at the University of Michigan. His recent piano concerto has won success on the West Coast and with the Cincinnati Symphony.

Choirs Get To Work on The Messiah

COMING EVENTS of the season: the Messiah, in its Constitution Hall performance on December 18 by the Washington and Cathedral Choral Societies under Paul Callaway, with noted soloists, and orchestra.

Jennie Tourel, in Hindemith's great song cycle, Das Marienleben, the Life of the Virgin Mary. This is surely appropriate at Christmas time. It comes to Lisner Auditorium, Thursday, the 21st, under the Institute of Contemporary Arts.

This week: The Washington Cantata Choir, under Ronald Arnatt, premieres tonight in the Church of the Ascension and St. Agnes. Not only does the new group bow in, but they give the first local hearing of Benjamin Britten's St. Nicholas Cantata. Soloists will be Mary Jane Kemp, soprano, and George Barritt, tenor.

The National Ballet takes on Constitution Hall's unballet-ish stage Tuesday evening, under the direction of Marion Venable.

Virginia Davis's rare folk art returns to the Phillips Gallery today, rich in new and old favorites.

Igor Stravinsky's L'Histoire du Soldat will be played, narrated, and danced—as it was intended to be—Thursday night at American University. It will be joined with Victor Penso's one-act opera, Feng.

Call Paul Hume For Chest Gift

IF you are planning to give that extra something that will put the Community Chest drive over the top, and you want to make your added gift as one who loves music, how about calling that special number, Metropolitan 6262, next Wednesday morning between 9 and 12.

Because I am going to haunt the telephone at that number for three hours on Wednesday. That's my birthday—and I'd like to be able to report calls from a lot of you who will put away another dollar or two, because you feel that music makes life a bit more beautiful for thousands of people, just as the Community Chest does.

And if I have said something you didn't like about your favorite singer or artist, and you don't want to give a cent to the Chest through me, why just call that number and ask for Povich instead. He'll be taking calls, too, and he can't have upset you, at least not musically.

Knaths, the British, a Ukrainian

John Piper's "Stone Gate, Portland," currently on display at the Phillips Gallery

By Jane Watson Crane

KARL KNATHS, who emerged this week as top winner at New York's Metropolitan Museum show, has been teaching at the Phillips Gallery here in Washington for 12 years. Duncan Phillips first bought from him in the twenties, when his work was comparatively unknown. In fact, virtually his entire painting career can be traced through examples in the Phillips collection, and he has had frequent exhibits in the gallery.

Knaths, whose methods are far from orthodox, has won a devoted following here, a good part of it from individuals who came to him skeptically and hesitantly at the start and later became enthusiasts. He was born in Wisconsin, studied at the Art Institute of Chicago, and has made his home in Provincetown for many years.

This spring he will not be at the Phillips as in the past, for he has decided to give up teaching, at least for the time being. Now nearing 60, he just won recognition relatively late in life. Although his painting derives from representation and has varied in its ratio of abstraction and realism, Knaths was one of the earliest of the American painters to accept abstraction as a permanent form of expression. His has not been at all an easy path to success. And his paintings remain, for the majority of people, difficult to follow. One of the unexpected things about them is that, for all their austerity, flashes of humor frequently shine through.

THE LOAN SHOW of British paintings now on display in several rooms at the Phillips looks completely at home there, and well it might, for work by several of the artists hangs in the Phillips' permanent collection. The stair wall is hung with several canvases by John Piper, including a recent purchase in the customary dark but unusually rich tones ("Stone Gate, Portland"), and Christopher Wood's delightful "Arc de Triomphe." These are Phillips acquisitions, as is the Walter Sickert portrait near the entrance downstairs.

Among the landscapes in the group from overseas, presented under the auspices of the English Speaking Union, we felt that two—Paul Nash's "Landscape of the Vernal Equinox" and Graham Sutherland's "Western Hills" were of exceptional and haunting quality.

The affinity to Whistler in Pasmore's painting is indeed striking. Yet somehow it does not seem dated at all in the way that work by Wyndham Lewis, who founded the consciously progressive "Vorticist" movement in 1914, now appears. The older men for the most part seem stronger than the younger, if perhaps not at times so sensitive or, as in the case of a man like Francis Bacon, so introverted. We found something almost repellent about the smooth finish of Lucian Freud's work, but that is a matter of personal taste. The show is small and well worth your while. Right on the heels of it, the Phillips is holding an already scheduled one-man show of works by John Piper, represented in the group by two water color landscapes lent by Sir Kenneth Clark.

MICHAEL SHROMCHONKO, a painter from the Ukraine who survived the experience of three years in a German concentration camp and a host of other ills, is now established in Washington at the Brush and Palette art studio run by Harry Barron at 2028 P st. nw. There he is giving instruction in painting. Some of the portraits and sketches he did in the camp may be seen in a back room (do not be put off by the part of the studio which is frankly given over to exhibiting commercial work.) Several of these we found deeply moving and it has lead us to try to learn more about the artist, who speaks little English as yet. Shromchonko had an academic European training, has had a number of exhibitions and commissions abroad. One feels that here is a man of great capabilities and possibilities. We understand that he is to have an exhibition later in the season at the Arts Club.

ARTISTS OF THIS AREA still have till December 29 to put the finishing touches on their works for the Corcoran's annual Washington and vicinity show. All entries must be in by the 28th and 29th, the jury will meet January 13, and the exhibit will be open to the public beginning January 28.

There are no displays about devoted to the Christmas theme, but there are a number of places where material suitable for Christmas gifts is to the fore. The Christmas Mart of the Institute of Contemporary Arts offers work that is unusual and of exceptional quality, from prints by Hayter, Gabo, and Albers at relatively modest prices, to ceramics, silverware and weaving by acknowledged experts. The Whyte Gallery has a show of paintings designed to find welcome under a tree. In this group our personal choice would be Marguerite Burgess' luminous birds, but pick one for yourself or whisper it to a Santa Claus. Artists include Gates, Calfee, the two McAdams, John Gernand, and others of like stature.

Watercolor Club

The 54th annual exhibition of the Watercolor Club of Washington open today in the National Collection of Fine Arts of the Smithsonian Institution. To continue through December 28, the erhibition will be open today from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

A NUMBER of paintings from the District have been lent to the Philadelphia Museum's Diamond Jubilee Exhibition, including Gilbert Stuart's "Mrs. Yates," Whistler's "White Girl," Renoir's "Dancer" and Manets "Toreador" from the National Gallery; van Goghs "Gardens at Arles" and Matisse's "Studio" from the Phillips Gallery.

Baby Must Be a Genius

And if you can supplement this with recordings of various kinds, you give a start to a love of music that is based on selective appreciation.

BUT CHILDREN should see how music is made, as well as hear it. They will find a unique thrill in watching the strings of the orchestra moving in sweeping unison passages. The actual experience of hearing while seeing brasses and woodwinds will make the whole thing more real and more intelligible to them.

Washington children are lucky these years. Through the most far-sighted and progressive planning, business firms throughout the city have taken up the idea of sponsoring children's concerts by the National Symphony.

These are played free in our public schools. Children from around the city are brought to hear them, and they are broadcast to the other schools so that all our youngsters can hear them. The programs are given to the junior listeners with verbal program notes, after days of preparation by their music teachers.

THE SEVEN business houses supplying the concerts this year include the American Security & Trust Company, Campbell Music Company, the Hecht Company, the Jordan Piano Company, the Junior League of Washington, Sears, Roebuck and Company, and the Ring Building.

"The Ring Building," you say. "But that's not a company. That's a building. Who does the giving?"

It's simple. There was a man in the Ring Building who thought children should have free concerts by our symphony. So he got busy and canvassed his building. And the price of one concert was raised by the people in that building who agreed with him. That's an idea that could be worked in lots of other places at very little cost to any one person.

Then finally, after the school concertgoers have their seven concerts arranged, a series of three programs is set up for them in Constitution Hall. There for a very small admission fee, they can hear a whole concert in the same hall where their mothers and fathers go. That is, if the mothers and fathers go.

IN CONSTITUTION Hall they can see and hear the orchestra and Conductor Mitchell the way they look when they play there every Wednesday night all winter long. And that is a different kind of thrill for them. It makes them participants on the same grown up terms as their older friends and families.

These are the ways your children can learn about music in live, exciting hours they will always remember. Nothing else can take the place of the real thing. When you watch your boys and your girls, and see them waking up to music, remember the concerts planned especially for them.

Your National Symphony Orchestra is responsible for those concerts.

Saint-Saens' Animal Show One of Year's Rare Discs

SAINT-SAENS: Carnival of the Animals. Orchestra under Kostelanetz, with Hambro and Zayde, pianists, Frank Miller, cellist. AND NOEL COWARD reading new verses of OGDEN NASH. Columbia 4355. $4.85. On the other side: Ravel: Mother Goose Suite, with Kostelanetz and orchestra.

What a record! What a bargain! What a Christmas present for your kids, their parents, and their grandparents. What an idea, what a combination, and what a team of people to make it all come to life!

In 1886 Saint-Saens wrote a chamber work which he called a "zoological fantasy." He scored it for two pianos, flute, clarinet, xylophone and string quintet. He wrote it for fun with his friends at private performances.

The Carnival of the Animals, as he called it, was never performed publicly until after Saint-Saens' death in 1921. Today it stands as a favorite among musical satires. In it Saint-Saens kids his own music, Rossini, Offenbach, and the whole Czerny School of Velocity in Piano Playing.

But here is the Carnival in a brilliant performance. And added to it are verses by Ogden Nash—verses for each of the animals—and verses that are read by Noel Coward.

We would quarrel with one thing: the statement on the jacket that Saint-Saens' humor was obvious. Hooey. It moves from true subtlety to the obviousness of a meat ax. But let's not forget its moments of rare wit.

The recording is perfection. The two pianists play with dazzling verve, and Frank Miller, first cellist of the NBC Symphony, plays the famous Swan as a real artist should.

I Can Hear It Now. Volume 3. 1919-1932. Columbia ML 4340. $4.85.

The Murrow-Friendly method is these historical discs is now familiar. Here is the third disc, running from the Wilsonian period, post-World War I, through the first inaugural of FDR. Here are days of prohibition and Lindy, the Lone Eagle. Here's Jimmy Walker welcoming Queen Marie, Gertrude Ederle, Bobby Jones.

Here are Clarence Darrow and Bryan debating at the Scopes trial. And the night Sacco and Vanzetti were executed.

Comes the crash of 1929, and then Will Rogers describes the United States Senate in language that seems more appropriate today than 20 years ago. And here are the early voices of Bing Crosby, much higher and lighter than today; Vallee, singing what is his theme song these very afternoons on the radio, but singing it in the 20s.

The speeches recorded here are sometimes given by the person who first gave them — sometimes by a voice chosen for its resemblance to the original. It is a collection of trivia and profundity. And so were the years it depicts.

Juvenile Jury Kids Coming to Pay Washington a Visit information. But if you want the real inside dope on how he feels about it, you might accept the invitation of the Washington Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration to hear Coy discuss "Color Television—A Case Study in Regulatory Administration." Coy has been scheduled as dinner speaker for several weeks, but this week's developments make him a really "hot" prospect. The dinner meeting will be held at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday at Barker Hall at the YWCA. Nonmembers may make reservations (at $1.60) by calling EX. 6360, ext. 2021, until 11 a. m. tomorrow, and the society will also welcome after-dinner auditors. As many as can be squeezed in, that is.

PROBABLY THE ONLY radio performers in the country who wouldn't be somewhat fazed by the presence of the President in the audience, will come to Washington Wednesday to appear at the National Press Club dinner at which the President and his daughter, Margaret, will be guests of honor. They are the small-fry panelists on "Juvenile Jury," who don't faze easily. They'll put on the same kind of show they do weekly on WEAM-Mutual (Sundays, 7:30), answering from the well-springs of their innocence, any questions put to them.

LOYAL FANS OF SAM BROWN will be pleased to hear he'll start on WARL Monday. His "Music Hall" will be heard daily, including Saturday, from 9:30 to 11 a. m. and from 2:30 to 4 p. m. Sam has been basking in Florida during the four months since he left WINX. It's not likely he's been forgotten; he managed to get voted Washington's outstanding disc jockey in Radio Best's 1948 poll, when WINX was only a 250 watter. So he must have fans.

A YOUNG PIANIST who won the fourth quarter-finals at Charleston, S. C., last Sunday, has been added as fifth and final contestant in the $5000 grand finals of the Horace Heidt Youth Opportunity Program at Uline Arena tonight.

Arthur Olsen, 17-year-old, 6-foot, 200-pound pianist from Minneapolis, Minn., started playing piano at the age of 4. Tonight he will be competing against: Jesse Owens, 18-year-old Negro baritone from Akron, Ohio, who went from shining shoes to winning the first quarter-finals of the Nationwide talent search this year; a former usher in a Hollywood radio studio, Brad Gordon, 27, of Los Angeles, who is another baritone; Lee Jenner and Rudy Varju, 23-year-old teamsters from Chicago, who formed a harmonica duo, and Hungarian-born Sari Barabas, who sings.

This marks the third consecutive year that the grand finals of the Heidt show have been held in Washington.

Sponsored this year by Bolling Air Force Base to provide funds for servicemen's welfare, Heidt, his band and 60 entertainers will stage a two-and-one-half-hour vaudeville-style revue starting at 7, before the coast-to-coast broadcast of the finals at 9:30.

MBS Nails Down East-West Game

In renewing its broadcast agreement with the annual East-West football game at San Francisco, now scheduled for the last Saturday of the year instead of New Year's, MBS got both the radio and television rights for three more years. The telecasts are to be carried by a three-station west coast network comprising KGO-TV at San Francisco, KTSL at Los Angeles and KEMB-TV at San Diego.

NBC-TV will carry Walt Disney's first video show, an hour's production for Christmas afternoon under sponsor auspices.

Not Openly, That Is

The Interests Won't Fight Education

By John Crosby

THE PATTERN of opposition to the proposal that 20 percent of the remaining television frequencies be allotted to educational institutions is now fairly well established. These enormously valuable frequencies are coveted by commercial interests which are too sensitive to public opinion to oppose education openly. Instead, they are trying to smooth the educators by embracing them with open arms.

CROSBY

Says Broadcasting magazine, which is supported by and consistently supports commercial broadcasting: "Education has always found it could achieve maximum audience and optimum results by using the allotted sustaining time of established commercial stations and networks—which have the audiences, the know-how and the wherewithal. The past record speaks for itself."

What Broadcasting means, I ought to explain, is that the educators would be better off bringing their educational programs to NBC or CBS, which are in the business of making money, rather than owning and operating their own stations. This is utter malarkey. The past record of radio certainly speaks for itself, but not in a way that the educator can derive any comfort from, or the commercial broadcaster take any pride in.

IN 1934 AND 1935, another allocations battle was fought over granting radio frequencies to educators. Pretty much at the instigation of the National Association of Broadcasters, a Federal Radio Education Committee was set up to "study" the question. The committee studied and studied and studied until the frequencies were all happily handed out to commercial interests—and that disposed of that problem and also of the educators. At the current hearings, Harold McCarthy, director of Wisconsin's educational outlet, WHA, in Madison, wryly summed up the work of the committee: "It was early recognized that the committee was probably one of those devices so neatly set up for the purpose of gaining time."

Said FCC Commissioner Frieda B. Hennock, who is leading the fight for the allocation of TV frequencies to educators: "Instead of getting radio frequencies, you got a committee."

That is exactly what is being proposed in the current case. On "Town Meeting of the Air," Dr. Ernest Diehter, advertising consultant for radio and TV sponsors, suggested that advertisers and educators form an "over-all organization to exert moral control" and "improve those TV programs already reaching the public." In other words, set up another committee which would be controlled, hoodwinked and eventually abandoned (when the public outcry died down) by the advertisers.

E. Lee Moves But Not Really

ELINOR LEE is moving and staying home at the same time. She's switching days for her TV show on WTOP-TV, but the name stays "At Home With Elinor Lee," and the set for the show continues to be a replica of Elinor's own home in Falls Church. Her informal half-hour show, which involves cooking and household hints, famous guests, children, puppies, turtles and what-have-you, will now be seen Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 4:30.

ACADEMY AWARD WINNER Mercedes McCambridge plays in "The Lovely Menace" at 8 on WTOP-TV with Walter Abel co-starring.

"HIT THE DECK," a musical about a sailor named Bilge Smith, will go its salty way at 9:30 on WNBW with John Beal as Bilge and Iva Withers as Looloo Martin.

Elinor Lee and her helpmeet, Lloyd Dennis, can cook just as well one day as another so everything's under control in the move they make this week to a Monday - Wednesday - Friday schedule on WTOP-TV at 4:30.

TV Antenna Is Bewitched

THE ALL TIME high in anachronistic designing may have come in a new type of antenna for TV. It makes like a weather vane, but is actually a full-fledged antenna. Atop is a metal witch, a strangely wonderful emblem for a TV antenna, what with TV being a mixed blessing in so many eyes.

And maybe the weather vane isn't so old-fashioned at that; it can probably double for a wind-sock for anybody who has a helicopter to play with.

THE TINY ITEMS in a newspaper are often meant only for "filler," to take care of gaps left by larger stories. But Jack Barry filled his pockets with one. It read, "There are 1,000,000 people living in the United States who are octogenarians." With that idea, Barry created his "Life Begins at 80" program.

Betty Crocker Comes to D. C.

THE "BETTY CROCKER" program will be seen on WTOP-TV starting today at 3:30 p.m. The show has been on the network Thursdays since early November with tips on food preparation. Some definite theme, the answer to a housewife's plea, is taken up each week with a brief explanatory dramatization of the problem preceding the solution.

DOROTHY SHAY, the Park ave. hillbilly, and the Nilsson twins make their second appearance in two weeks on the Alan Young show. Tonight (WTOP-TV, 9) Miss Shay will sing "Two-Gun Harry From Tucumcari," a little item she wrote after passing through Tucumcari, N. Mex.

THE TITLE of last week's "Big Town" show was "$30,000." It had been "$20,000," but somebody suggested that in these times that wasn't enough money to stir up a murderous situation, so the change was made.

U. S. Public Education System Not Democratic, Says Dr. Davis

By Elsie Carper

THE PROUD system of public education in the United States is democratic in neither content nor application, one of the Nation's foremost authorities in education last week told the Mid-century Conference on Children and Youth.

The speaker was Dr. Allison Davis, professor of education and member of the committee on human development at the University of Chicago.

He said that public schools are overlooking and wasting half the ability of the youth population. He warned the conference that this Nation no longer can afford this waste.

He pointed out that the United States now urgently needs and increasingly in the future will require all the able people it can get to meet the spiraling manpower demands both for economic development and for defense.

THE CHILDREN with neglected talents belong to what he described as the "lower socio-economic group" — the low-income families.

Six out of every 10 children come from underprivileged homes and 7 out of every 10 in public school fall in this classification. The majority are native white children, but millions more are from Negro and other minority families.

The ability of these children is largely wasted because there is little meeting of minds between students and their teachers.

The curriculum largely is uninteresting for them. Standard intelligence tests that tend to measure, not their native abilities, but their culture or family background, banish them to classes with slow learners and into inferior schools.

While a majority of students come from low-income families, 95 out of every 100 teachers are from middle-class economic groups.

THE TEACHERS are "trying earnestly to change the culture, the basic ways of life of more than half of the children in America, Dr. Davis said, "yet our teachers do not understand the interests, goals and culture of these masses of children, whom they wish to stimulate to learn."

"The slum child, whose own parents curse as a routine method of communication, fight, and consider the school unimportant in their future, lives in a physical, economic and cultural reality basically unlike that in which the middle-class child is trained.

"Behavior which middle-class teachers, clinicians and psychiatrists often regard as delinquent or hostile in slum children is usually a perfectly realistic, adaptive and, in slum life, socially acceptable response to reality."

DR. DAVIS said that teachers are "chronically worried" and suffer "a deep sense of failure" because of "honest but ineffective efforts" to help children from the low economic levels learn the "school's culture."

Our teachers also "face the extremely difficult task of trying to help children learn an unrealistic and extremely uninteresting curriculum," he said.

The combination of trying to teach "lifeless, rote-learned materials" to children from an income group, whose habits and cultures the teacher does not understand, degenerates the teaching process into a "50-percent waste of the children's abilities and the teacher's efforts."

Dr. Davis said that present "standard intelligence tests" are slanted for children from "urban middle-class culture."

Results of the tests show, for example, that in the 14-year age group children from poor families have an intelligence quotient of from 20 to 23 points lower than children from better income families. The tests also show rural children are less intelligent than urban children.

DR. DAVIS FOUND, though, that when test questions are restated so that all children can understand them, children from poor families do as well as children from higher income groups.

Yet, Dr. Davis said, "on the basis of these culturally biased I.Q.s, pupils are separated into so-called 'fast' and 'slow' groups in most systems.

"Moreover, school systems have attached so much importance to those culturally biased tests that they have usually provided poorer buildings and equipment, and higher teacher-loads for those school," located in lower income neighborhoods, because "pupils there are supposed to be inferior in mental ability."

"What could one logically expect," Dr. Davis asked, "except that these children would have low achievement?"

Duke Finds Jobs for 409 Grads

DURHAM, N. C. — College graduates this year can look forward to securing good positions without too much difficulty —if they have the proper qualifications and are willing to work for it, Miss Fannie Y. Mitchell, director of the Duke University appointments office said today.

According to Miss Mitchell, jobs are not as plentiful as they were in the immediate postwar period and prospective employers are scrutinizing with more care academic records, extracurricular activities, friendliness, and personality in that order when sizing up graduates for a job. The days of the new graduate taking his pick of a dozen jobs are gone, Miss Mitchell emphasized.

DUKE appointments office figures show that the greatest demand is still for salesmen and engineers with accounting and insurance work trailing farther behind. Demand for teachers is good, with the Duke office being unable to fill all the calls from schools, colleges and universities.

Last year Miss Mitchell and her staff helped 409 Duke students and alumni to find jobs. Of these 129 were teaching positions in schools and colleges and 282 were in commercial fields, ranging from accounting to zoology.

"We don't 'get' our graduates jobs," states Miss Mitchell in explaining the function of her bureau, "our mission is merely to bring the employer and job-seeker together and let them make up their own minds."

During the past year 111 companies from all over the country sent personnel representatives to the campus for more than 2500 interviews with Duke students and alumni. In addition the appointments office maintains contact with nearly 4000 companies which frequently write seeking graduates to fill specific positions.

STUDENTS and alumni registration in the appointments office last year totaled over 725, with the office rendering job assistance in almost 60 percent of the registrants.

Canada Asks Artists for Stamp Designs

By William M. Stuart

IN ORDER to secure greater publicity for Canada and its postage stamps the Postmaster General of Canada has decided to invite Canadian artists to submit designs hoping to produce future stamps on a higher plane. For some time Canadian officials have been dissatisfied with current postage stamps. There should be more Canadian art expressed in the Dominion's postal issues. A committee has been named to supervise the contemplated change, the department offering $300 for each design selected.

STUART

Artists are not restricted to the number of designs, which must be submitted to the director of the National Gallery of Canada. Rules must be strictly followed. Sponsors of this plan have for its objective the sole idea that stamps of the Dominion should be more representative of Canadian resources.

THE TWO plate numbers used for the 3-cent legislative National Capital Sesquicentennial stamp released November 22 are 24 284 and 24 285.

The annual Christmas party of the Pentagon Philatelic Society will be held Thursday evening, December 21, at 6 o'clock in Room 30930.

Switzerland has issued its 1950 Pro Juventute issue. It consists of five stamps. Four are multicolored and illustrate three different type butterflies and a bee. The 5-c plus 5 brown gray portrays Theophil Sprecher von Bernegg, chief of staff during World War I.

The Capital Precancel Club will meet tomorrow evening at the home of Rolston Lyon, 217 Rittenhouse st. nw., at 8 o'clock. Secretary C. C. Fisher has prepared a program.

BERTIL A. RENBORG who has been appointed head of the postal administration of the United Nations, spoke Tuesday at the Collectors' Club, Branch 5, S. P. A. Renborg said the details of the plan for issuance of stamps have not been completely worked out. Soon the exact number of stamps to be issued and the denominations will be announced. The stamps will be used for propaganda purposes and must be purchased from the postoffice in the United Nations headquarters. Details as to the complete usage of the stamps and postoffice, as well as the stamps for collectors, will be worked out later. The stamps are not yet ready for distribution and when the complete code of rules is established it is expected that the series of United Nations stamps will be a popular issue.

Next meeting of the club, Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

In connection with a notice which has appeared in the philatelic press, the Crown Agents in Washington announce that the booklet entitled "British Colonial Stamps in Current Use, September, 1949," may be purchased from the British Information Services, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y.

A LONDON stamp dealer last year tried to leave England with a suitcase full of undeclared sheets of Silver Weddings and other obsolete George VI stamps. The catalogue value was $70,000. British customs agents confiscated the sheets and Harmer, Rooke & Co. has been selected to sell the consignment at auction in New York on December 6.

A new stamp has been issued from the Western zone of Germany. It is a 20-pfenning, red-brown stamp and honors the European Recovery Program, ERP. A symbolic figure holding an outline of a huge world globe appears as the central design.

To commemmorate the tenth anniversary of the Baltic countries of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania being incorporated into Soviet Russia, a series of three sets of stamps, one for each of the Baltic states, has been issued by Russia.

Paraguay has issued a set of five stamps, air mail, honoring the late President Roosevelt. Each stamp has the same design but in a different color, and the denomination are from 20 centimos to 5 guaranis. In the center of the stamp is a vignette portrait of the late president flanked by the United States and Paraguayan flags.

'Let's Get Away From It All'

Girls lying in the snow? Seems silly, doesn't it? Folks do say, however, that the charm of Sun Valley so takes people in thrall that they're likely to do some of the darnedest things

The lady above is, of course, Virginia Mayo, the actress, posing as a happy vacationist at, say, Miami Beach, Phoenix, Ariz.; Santa Monica, Calif., or—well, we put her in the paper. You place her wherever you want to. And the lady at left, surf fishing in the surf at Miami, seems to have snagged Miss Mayo, which would be nice snagging

Whistle Stopping

Sometimes Travel Can Be Confining

By Orval Hopkins

WINTER TRAVEL is all very well, I'm sure (my winter traveling of late has been confined to the Virginia bus line I willy-nilly patronize — chance for a joke there, but I will pass it up — and to sojourns in Florida and Hawaii bought by the taxpayers), but putting one of these sections together is getting to be the second most heartbreaking thing I do. The first most heartbreaking is getting up in the morning.

After all, we got people here who have been around. Traveled types. When it comes winter-travel-section time, I badger them and whine around, just making a horrible pest of myself, trying to get pieces for the paper.

Miss Skillet, the food editor, says sorry but she's about nose deep in a yam souffle. Miss Gadsir, the society reporter, who recently went on a cruise, just giggles way down in her throat and says, "Oh, THAT cruise. Zowie!" Miss Magnolia, our lady from New Orleans, simply said, "Sorry, Bub, but the stuff I know about New Orleans is the kind of thing the city's trying to suppress, not publicize."

And so it goes. One or two of the people I approached kicked in graciously, but for the most part I have had to depend on press releases, and if dealing with press releases won't drive you to the booby bin I'll eat 'em all.

TAKE THIS ONE from Franklin Snow, who has the Howey-in-the-Hills, Fla., account. Howey-in-the-Hills is my favorite place name in Florida, but Snow starts off, "The annual fishing constant begins at the Floridan Country Club here when it opens on December 15, etc." I assume Snow means fishing "contest" but you can tell what we're up against here. Anyway, Hail, Howey-in-the-Hills!

PARIS next year will be marking its two-thousandth birthday anniversary. This will put the city roughly 1985 years up on Beltsville, Md. The celebration will open this New Year's Eve, when the capital will break out the carpet and the champagne to welcome the one-millionth air passenger to visit Paris.

CAN THEY can-can in Cannes, or some other effortless play on words gotten out of the way, we can report that the AAA reports that the French Riviera, traditionally a resort area catering to a luxury clientele, is making a bid to attract moderate income winter tourists from the United States. Thousands of rooms in modest hotels along the Riviera, AAA says, will be available for rates as low as $3 a day.

TRANSATLANTIC air travel fare reductions of nearly 40 percent for round-trip flights have been announced for 15-day tours by Trans World Airline. The tours will be available from January 1 to March 16.

IT'S THE 147TH year for the Bedford Springs Hotel in Bedford, Pa., and G. Bland Hoke, the OinC up there, writes to say that the hotel again will be open this winter. Faithful readers of this column (and I don't know of any) will recall that we spent some time at the Bedford Springs a couple of years ago. We had a wonderful time.

ELEVEN-DAY cruises to Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic on the Bull Line's ship Puerto Rico sail from New York every other Thursday. The cruise director is a graduate of Cornell's four-year hotel course, so if it's that Ivy League touch you're after, Bull's for you.

U. S. NO. 1 HIGHWAY, the oldest direct route from Canada to Florida, has been put in excellent condition as a result of the millions of dollars that have been spent in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia to improve the road bed, according to an outfit called U. S. No. 1 Highway Association, Inc. This is truly encouraging news and I congratulate the U. S. Highway No. 1 Association, Inc., and its secretary-treasurer, Lester Rose. I'm a little worried about that title, though. Topheavy, don't you think, Rose? Why not call your outfit something like Let's Drive. Or maybe just plain Let's.

HOT SPRINGS National Park, Arkansas, you may wish to know, became a health center and recreation spot by act of Congress in 1832. Its thermal pools were held sacred as neutral territory by the North American Indians for generations prior to DeSoto's arrival. In 1682 the area was included in territory claimed for France by LaSalle. . . . Edward Kerr of Miami Beach, speaking of his new motel which just opened, says, "This is one motel which needs no name. Our name is our address, namely, 86 and Harding."

For a Night in Casablanca, Get Aboard a Tramp Ship

By Julia N. Easley

SEEMS all the ads these days are discussing Mediterranean cruises with stops at the large ports of southern Europe and the Near or Middle East. And doesn't it sound fascinating to say you'll touch four continents—North America, Europe, Asia and Africa—in less than 60 days?

The only flaw to this plan is that one related port on Africa's Atlantic coastline is omitted, Casablanca. To touch there by sea, a cargo ship carrying limited passengers is what you want.

Having chosen just such a method of transportation to Europe a year ago I will vouch for its being a lovely stop-over touristwise.

OUR ship reached the port of Casablanca at 4 a. m., when most of the ship as well as the city was sleeping. But by 7:30 the sun was well on its way and our first impression was one of dazzling brightness. During breakfast the pilot and other necessary officials came out to meet us and escort us into the harbor so that by about 9 o'clock our passes had been issued and we were able to disembark.

One of the agents of the ship's line took us on our first quick tour, driving by the old Arab section or Ancienne Medina, near the pier, on to the Boulevard Franklin Roosevelt and the famed Anfa Hotel for a view from its third floor roofgarden of the entire city and the flat Moroccan shore.

As soon as I was in the city I realized that my first impression of barren lightness had been a false one for, though the air is very bright, many of the broad avenues are closely bordered by trees as in Washington, the difference lying in the fact that Casablanca's trees are largely palms. And throughout there are green parks, large and small. Even in the narrow byways of the Ancienne Medina an occasional tree is found.

The buildings range in color from white through yellow and almost orange to browner tones, each color enhanced by the sun, and in many of the government buildings beautiful mosaic work is to be found. In the architecture throughout there is a pleasing mixture of Eastern influences with Modern European; little that is a pure style.

ON further expeditions from ship to shore we viewed Casablanca from various angles, among them tables at sidewalk cafes or French night clubs, wandering at the Foire International, a 15-day exposition made very French by the man on the tall bicycle and shopping tours into the Ancienne and Nouvelle Medinas.

Casablanca as a whole or in part presents an interesting picture. Its inheritance from the races that make up its population is steeped in tradition, but it is also a very modern city; a growing business center full of construction and with, I was told, the world's largest man-made harbor.

Motor Trip Old Yule Custom

By Walter W. Hubbard
American Automobile Association

"TO GRANDMOTHER'S house we go," says a line in an old song, but in this case we aren't going to rely on the fact that "the horse knows the way, to carry the sleigh, o'er the white and drifted snow," because we are going by car. And Maryland and Pennsylvania do good jobs in keeping their highways cleared for motor vehicle traffic.

The trip mapped out by the A.A.A. takes us to one of the unusual cities in the United States when it comes to the celebration of Christmas—Bethlehem, Pa.—and it involves from 360 to 380 miles of over-the-road travel.

Exactly 159 years ago this month, Count von Zinzendorf and his daughter Benigna forded the turbulent waters of the river and rode on horseback into the missionary outpost at Bethlehem, Pa., where this leader of the Moravian Christians, exiled from Saxony because of his religious beliefs, was to aid in conducting the Yuletide services.

THE time was 1741, just 40 years after Penn's return to England and the Moravians and the Indians were assembling in the first house of Bethlehem, a log cabin shared by both man and beast.

"Nicht Jerusalem — sodern Bethlehem . . ." Not Jerusalem, lowly Bethlehem, they sang, and, when the carol service was completed, Count von Zinzendorf led the worshipers, by the dim light of flickering candles, to the end of the cabin where the animals were sheltered. From that time on, Bethlehem became the name of that community on the banks of the Lehigh River, and today it is known far and wide as America's Christmas City.

In its observance of the Christmas season, a 100-foot electric star is erected atop South Mountain. In stores, homes and churches another quaint Christmas custom visible to visitors is the use of the Christmas "putz," or Nativity scene. The "putz," as it is called in Allentown and Bethlehem, makes use of miniature figures of carved and painted wood representing the Christ Child, Mary, Joseph, the Shepherds and Wise Men, with cattle, sheep and other animals standing about. Great pains are taken in the arrangement and decoration of these homemade models, which may be simple or elaborate, and set up in any way the maker pleases—so long as it has for its central theme the story of the Nativity.

Such epicurean delights as fastnachts, "funny cake," shoo-fly pie, Bethlehem streussel, roast goose with applesauce, pear schmitz and knepp, and Moravian apple cake are among the many tasty dishes which, to this day, may be seen or sampled during a visit to this Christmas city.

THE start of our trip is the 37-mile run, over U. S. 1, to Baltimore, at which time we pass Santa Heim, a Christmas and toy-making town, where there's a circus for the youngsters, a zoo and many splendid reminders of the Yule season. After a visit to Santa Heim—especially if the young ones are with us—we continue northeast through Baltimore and then over U. S. 40 to Aberdeen, site of the ordnance proving grounds, which are so valuable to the Government at this time of "Christmas in Korea."

Then on to Havre de Grace and across the Susquehanna River, and an eastward drive to Elkton, Md. In Delaware we make use of U. S. 40 and U. S. 13, going through Wilmington, where, due to the influence of early Swedish settlers, Christmas is celebrated with great joy and excitement and the lights and store decorations reflect that spirit.

Sixteen miles northward, over U. S.

'Let's Wait and See'

Korea Crisis Has Effect on Travel Business

THE shape of things in Korea has had a definite effect on the travel industry in the last couple of weeks, people in the trade admitted when queried by The Washington Post this week.

"All I know is," the president of one travel agency said, "this place is like a morgue." Whether the lax tide of business was due directly to the Korean war and the turn of American fortune in it or to a "natural pre-Christmas slump," he was not prepared to say. He said business was distinctly slower this season than at a similar time last year.

The head of another Washington travel bureau said there was a clearly discernible "wait and see" attitude on winter travel, cruises in particular. "Business is a little slower than at this time last year," this official said, "even though we have much more to sell than we had in 1949. People—some people, anyway—who might wish to go on extended cruises, now are inclined to wait and see what's going to happen in the world situation. Of course, we've been through this before."

AMERICAN Express, on the other hand, is much more optmistic. "Trans-Atlantic airlines in both reservations and bookings are ahead of January and February of last year," the company reports. "Many airlines touching the leading European cities are booked into April. In the steamship category, few lines expect to make in 1951 the volume attained in 1950's Holy Year. However, observers believe that thousands who purposely avoided the Holy Year rush will cross the Atlantic this coming year."

In regard to the domestic picture, American Express reported about as follows:

Zone reports from early winter guests at southern resorts indicate that people have plenty of money to spend. As yet increased taxes have shown no effects. However, most officials believe that the dollar this winter will be treated with more respect, with less "throw away" spending. So far, spread-

AAA Sees No 'War Jitters'

"AMERICANS planning trips abroad by plane or transoceanic liner, for 10 days or 10 weeks, don't appear to have any 'war jitters' whatever," said William B. Salsgiver, manager, International Travel Department, American Automobile Association, this week.

Salsgiver, who has been abroad this year to check up on facilities to be made available to international travelers, said that the triple-A was planning to run 21 tours, by steamship and of varying length, this coming year.

Salsgiver said that Miss Dell Reilly and Lawrence C. Gayle had both recently returned from extended European check-up tours of half a dozen major countries and that his Washington staff would be able to "cope with the heavy demand we expect in the near future for overseas travel reservations. England, France, Switzerland, Belgium, the Netherlands, the Scandinavian countries and the sunny slopes of Italy still pack a powerful lure for travel-hungry Americans.

"There is endless variety to be had, for example, in the English Shakespeare country, the cathedrals and art galleries of Florence, the Isle of Marken in Amsterdam, the Black Forest near Baden Baden, Versailles and Malmaison in the suburbs of Paris, and in the French, Swiss, Italian or Austrian Alps. Europe has settled down to the extent that its transportation, hotel and culinary facilities are moderate and fair priced, and its restaurants and cafes are hitting a new high in tasty, appetizing foods."

Motor Trip to Bethlehem A Fine Christmas Custom

2, brings us to West Chester, locale of a comfortable but old hostelry known as the Mansion House. Stop long enough for a meal, and for the children to see the tropical birds and live monkeys which are kept there.

NINETEEN miles to the northeast lies Norristown, gateway to the historic Valley Forge Park. If there's snow on the ground, I dare you to motor in to see the cabins, parade ground and fortified embankments, blanketed deep in white. Try to visualize just how our Continental Army suffered there during the terrible, cold Christmas of 1776, when a holiday meal of moldy bread and thin soup made of horse bones would have been most welcome.

Now motor northeast for 11 miles to Montgomeryville, and then take your choice of the route through Quakertown, over U. S. 309, to Bethlehem, or the longer and picturesque drive drive through Doylestown and along the Delaware River to Easton; thence west to Bethlehem.

In spite of the fact that it is a great silk, steel, zinc and graphite manufacturing center, one thinks of Bethlehem at this time of the year as "the Christmas City." The Memorial House, to be seen there, is a replica of the first house in Bethlehem. On the grounds are buried Revolutionary War soldiers who died in the temporary hospital located there.

Lehigh University, which boasted of an undefeated football eleven this year, is located in Bethlehem, and their glee club is supplying much of the carol music heard in churches, on the radios and in the auditoriums during the festive holidays.

Our return trip mapped by the American Automobile Association takes us through Allentown, Kutztown, Reading—where we may see evidences of how the Pennsylvania Dutch celebrate Christmas—and Ephrata. Then on to Lancaster, where its nationally famed market tables will be groaning under the weight of seasonable "goodies," and south through Buck over State 72.

In Maryland, we cross the Susquehanna River over the great Conowingo hydroelectric power dam, one of the most famous east of the Mississippi, and drive on to Bel Air. Then over Maryland 147 to Baltimore. Here we pick up U. S. 1 and motor through Santa Heim and Laurel, back to the District of Columbia.

Drive carefully and courteously—make it a real Merry Christmas!

Diamonds 'Dug' at Hot Springs

Within less than an hour's travel from downtown Hot Springs National Park, Arkansas, vacationists can dig for Hot Springs diamonds around Crystal Mountain on U. S. Highway 270 west of the spa, or look for precious stones in Hagnet Cove valley area on U. S. Highway 270 east of the resort.

If these pastimes prove too strenuous there's good year round fishing in Lakes Catherine and Hamilton, where landings with anglers' equipment can be reached in less than 15 minutes from the park.

The popular pastime at the Arkansas spa is relaxing in one of its soothing natural hot-water baths.

Glove Drawer Can Be a Useful Item

By Carol Lane

THE GLOVE compartment of your car is like a woman's purse. It usually needs to be cleaned out. Now's a good time to remove those bottles of sunburn lotion that you used this summer and get ready for winter. Here's what your glove compartment should contain for cold-weather driving:

(1) Bottle of hand lotion for chapped hands.

(2) Pair of woollined leather driving gloves which can be used by the whole family, and a pair of outside gloves for brushing off snow, putting on chains, etc.

(3) Plastic ice scraper and a small shaker, filled with salt, to loosen ice on the windshield. (Cover the top of the shaker with tape to prevent salt leaking.)

(4) Sun glasses for driving in snow.

(5) Small flashlight and whisk broom, ear muffs, pocket size pack of tissues, and state and regional maps.

Don't let your glove compartment become a "catch-all." Only put in the things you really need.

Miami Beach, Fla.—Florence Walker somewhat coyly models a bathing suit possessing, for reasons known but to itself, a bustle

Miami Paints Up, Brushes Up for Tourists

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 9.—Greater Miami is plying the hammer and slapping the paint brushes as the tourist industry here prepares for the winter season with hardly a pause after the spring-summer-fall season that broke all records.

Although the influx of Northerners won't hit full stride until mid-January, hotels closed during the summer are opening their doors and new hotels are receiving finishing touches before welcoming their first guests. At tourist courts and trailer camps, at the boarding houses fronting on Biscayne Bay and in ordinary houses with spare rooms, carpenters, plumbers and painters are making way for three months of plush business.

ALREADY Sportsman's Park, the first of three horse racing tracks that have consecutive 40-day seasons, is drawing crowds into grandstands and paddocks. At the jai alai fronton there is a bright new sign and indications that the mutuel machines will soon be in operation. Fairyland, an amusement park exclusively for children, has a new roller coaster. Everywhere there are sightseeing buses, rubberneck boats, charter motor cruisers spruced up with new paint and varnish.

Walter Sternberg of National Airlines reports that advance bookings on his company's club coach and luxury Star flights outpace last year by two to one. The record is impressive because his company has about double the amount of service scheduled this winter as last.

AS USUAL, Miami's greatest attraction is its unsurpassed weather. Almost as compelling to ice-weary northerners is the cotton soft comfort and service waiting for visitors. From the time a passenger treads the red carpet at the airport until he stretches out in the sun on a deck chair overloking a hotel pool, he can forget that bottle of aspirin in his office desk.

Even the smaller Miami Beach hotels look as if they were put together by a Hollywood scene designer, for during the winter days the sun is every visitor's business. At night the beaches own great white way—Collins ave.—turns on the lights. The city has as many kinds of diversions as Times Square and, in fact, leans heavily on New York's show business to supply entertainers.

Tampa Keeps to Moderate Side

TAMPA, Fla.—Accustomed to year-around patronage, Tampa's hotels, motels and motor courts set their rates on the moderate side with single rooms running from $3 to an average of $5 and doubles from $4 to an average of $7 and $8.

Apartments range upward from $50 for one-bedroom and $75 for two-bedroom accommodations. In addition, thousands of Tampans open their homes to the city's visitors. Food and other costs follow a proportionate line.

Tampa's winter program includes all kinds of spectator and participant sports, free weekly concerts, and is highlighted by a carnival season in February when the Florida State Fair opens its two-week stand and the city celebrates its famous Gasparilla Pirate Festival.

The Cigar Bowl football game, featuring two of the Nation's outstanding small college teams, will be played January 1. The Dixie Tennis Tournament, outstanding net event of the winter season, is scheduled for January 8-14 and the Women's Open Golf Tournament—which attracts the biggest names in the game—will be held January 18-21.

In the Pirate Festival, Ye Mystic Krewe of Gasparilla, reliving an episode in the life of the last of the buccaneers, invades and captures the city. Sailing their own full-rigged pirate ship, the Krewe will invade the city on February 5 and following its surrender by a not-too-reluctant populace, will stage their triumphal parade featuring 60 floats and 40 bands. A week-long program of fun and gaiety follows.

Florida Speedsters Resuming Service

ST. Augustine, Fla.—The fast fleet of modern streamliners, augmented by other trains, enters service to the Florida East Coast on December 14. Among these are such trains as the Pennsylvania's South Wind; the Chicago & Eastern Illinois' Dixie Flyer; the New York Central's Royal Palm; the Illinois Central's City of Miami and the Frisco's Kansas City-Florida Special.

These trains provide through coaches and Pullmans from virtually every city and town in the Midwest direct to the Florida East Coast as far as Miami. From Eastern points, the all-room-car Florida Special; the Champion, the Miamian and the Vacationer provide frequent service South.

New Hotel Opens In Santa Fe

HOTEL accommodations in the "Ancient City of the Holy Faith"—Santa Fe, N. Mex., have been much easier to obtain since December 4. Fred G. Gurley, president of the Santa Fe Railway Co., reported the new five-story addition to the La Fonda Hotel was opened on that date.

The new fireproof building, started in December, 1949, adds 70 extra rooms at the La Fonda, and the exterior design of the building is done in Spanish stucco, the same as the present hotel.

According to Gurley's announcement, the new addition will offer the modern in hotel accommodations, with comfortable sleeping rooms, all with bath, and will include a number of attractive suites with fireplaces and balconies.

Miami Beach Tennis

The winter tennis program for which plans are already under way in Miami Beach, includes the fourth annual Orange Bowl Junior championships and the third annual Good Neighbor championships, both of which will be played on the courts at city-operated Flamingo Park.

Skier off on a short crisp flight in the high ski areas of the world renowned Swiss Alps

Swiss Ski Resorts Looking For Record Winter Season

LUCERNE, Switzerland.—The winter resorts of central Switzerland, comprising the area round the Lake of Lucerne, are looking forward to a record season.

Martin Mengelt, manager of the official tourist office of central Switzerland, announced that preparations are being made in the famed snow-spas of Engelberg, Andermatt, Beckenried, Einsiedeln and others for the largest influx of foreign sportsmen in history.

Two ski races of international caliber will be held in Engelberg during the season, the Jochpass-Engelberg downhill race on January 21, and the traditional Spring Titlis Slalom, set for April 8.

The Jochpass-Engelberg course is 4.97 miles long, starting at the 7265-foot high Jochpass and leading down via Undertrubsee to the funicular station in Engelberg, a drop of 3934 feet. It was last held in 1949, when Eugen Hippenmeier of Zurich set a record of 7 minutes and 53 seconds for an average speed of 37.87 miles per hour.

Williamsburg to Hold Garden Symposium

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — A Williamsburg Garden Symposium, fifth in the series of annual events in restored colonial gardens, will be held here in February devoted to a practical approach to gardening problems, plantings and design trends, it has been announced.

The 1951 event will feature distinguished authorities in a number of related fields, discussion periods and clinics for individual problems, special entertainments and tours through the more than 60 acres of eighteenth century gardens here which will serve as a working laboratory for the sessions. The Symposium is a continuation of the events which in the past years have attracted amateur gardeners, horticulturists, and plant lovers from all parts of the Nation.

The program arranged for the February event has been compressed into three-day sessions. The two separate sessions, differing only in selection of speakers, are scheduled on February 19 to 21 and February 26 to 28 respectively.

'Hush Puppies' Had a Mission

HUSH puppies, the St. Petersburg dish which is older than St. Petersburg, first were made here by Spanish fishermen when this locality was known as Punta Pinel. Taking the water-ground corn meal left from coating the fish, the Spaniards mixed it with eggs, water and salt, and dropped it by bits off the end of hunting knives into the boiling fat in which their fish was frying. Bits of the hush puppies then were thrown to the yelping hunting dogs, eagerly sniffing the aroma of frying fish, to "hush their cries while the fishermen ate in peace."

Dude Ranches Set Up a Call

Word has arrived from Arizona and California that dude ranch accommodations are more available this winter season than at any time since the war.

It is still a good idea to make your reservations in advance so that you get the best choice. However, the two States say visitors this year will find accommodations "quite ample."

Rates at the various dude ranches vary as they do in hotels across the country, ranging upward from as low as $65 per week.

Information on dude ranches and trips to their locations can be obtained by writing the Santa Fe Passenger Department, Chicago, Ill.

The winter season for dude ranches in California and Arizona is on now. Arizona's season began in mid-November and continues to May 1.

Indian Mystery City

The ancient Indian City of Machu Picchu, high in the towering peaks of the Peruvian Andes, has mystified archaeologists since its discovery. The ancient buildings in the Sacred Valley of the Incas are made of huge rocks, polished with a jeweler's precision, and weight as much as 20 tons. How the Indians managed to get the rocks up the precipitous mountains without modern machinery is a puzzle equally as mystifying as the unknown method used by the ancient Egyptians in building the pyramids.

Charleston Gardens Have a Birthday

The 200th anniversary of the world-renowned terraces at Middleton Gardens in Charleston, S. C., is drawing international attention this year. The project was undertaken in 1741 under the supervision of Henry Middleton, president of the Continental Congress. His crew of 100 completed the Herculean task in 1750.

The other famous gardens in Charleston are also preparing for their busiest season—Magnolia and Cypress Gardens, as well as Middleton, being open from Thanksgiving to May.

Inquiries, reservations and the annual State-wide surveys show that popular southern resorts with popular priced accommodations will equal, if not surpass, the number of visitors during 1950 and promise to set new records for 1951.

MIAMI BEACH has rolled out the welcome mat for the throngs of winter guests already coming to the city. During the summer nine new hotels were added, making the total 370 with more than 26,000 rooms. On the Florida west coast the winter season at St. Petersburg starts in October and reaches its peak in February. A substantial tourist volume to exceed the number of vacationists of last season is already under way. The city is offering new tourist accommodations with a vast variety of entertainment attractions. California is announcing its largest number of December and January tourist events, including many notable annual festivals.

Among the California December events of national interest are the lighting and Christmas ceremonials held at the famous General Grant Tree, dedicated as the Nation's Christmas tree in Kings Canyon National Park. Grand Canyon National Park reports the biggest travel year in history with an 8 percent increase in visitors over last year. A total of 654,348 persons visited the Canyon in the travel year ending September 30.

Winter schedule goes into effect on the Atlantic Coast Line and on the Florida east coast line December 14. The present daily capacity of 1100 on trains from New York and Philadelphia will increase to 2200 as the four daily trains become six. On the Seaboard Airline Railroad winter service effective December 14 will total five trains a day from New York with the adding of one all-Pullman Orange Blossom Special. Sample train fares to Florida are: $35.71 one way coach to Miami; $65.81 round trip plus tax; Pullman fare is $50.53 one way, plus $12 for a lower berth. To St. Petersburg, coach is $32.64 one way and Pullman is $46.51. Increased schedules with corresponding prices for distances will apply to Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Cleveland. December 15 is step-up day for the airlines taking people to Florida. At that time Eastern Air Lines will increase its capacity by 37½ percent. Other lines touching points in Florida are adding planes and increasing their flights.

Bermuda Ready for Yuletide Festivities

HAMILTON, Bermuda: Traditional holiday customs and festivities should make Christmas and New Year's here memorable and exciting for visitors. Lighted Christmas trees and displays along the waterfront will give a holiday glow to the harbour and the City of Hamilton. Hotels and guest houses will be gaily decorated, with many having lighted trees at the entrance. Poinsettias, in full bloom, hedgerows of red and pink hibiscus and other brilliant flowers provide a festive air to the Islands in December.

The holiday season will open officially December 16 with a parade through the streets of Hamilton to herald the annual pre-Christmas visit of St. Nick, welcomed to Bermuda by His Worship the Mayor of Hamilton. A highlight of the ceremony will be throwing the switch for lighting the city in brilliant Christmas array. The occasion also marks the opening of a competition of holiday window display and store front decorations among the merchants of Hamilton.

ON CHRISTMAS EVE, carols will echo throughout the city and across Hamilton Harbour as visitors join Bermudians in their annual Christmas community sing under the huge Christmas tree erected on the waterfront at Albouy's Point. A concert of beautiful Christmas music will be rendered by church choirs from the Bermuda Cathedral which towers above the town.

Boxing Day, the day after Christmas, is a holiday in Bermuda and perpetuates the old English custom of giving gifts to retainers and servants. It marks the height of the holiday season, and is celebrated with the appearance of the Gombey Dancers.

Bermuda's Gombey Dancers—Highlight of Bermuda's holiday festival this month will be the appearance of the Gombey Dancers, native performers dressed in bright costumes. Traditional ceremony is held Boxing Day, the day after Christmas

Cruises Head For Nassau

NASSAU, Bahamas, — Five luxurious cruise ships will sail out of New York for Nassau this winter on a total of 23 cruises, Stafford L. Sands, chairman of the Bahamas Development Board, announces.

The Queen of Bermuda started off the winter season, with its first of six cruises sailing from New York. The Europa of the Arnold Bernstein line will make 11 cruises, continuing through March 30.

The Veendam of the Holland-America line will cruise the Nassau three times between December 22 and February 15. The Cunarder Mauretania is scheduled to make two cruises, January 18 and March 17, and the French Line's trans-Atlantic liner, Degrasse, will make a cruise to Nassau December 23.

The Turning Point

A lucky meeting was worth $100,000 plus

A COWBOY LEGEND he heard over a campfire, and a bearded stranger he met in a music store, changed Stan Jones from a $3,605-a-year forest ranger to one of Hollywod's top composers.

One night in 1948 Jones, on patrol in Death Valley, Cal., wrote the song that made him wealthy and famous. Jones, who had been trying to write songs all his life, remembered an old campfire ghost story. He had heard it as a boy near Douglas, Ariz.

After lighting his campfire for the night, he got out his guitar and a 5¢ notebook and jotted down the words and tune of a ballad he decided to call "Ghost Riders in the Sky."

Writing it was one thing. But selling it was harder. Remembering that a movie party on location in Death Valley had once liked some of his songs, he got leave of absence from the Forest Service and drove west to Hollywood.

The Bearded Stranger Helped

But Hollywood wasn't interested. After recording his song (at his own expense) he hawked it around to producers of westerns. There were no takers.

He was about to leave town when he went into a record shop to play it once more. A slight man with a beard heard it, liked it. Jones said, "Take it," and left town.

Months later, he was back. The little man was eden ahbez, Nature Boy, then at the height of his own songwriting fame. The man who spells his name without capital letters had shown Jones' song to ballad-singer Burl Ives.

And so it clicked to the tune of $100,000 royalties. Jones was assigned by producer John Ford to write songs for his western movie, "Wagonmaster."

Giving up his job, Jones sent for his family, but kept to his $3,605 budget. "I give myself four more years here," he says. "Then back to the woods."

Well done for Democracy!

Youngsters claim their Freedom awards

VALLEY FORGE, Pa.

TO THIS AMERICAN SHRINE on a misty day came a strange procession: an army such as Washington would never have dreamed about.

From all over America, a parade of schoolkids and teachers had come – 102 of them in all – and were marching solemnly into chapel to claim their "Freedoms Awards."

Once a year the Freedoms Foundation honors those U.S. schools which have done most to teach effectively the American way of life. This year 51 schools won prizes. In Meriden, Conn., for example, the kids of Israel Putnam School had built their own miniature hall of fame and peopled it with men and women who helped keep America free. This dramatization won an award for Meriden.

In Pontiac, Mich., the Senior High School had staged a series of radio shows dedicated to democracy. Other schools showed equal enterprise.

For Each School: a Library

NOW FROM THESE and other schools, kids had come, elected by their schoolmates, to claim the awards: library collections of books, films, and records on freedom.

Here they also heard a German boy (see photograph at left), who left Berlin on the day the great Freedom Bell rang out there, bring a message that German kids now know the real meaning of freedom!

On the trip home, each youngster also bore a prize plaque that would be proudly inspected by his classmates. To students and teachers alike it would symbolize a "well done!" for democracy.

PONTIAC (Mich.) Senior High School prize was claimed by Betty Wortman. Her teacher is Miss Vera Mae Adams.

JOHN TEETER represented winning Lincoln School, Dixon, Ill. Teacher with him is Miss Esther M. Barton.

COTTONWOOD (Calif.) Union Elementary School sent Shirley Smith. Teacher with her is Joseph Babiarz.

BY ROBERT GOLDMAN

EAST LANSING, Mich.

ONE NIGHT recently, bandleader Woody Herman wound up a stand at Michigan State College with "Sweet Sue." Then he looked out upon a sea of beautiful co-eds on the dance floor—and sighed.

"Talk about Sweet Sue," he said. "This school has the most beautiful girls in the country."

Herman, who has played hundreds of college dance dates, spoke from experience. So did Bill Gail, a top mid-west bandleader, who echoes Woody's sentiments. "They're really stunning!" says Gail.

With a few notable exceptions, it is probably the claim of every co-educational college alumnus that his school harbors the prettiest girls in the nation, and MSC men are no exception. They are as proud of their campus beauties as they are of their football team, which this season beat Notre Dame.

Even over in Ann Arbor, University of Michigan men—who long have regarded agricultural Michigan State as a "cow college"—reluctantly agree with Herman's point of view.

"MSC may be a cow college," they say, "but it's got more beautiful milk-maids than you'll find on 50,000 farms."

Everybody Likes It Here

Other opinions:

- A news photographer: "It ain't work to shoot pictures at Michigan State. I never had it so good!"
- A visiting professor: "I would venture to say that Michigan State is unexcelled in many fields—but particularly in beauty—beauty of the campus and of the women thereon."
- A Hollywood talent scout: "I've never seen a better-looking bunch of chicks."

As a matter of fact, the surplus of beauty at Michigan State has become a source of concern to its students. When 25 State co-eds all won beauty contests recently, the Student Council began to wonder if it were really "healthy" to have all this royalty on one campus. But "healthy" or not, it's nice.

Naturally Michigan State's wide claims don't go unchallenged. The University of California, for instance, believes its beauties are the fairest. Texans are proud of the long-legged scholars who beautify the scenery at the University of Texas. William & Mary, Louisiana State, Duke, Cornell and Ohio Wesleyan all have just claims.

Yet one MSC teacher summed up the story when asked if he didn't think he was underpaid.

"Perhaps," he replied wistfully. "But look at those co-eds. There, my friend, is something that makes my work worth a little less salary. How would you like to have such a wonderful clientele?"

GRANDMA MOSES at work: her methods are unorthodox but successful. She paints on panels, usually does several pictures at a time "to save paint." She has done about 1,000 oils.

Greetings ...from Grandma

SANTA CLAUS' best helper this year is a frail 90-year-old lady who lives in a white farmhouse in Eagle Bridge, N. Y. She is "Grandma Moses," America's most famous primitive artist. Christmas card reproductions of her quaint landscapes are immensely popular this year and "Grandma Moses plates and fabrics" are new gift items.

Grandma, who loves Christmas because it means a family reunion, can't understand the "fuss" about her work. But this month a movie about her and (in Paris) an exhibition sponsored by the American Embassy, were bringing Grandma fresh acclaim!

"The Village Store," and "The Mailman has Gone" are typical greeting card subjects.*

• Blood clots are responsible for thousands of deaths every year. Read about medicine's newest weapon that promises to cut this needless toll. Doctors are calling it their . . .

"Miracle Test!"

BY LAWRENCE GALTON

A NEW DEVELOPMENT in medicine promises to help your doctor save your life, or keep you from becoming an invalid, should something go wrong in your blood.

And that "something"—thrombotic disease—has been a growing problem.

A thrombus is a blood clot—a kind of floating rust that may form anywhere in the blood stream. Every year 200,000 Americans die of coronary thrombosis, when the clot lodges in a coronary artery and chokes off blood supply to the heart. Lung clots kill 35,000 more a year; brain clots take another 40,000. The "milk leg" of pregnancy is a clot condition which, even if overcome, may return years later and lead to dangerous complications.

Clots cause about 5% of all deaths after surgery. They may form after any injury. When they don't kill, they can cause invalidism, even paralysis.

THIS is how a thrombosis, or blood clot (in red, above) lodges in arteries, cuts the circulation.

Now, the new development promises not only to check this toll once clots form, but even help prevent formation in the first place! It's no drug; instead, it's a simple, long-needed test.

Actually, a great potential advance against clot conditions occurred a dozen years ago. Two drugs, heparin and Dicumarol, were found to combat the tendency of the blood to clot.

And in the great hospitals and clinics, under ideal conditions, medical experts have used them to cut coronary thrombosis fatalities in half, reduce death from blood clots after surgery and childbirth virtually to zero.

But a great obstacle has checkmated widespread use: the drugs must be given with extreme care! Too little does no good; too much may produce hemorrhage. And, to complicate the problem, their action varies from individual to individual and even in the same person from day to day.

Old Method Was Limited

FOR SAFETY, tests must be made to see what's going on in the blood. For heparin, three to four injections daily are needed. These must be given by specially-trained personnel, cost from $30 to $50 a day.

Dicumarol, much lower in price, has the advantage that it can be taken orally. But this requires another kind of complex test—one for "prothrombin time" which shows what tendency the blood has to clot or to hemorrhage. Needed daily or almost daily, this test—which uses a mixture of tissue materials called thromboplastin—costs up to $10. But, to make the test, technicians have had to go through eight time-consuming steps.

Fewer than half the nation's hospitals have had facilities and personnel for making these tests. And so thousands of patients have had to be denied anticoagulant therapy.

Moreover, even in hospitals where tests can be made, there has been an uncomfortably large margin for error.

Today, however, a new thromboplastin preparation, aptly named Simplastin, simplifies the whole test procedure. Instead of eight complex steps, it needs only the addition of water. Instead of 45 minutes, the test now takes 15 minutes.

Tests with Simplastin can be made at a cost of about $2 and doctors, nurses or assistants can be trained to make them. There is little possibility of error. The new preparation was developed from suggestions made by Dr. Shepard Shapiro of New York University.

The development is a technological triumph. But more important to you is the new kind of care it makes possible.

MOTHERS' risks at childbirth will be materially reduced through use of new test which reveals blood's tendency to clot, hemorrhage.

In an Eastern hospital today lies a very sick woman who, 20 years ago in childbirth, had "milk leg," then recovered. But in a recent accident, she suffered a leg injury. Result: a recurrence of the leg clot. Soon thereafter occurred the dreaded complication: a clot in the lung.

Now, It Can Be Prevented

IF ANTICOAGULANT therapy could have been given safely right after the leg injury, the chances are great that no complication would have developed. Because she did not have this cure, the woman today lies desperately ill. The new test helps assure that there'll be few such cases in the future!

The test will detect patients who, after surgery, childbirth, accidents and injuries, are prone to develop clots, permitting treatment before a clot can form!

It will help fight hemorrhage as well by showing up any such tendency that a patient might have, allowing a surgeon to take precautions to prevent it.

The development marks a medical milestone – not only a therapeutic but a preventive one. Wherever you are, the hazards of accidents, childbirth, surgery, coronary thrombosis and many other troubles have been materially reduced.

KISSING LESSON

Japanese star learns old American custom

BECAUSE KISSING was tabu in pre-war Japan, film star Shirley Yamaguchi remained innocent of this delightful custom until 1945. Then American films arrived—and Japanese habits changed. Today, Japanese movie fans want kissing. So Shirley sailed for the U.S., took these lessons from actor Dane Clark. She's an expert now!

REGAINING COMPOSURE, Dane demonstrates U.S. technique. Her lesson lasted 45 minutes.

Under expert eye of film director, Shirley Yamaguchi gets kissing lesson from Dane Clark. She caught on quickly.

CABBAGE cooked with a new taste? If you think it's impossible, try these Cabbage Rolls. Their secret is chili sauce flavoring. You're sure to find them more exciting than the old, familiar cabbage-tomato recipes!

CABBAGE ROLLS

1 head cabbage
1 lb. round steak, ground
2 green peppers, chopped fine
2 medium onions, chopped fine
2 tablespoons fat
⅓ cup chili sauce
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 can beef gravy

Core cabbage; cook 7 minutes in boiling salted water to cover. Drain; cool; remove 12 large leaves.* Meanwhile cook ground meat, green peppers and onions in fat until meat is browned; add chili sauce, soy sauce, salt and pepper; mix well. Place equal amount meat mixture on each cabbage leaf; roll up; secure with toothpicks; place in large saucepan; add 1 cup water; cover; simmer about 1 hour; drain. Heat gravy; pour over rolls. Yield: 6 servings.

*Serve remaining cabbage at a later meal, chopped and creamed or served in a cheese sauce.

You've probably thought of one good reason why Cabbage Rolls are especially apt for your pre-holiday menus. They're thrifty! One pound of ground meat feeds six!

VISHINSKY'S GRIN ... it changes fast!

Nearest thing to a Vishinsky belly laugh is deep-down chuckle during intermission.

PLANNING SPEECH, he talks to Jacob Malik. Earphones carry translations.

DURING one Vishinsky harangue, Britain's delegate anxiously tore up scrap of paper.

IN LOBBIES, Russian delegate pauses with colleagues. This year, newsmen can approach him.

AT DESK, Vishinsky pores over U.S. paper. Sometimes he reads the capitalist advertising!

This is the smile that has troubled millions of Americans watching the United Nations

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y.

AT THE U.N. THIS FALL, they were beginning to wonder whether Russia's Andrei Vishinsky ever went to an American kindergarten.

It seemed unlikely. But from his behavior here after he arrived in September, anyone would think he was brought up on the old American nursery favorite:

"We're all in our places
With sunshiny faces . . ."

For the face of Andrei Vishinsky, generally frowning as befits the most foreboding public prosecutor in the world, had been strangely garlanded with smiles ever since he stepped off the Queen Elizabeth on a brisk fall morning.

What Did It Mean?

Delegates couldn't remember when Vishinsky had been so jovial. What's more, the normally frigid Soviet delegation had thawed amazingly.

Russians who had never dared look at Western U.N. officials, diplomats or correspondents suddenly showered them with invitations to dinner or cocktails.

Why the change? Said one diplomat: "Vishinsky was sent to the U.N. to search for the well-kicked pants lost by the Kremlin on the Korean issue last July."

The last time he was here, he fled reporters. This fall, when they saw him in U.N. lobbies, they walked right up and Mr. Vishinsky didn't run. Sometimes, he even cracked a mild joke. (When newsmen asked him whether he gets discouraged by defeats in the U.N., he said: "A good soldier always expects victory.")

Reads Capitalistic Ads!

Even his attitude toward the ladies had changed. Last year, he was charming, but only in a perfunctory way. This year, he tarried to make small talk.

As a sideline, Vishinsky also seemed to take a remarkable interest in American automobiles. Soon after he arrived, he turned in his four-year old Cadillac limousine for a brand new model.

A few days later, photographers caught Vishinsky at his desk poring over a strictly capitalistic advertisement for a new American four-cylinder car. What, asked western aides, would Stalin say?

EVEN Communists nod occasionally. Byelorussia's Kissulev snoozes while Vishinsky talks.

VISHINSKY's gestures at times resemble those Hitler used during his famed tirades.

SMITH BROTHERS BLACK COUGH DROPS

BY PETER DRYDEN

Parade of Progress

A regular survey of new ideas and inventions, now or soon available, for home, office, hobby

A NEW PLASTIC FLOOR GLOSS that dries in an hour gives brilliance and protection to wood, linoleum and rubber tile surfaces. It does not peel or scuff, resists alcohol and water, and has a non-slipping formula.

FOR YOUR AUTOMOBILE BATTERY, a new chemical is said to combat the "sulphation" that causes 70% of all failures, permitting faster recharges, doubling life expectancy.

A PINLESS CLOTHESLINE operates on entirely new principle. It consists of two strands of alloy steel wire twisted to form the line, and a zipper which moves along line, separating the wires at points at which clothes are to be inserted. Wire is rust-proofed, has high tensile strength so it will not stretch or sag. Comes with turnbuckle, screw hooks for ready installation.

SCISSORETTE is 3-in-1 combination of scissors, nail file, cigar cutter in compact unit designed for pocket or purse.

EAR CAPS now are handy to carry, handy to wear. Unique design eliminates metal bands. Light, flat, they fit purse and pocket, need only to be placed over ears, pressed, and they stay on. In colors.

LATEST COASTERS for home use glow in the dark so they're convenient for TV parties, or for bedside or sickroom tables. Coasters are of plastic and luminous paint goes all the way through so it cannot wear off.

A PAINLESS ADHESIVE TAPE REMOVER is handy addition to the family medicine chest. It works on single-layer or multi-layer tapings, releasing surface tension between skin and tape. Tape's underside is made slick, ripping-off pain is avoided, and no black, gummy residue is left on the skin.

BULL SESSION

WITH HOLLYWOOD going all out for bull-fighting – in pictures, that is – the problem now is to teach actors how to steal a scene from a bull without getting mussed.

Actors who recently got hot tips on the art are those in Republic's "Death in the Sands." Their teacher: Budd Boetticher, the film's writer-director (see photos), himself a torero who fought 28 bulls in Mexican rings.

BILL — DID I SEE YOU FLIPPING A COIN ?
YES, POP!
THAT, MY BOY IS THE COWARD'S WAY OF MAKING A DECISION! STAND ON YOUR OWN TWO FEET, FACE THE FACTS AND WEIGH THE COMPONENT PARTS OF YOUR COMPLEX PROBLEM
BE A MAN... DON'T RELY ON THE TOSS OF A COIN TO DO YOUR THINKING FOR YOU! DECIDE THINGS UPON THEIR MERITS!
NOW, YOUNG MAN, SUPPOSE YOU TELL ME WHAT IT WAS YOU WERE DECIDING IN SUCH SLIP SHOD FASHION AND WE'LL TRY TO FIGURE OUT A SENSIBLE, LOGICAL SOLUTION!
JEEPERS, POP, I'M IN A PLAY AT SCHOOL AND I NEED A NEW SPORTS JACKET FOR THE PART!
DEC. 10, 1950
OR TO SPEND MY MONEY FOR CHRISTMAS AND HAVE YOU BUY THE JACKET!

MARK TRAIL
by ED DODD 12-10
ON THE SOUTH AMERICAN PAMPAS, A RHEA BUSIES HIMSELF WITH NEST MAKING....
SOON A FEMALE LAYS HER EGGS IN THE NEST, AND HE IS FILLED WITH FATHERLY PRIDE
SUDDENLY A SECOND HEN APPEARS AND ADDS MORE EGGS ...THEN ANOTHER AND ANOTHER UNTIL THE NEST IS BURSTING WITH EGGS!
AND POPPA RHEA IS BURSTING WITH PRIDE!
BUT THE LADIES DEPART, LEAVING THE OLD MAN TO KEEP HOUSE...
AND AFTER A FEW DAYS OF SETTING, HIS PRIDE GIVES WAY TO ENVY...
AS HE WATCHES THE CARE-FREE WANDERINGS OF HIS BACHELOR PALS!
TRAIL WAYS
ACROSS THE VAST PAMPAS OF SOUTH AMERICA THE BOOMING VOICE OF THE RHEA CALLS HIS FLOCK TOGETHER
THE MALE RHEA INCUBATES THE EGGS AND GUARDS THE YOUNG AGAINST ANY FOE, NO MATTER HOW LARGE OR FEROCIOUS...
IN THE RAINY SEASON HE REMAINS ON THE NEST SEVERAL DAYS AT A TIME TO KEEP THE EGGS WARM
